CONFESSES 55 SAFEBLOWINGS FOR $300,000

13 Held, 3 Sought as Members of Gang.

Walter French, "brains" of the $300,000 safeblowers' gang, confessed yesterday, revealing one of the most perfect criminal organizations in Chicago's history.

Thirteen members of the band, including a woman, are in custody; three others, also including a woman, are at large.

French's statement laid bare more than thirty-five safe robberies, committed outside of Chicago in Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois, and a score here. The loot, in six months of intensive operations, may run over the $300,000 estimate.

Plans Carefully Mapped.

Maps, showing in detail the territory rural and urban, over which the band operated, were in the possession of the gang, which was preceded in its [illegible] by experts, usually the women, who charted the interiors of the banks and business houses where vaults were to be rifled.

So numerous were the robberies that many of the details eluded French's memory; he could not recall even the name of the town in Indiana where he encountered a watchman and was shot

Those In Custody.

Those of the band in custody are:

Steve Jordan, alias Frank, associate of "Big Joe" Moran, one of the most expert safecrackers known to the police; returned to Joliet penitentiary as violator of his parole.

Joseph La Boone, also an expert yeggman, and, with Jordan, the band's principal operator. He resided with French and Jordan at 4100 Park avenue before the latter was jailed at Watseka, Ill., as a suspect in a $50,000 Liberty bond robbery.

George Moore, tenant of an apartment at 2456 Prairie avenue raided by the police Wednesday evening; returned to Pontiac reformatory as a parole violator.

Timothy ("Buck") Dwyer, arrested in the same raid.

Thomas King.

Larry King, his brother.

Robert Shealey, a night watchman, who assisted in the robberies, it is charged.

Arthur Knitzer, employé of the Nei[illegible] Furniture company, 1417 Milwaukee avenue, also an alleged "advance agent."

James Nitches, alias Nolan, who has spent more than twenty-four years in the Joliet penitentiary; his last parole, to the Rock Island arsenal, Feb. 20, 1919, was broken.

William Saunders, a colored man, who has spent more than eighteen years in the penitentiary since 1890, and who was discharged April 3, 1919, after serving an industrial parole at the arsenal.

Walter Fett of 1626 West Twenty-[illegible] street, paroled to the arsenal in August, 1918, and discharged Feb. 22.

Confession Brings Arrests.

The last three were arrested yesterday at Sixteenth and Peoria streets as the result of French's confession. When Detectives Wragen, Cleary, [illegible], and Smith of the Maxwell street police station seized them, Saunders carried two sticks of dynamite.

The trio are believed to have been preparing to rob either the J. J. Badenoch Grain company or the National Lead company, whose plants are located near by.

The woman member of the gang in custody is Mrs. Bessie Jordan, wife of Steve. She is said to have made the bank charts, assisted by a woman known as "the big blonde," who is being sought.

$104,000 "Job" Cited.

Among the crimes planned is th robbery of the Middletown State bank at Middletown, Ill., which the gang rifled Jan. 7 of $104,000 in Liberty bonds. Mrs. Jordan was seized in the Prairie avenue raid. Taken at the same time were Rose Kirch, 15, and Alice Kirch, her sister, of 2132 North Crawford avenue, sisters-in-law of French. With Margaret and Bessie Jordan, daughters of Steve, they are held at the Juvenile detention home.

A statement, signed by Rose Kirch, mentions three men as among those who were to participate in the loot of the Middletown robbery.

Their names were heard by her in a

STATE TAX BOARD MAN "SQUAWKS" TO PROSECUTOR

Sensations Promised in Springfield Inquiry.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Springfield, Ill., May 17.—[Special.]—One of the members of the state board of equalization has "squawked." He has told to C. F. Mortimer an inside story of how business has been conducted recently on the inside of the organization that establishes the taxes of the railroads and the public service corporations in Illinois.

Mr. Mortimer is the state's attorney of Sangamon county, and is the counsel in chief for the joint committee of the Illinois legislature that is about to begin the investigation of the equalization board.

At Lowden's Demand.

The investigation was started at the demand of Gov. Lowden, following charges made by William H. Malone of Park Ridge, chairman of the state board.

These charges, by inference, suggested that Omar H. Wright, director of finance in Gov. Lowden's cabinet, had told certain members of the state board that Gov. Lowden and the state administration would put through the tax reform bill that abolishes the elective state board of equalization of twenty-five members, one from each congressional district, unless the valuation of the Pullman company were kept within some unnamed figure.

Special Message Written.

Gov. Lowden's answer to these suggestions, made in public hearing before the legislature, was a special message demanding instant and rigid investigation not only of the charges made by Chairman Malone but of the methods and the record of the state board.

The general assembly immediately passed a joint resolution directing a joint committee to get busy. The resolution of authority permits the committee to go as far as it likes.

The committee retained Mr. Mortimer as its counsel in chief. Gov. Lowden and Director of Finance Wright are to be represented by Frank H. Scott of Chicago. Chairman Malone and a majority of the members of the state board of equalization have entered appearance and are represented by former Judge Willard McEwan and Meyer J. Stein of Chicago.

Members of Committee.

Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet is chairman of the joint committee. The senate members are Clarence F. Buck of Monmouth, William H. Jewell of Lewistown, Willett H. Cornwell of Chicago, and Walter I. Manny of Mount Sterling. The house members are Homer J. Tice of Greenview, John Kasserman of Newton, Frank Vice Jr. of Olney, James W. Ryan of Chicago, and Frank A. McCarthy of Elgin.

Mr. Mortimer will not permit himself to be interviewed, and Mr. McLeish rested upon the affirmation that "big developments" had happened during the day.

Has Sensational Story.

It is known that the story this board member has told is sufficiently strong and sensational to make it, probably, the most startling tale of big business and politics that has been uncovered in Illinois in recent years, barring possibly the Lorimer senatorial affair.

This member of the state board is to take the witness stand either Wednesday or Thursday. He will be under oath to tell the truth, and there will be a grand jury at the Sangamon county courthouse within instant call of State's Attorney Mortimer.

Yesterday and today several members of the state board were reported to be in Springfield. This afternoon Howard McLeish of the legal firm that is to represent Gov. Lowden, came to town.

LOST: A MODEL BRIDEGROOM AND $4,600 IN CASH

When Agnes Kersten told her sister and monitor, Mrs. Katherine Nelson of 712 East Forty-seventh street, that she had at last met a man to whose suit she might incline an acquiescent ear, Mrs. Nelson, with habitual canny foresight, advised caution. She would interrogate and appraise him.

So Fred Katan, living at 5316 South Park avenue, was brought in for the double o. Queried Mrs. Nelson:

"Do you smoke?"

"No."

"Drink?"

"No."

"Chew?"

"No."

"A most estimable young man," Mrs. Nelson advised Agnes.

The nuptials were celebrated April 22 at Crown Point. The happy couple were soon domiciled near the Nelson apartment. The honeymoon, however, was curtailed by a most unusual event.

The detective bureau was advised yesterday that the bridegroom had been lost, strayed, or stolen. In addition, $2,600 belonging to the bride and $2,000 belonging to her sister are missing. They had intrusted the sums to Katan to invest in South American gold mines.

Jawn Kelley Lets the Light in on a Couple of Facts

"Do you know," asked Jawn Kelley, stopping for another match, "that employés of all the big business houses are asking for the last two weeks in June for their vacations?"

"No."

"Do you know that you are charged 6 cents for a bottle of ginger ale in drug stores and that you can buy it in the saloons for 5 cents?"

"No."

"Well, it's true. Ought to make a good story. Give us another light."

NEGRO FAMILY IN GRAND BLVD. OBJECT OF BOMB

An automobile stopped in front of 4807 Grand boulevard at 11:45 o'clock last night and a man alighted, placed a parcel under the front porch, and then drove away. A few minutes later there was an explosion. Several windows were broken, but no one was injured.

The Fiftieth street police said that a colored family had moved into the house a week ago and that it was the only colored family living in the block.

No trace of the automobile has been obtained.

Chicago Men Convicted of Bribery in Iowa Case

Des Moines, Ia., May 17.—Michael Levy and Simon D. Brill, Chicago representatives of a large brokerage concern, were found guilty in federal court here late today of bribery, in connection with the purchase of $33,000 worth of supplies from the salvage department at Camp Dodge.

SABATH TO PUSH REPEAL OF WAR TIME PROHIBITION

Washington, D. C., May 17.—[Special.]—A bill to repeal the wartime prohibition act will be introduced by Representative Sabath of Chicago. Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts also has a similar measure.

Mr. Sabath said he would urge consideration of the bill on financial grounds.

"If this act is not repealed the government will lose at least $500,000,000 in revenue between the time it becomes effective and the date of constitutional prohibition next January," said Mr. Sabath. "It will also be necessary for the government to repay from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 of taxes on goods which cannot be sold before July 1. This makes a total loss to the government of from $650,000,000 to $700,000,000."

As a result of the death of Representative Burnet of Alabama Mr. Sabath becomes the ranking minority member of the house committee on immigration. Mr. Burnett was chairman of the committee under the Democratic régime.

Rustchuk, Philippopolis and Varna are also said to have become affected by the revolutionary movement.

Hoyne Aid Held Up by Auto Bandits Near Home

Assistant State's Attorney James O'Brien was held up in front of his home, 3446 West Adams street, shortly before midnight last night and relieved of a diamond stud, a gold watch, and $5 by three men who made their getaway in the customary "high powered, black touring car."

Mr. O'Brien was returning home from the Great Northern hotel, where he had made a speech to Postal Telegraph employés on "How criminals work and how they are prosecuted."

Flash—It is just reported that the robbers also took Mr. O'Brien's famous red necktie that he customarily wears in prosecuting murder cases.

PRAIRIE BOYS, 5,000 STRONG, BACK WITH JOY

Cheers and Singing Mark the Arrival in New York.

BY EDWARD J. DOHERTY.

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—Five thousand youngsters from Chicago and other points of Illinois are spending at Camp Mills, L. I., tonight the happiest evening in more than a year.

They are in wooden barracks. They are tired. They slept little last night coming into New York. There was lots of excitement when the boat got into Hoboken, lots of walking. Then they had to trudge a mile and a half to camp, carrying their seventy pound packs and their rifles, and it was raining remorselessly. They are going through the delousery at the rate of 100 every forty minutes.

But they're singing "Hail, hail, the gang's all here! What the deuce (or something) do we care now?"

Return on Old Vessel.

They're home—the boys of the 132d infantry, the 124th and 122d machine gun battalions, the 33d division headquarters, the 33d division railhead detachment, the 104th mobile ordnance repair shop, and a bunch of casuals. They're back in the U. S. A., and soon they'll be in Chicago.

It has been a wonderful day, despite the rain and the weariness.

They came in on the Mount Vernon, the same ship that took them across a year ago yesterday. The same captain—Douglas E. Desmukes—who took them across brought them back. Col. Abel Davis, commanding the 132d infantry, the old 2d national guard regiment, the pride of Chicago's great west side, was troop commander, as he was a year ago.

Lowden There with Greeting.

Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who was at the pier to bid them Godspeed and good luck a year ago, was there to greet them.

They had quite a little anniversary party last night on the ship; and Capt. Desmukes made a race to get inside the three mile limit before midnight, to round out the year. He made it with two minutes to spare.

It was a gray, misty morning. The great, gray ship came slowly, majestically into the harbor, seeming afar off to be part of the mist. Gradually, as it came nearer, it took on definite shape and sharp outline. It was a living thing sliding across a picture of gray water, smoke clouds—a drab picture with a background of great, towering, gloomy buildings sheathed in smoke and vapor.

Strains of the Band.

Up the river it came, growing larger with each minute; and presently the watchers on the Hoboken pier saw lines and daubs and splotches and circles of khaki. The color was everywhere above the decks—along the railing, fore, aft, in the ratlines, around the four great smokestacks. And presently the observers were looking at doughboys, fighters from Chicago.

Now one heard the strains of a band, and cheers, thousands of cheers, a mighty volume of sound. The band was playing "Illinois"—

Not without thy wondrous story,
Illinois, Illinois,
Could be told the nation's glory,
Illinois, Illinois.

The band on the pier joined in:

In the record of thy years
Abraham Lincoln's name appears,
Grant and Logan, and our tears,
Illinois.

Mighty Chorus Arises.

How those Illinoisans shouted, sang, whistled. Scores of them were jumping up and down. Many of them were trying to dance, despite the fact that the ship was jammed to the gunwales and there was no dancing space. Every other man was waving his arms, and now you could see the gold stripes on right and left coat sleeves. Quite a number of wound stripes.

Listen—the band on the pier is playing something else—and the boys are singing it in a mighty chous. You can hardly hear the band.

When you hear those bells go ting-a-ling
All join in and the chorus we will sing.
There'll be a hot time in the old town tonight.

There's the song to greet Chicago boys—the song of the Chicago fire. The [illegible] grandeur of Italy Yields; Fiume to Be a 'Free City'

PARIS, May 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Conferences during the last two days on the Italian issue have not succeeded in reaching an accord, as was expected, but the Italians have made a number of concessions.

These include recognition of Fiume as a free city and the giving up of considerable portions of Istria, including the important quicksilver district.

Premier Orlando, Count Marchi di Cellere, Italian ambassador to the United States and Col. House of the American peace mission, continued today their conference looking toward a settlement of the Adriatic question.

M'ADOO REVEALS WAR SECRET AS TO PERIL AVERTED

How Railroad Administration Saved Allies in February, 1918.

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—Divulging what he termed inside information concerning the government that could not properly be told during the period of hostilities William G. McAdoo, formerly secretary of the treasury and head of the United States railroad administration, at the dinner of the Westchester County Democratic club at the Hotel Biltmore tonight, said that the railroad administration saved the allies in a desperate emergency in the spring of 1918, and made certain the ultimate defeat of Germany.

Message from Three Powers.

In February, 1918, Mr. McAdoo said, the situation was extremely black for the allies, and he was invited by the ambassadors of Great Britain, France and Italy to attend a meeting on the eighth of that month to consider an important message which had been sent by the prime ministers of the three powers.

The message was to the effect that the interallied wheat committee had reported that there was a deficit of 900,000 tons of bread cereals, due to the congestion of railroads, the lack of cars and coal, and the exceptionally severe winter and that during the months of February, March, and April of 1918 it was imperative that that quantity of cereals should be sent to the allies.

Warn Allies of Another Russia.

"In the opinion of the prime ministers," the message read, "the dearth of wheat, with the effect it may produce on the morale of the populations, and the important part such a dearth played in the Russian collapse is well known—is at the present time the greatest danger threatening the allied nations of Europe.

"This successful operation under government control of the railroads saved the war for America and the allies," Mr. McAdoo went on, "because a failure to meet the food crisis at that time would have been an irretrievable disaster."

BAKERS' STRIKE MAY END TODAY

The bakers' strike, which has kept 700 drivers idle for the last month, is likely to be settled today, and the men may go back to work as early as Tuesday.

This was the sense of the action taken at a big meeting of the bakery wagon drivers held last night in Bricklayers' hall, Monroe and Peoria streets. A committee which had met the committee of the employers reported that the employers were willing to arbitrate on all matters at issue except that of night work.

It was declared investigation showed only about 2 per cent of the bakers were affected by the night work proposition and that inasmuch as the master bakers were willing to "listen to reason," it would be sensible to get together.

A meeting will be held today at the Bakery Workers' hall, 216 West Oak street, where it is expected definite action looking to a speedy end of the strike will be taken.

Mexicans Hold Up Train and Murder 41 Persons

Washington, May 17.—Rebels led by Gen. Gabay, the Feli[illegible] leader, who was reported some time ago to have been killed, held up a train on the Alvardo line twenty miles from Vera Cruz recently and killed forty-one persons, including several women and children and the entire military guard, according to advices reaching Washington today through official channels.

STEAMER PICKS UP AIR CREW NEAR AZORES

NC-4 May Start Today on Flight to Portugal.

BULLETIN.

PONTA DELGADA, May 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—The NC-3, which alighted off Fayal, was being sought tonight by destroyers with which it was in wireless communication. For ten hours the NC-1 and NC-3 were out of touch with Ponta Delagda. Their positions were located by directional wireless. The sending distance of the seaplanes while on the water is not more than fifty miles, indicating that the destroyers are in wireless touch not far away.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, May 17.—"I am very highly pleased," said President Wilson this afternoon when informed of the arrival of the NC-4 at the Azores.

Washington, D. C., May 17.—[Special.]—After a search lasting well toward night, the destroyer Harding got into touch with the American seaplane NC-1, which was forced by fog to alight on the sea during the flight from Trepassey, N. F., to the Azores. The destroyer reported the position of the plane as longitude 30 degrees 53 minutes and latitude 39 degrees 50 minutes.

At 11 o'clock the Harding reported that Lieutenant Commander Bellinger and the crew of the NC-1 had been picked up by the steamship Iona in latitude 37 degrees 40 minutes, longitude 30 degrees 24 minutes. A message to the navy department just before midnight said destroyers were towing the plane to port.

Regret Mishap to NC-1.

The Harding's dispatch at that hour gave no further details of the fate of the NC-1. Naval officials expressed great regret that the plucky crew of the aircraft had been forced to abandon it when so near to land. It was assumed that it had been forced by fog to remain so long in the water that it could not again be lifted. Engine trouble, it was explained, probably had developed.

The latest information received from the cruiser Columbia, at Horta, in the Azores, was to the effect that the last news of the NC-3 commanded by Commander J. H. Towers, was when it asked for radio compass signals near station ship No. 18, west of the Azores islands. The NC-3 was then approximately 265 miles off the port of Horta and had covered about 935 miles from the starting point in Trepassey bay.

NC-4 Wins Big Honor.

To the NC-4, which made the 1,200 mile flight in 15 hours and 13 minutes, goes the honor of having been the first aerial craft to complete the first leg of a trans-Atlantic flight.

This makes Lieut. Commander A. C. Read, in command of the NC-4 the "Christopher Columbus" of the air so far as completion of more than half of the trans-Atlantic voyage is concerned.

With good luck there is now no doubt that Commander Read has the best chance of any man living to be the first to make an air flight from continent to continent over the Atlantic. The NC-4 may resume its flight tomorrow.

Both the NC-3 and NC-1 lost their bearings after passing station ship No. 17 and, in seeking to regain their true course, they were balked by the dense fog which swept over the ocean. After losing its bearings the NC-1 passed station ship No. 20 and headed for Corvo, a small island, north of the island of Flores, about 200 miles west of the westernmost island of the main Azores group.

Destroyers on Hunt.

Destroyers were sent in search of the NC-1 as soon as it had reported itself "lost in fog about position 20."

The NC-4, which led her sister ships practically all the way and descended into Horta harbor at 9:30 o'clock Washington time. Her official time for the flight was 15:13 and the average speed was approximately eighty miles an hour. The performance of the plane was all the more satisfactory to officials here because of the fact that she suffered a series of mishaps on the first leg of her voyage from Rockaway Beach, Long Island, to Trepassey bay.

Both of the fog-bound planes were believed to have sufficient fuel to carry them to the Azores, but the fog undoubtedly prevented them from continuing the trip in the air.

Limit Radio on Water.

A S. O. S. call from the NC-1 did not mean an actual distress call. It was sent out in compliance with orders, requiring the planes to give such signals, if forced to descend before the actual landing was made. In air, the big flying boats can flash radio calls many miles. On the surface they are dumb beyond a twenty-five mile radius. This also probably accounts for the delay in finding them in the fog. A destroyer must pass within twenty-five miles to hear their signals.

The planes themselve can hear all that goes on about them in a 100 mile circle, but cannot answer. It was pointed out that a fog heavy enough to drive the air boats down would also serve to blind the destroyers completely in their search.

To Lieutenant Commander Read, commanding the NC-4, goes the honor of having made without interruption the most daring journey ever attempted in an airship of any kind. Rising from dinner last night in the wardroom of the mine layer Aroostook at Trepassey bay, Newfoundland, he and and his men breakfasted soon after 9 o'clock this morning aboard the cruiser Columbia at Horta.

Roosevelt Lauds Read.

Acting Secretary Roosevelt sent the congratulations of the navy to Commander Read today when it appeared certain that the NC-3 and NC-1 had been indefinitely held up by the fog.

The story of the long flight, as told by the radio waves that filled the air over the north Atlantic, showed the NC-4 was nearly thirty minutes ahead of the NC-1 just before Commander Read sighted land at the Azores, and the flagship, the NC-3, lagged still farther behind.

That thirty minutes, officers believed, saved the NC-4 from the fog. By virtue of that narrow lead he seems to have slipped through to moorings in Horta harbor, only to have the fog pall roll down heavily behind him, barring the way for his adventurous companions on the history making voyage. Commander Bellinger was caught with land almost under his eyes, but Commander Towers was blanketed well out to sea, showing the speed with which the fog bank spread.

No Fear for Flyers.

Officials here believed the crews of the fogbound seaplanes were in no jeopardy. The crews have ample stores of food, water and extra clothing.

As illustrating the seaworthiness of the craft officers recalled that during the war a crew brought in an American seaplane off the coast of France after eleven days on the water in a violent storm. The men lightened the plane of all weight possible and rigged up a sail out of the wings.

Rear Admiral Jackson, stationed at the Azores, said the destroyers Philip, Waters, Harding, and Dent had started on a search for the NC-1 and early tonight reported that the weather, which during the day was unfavorable, had improved and that sea visibility had been extended to ten miles.

NC-3 Radio at 5:15 A. M.

Rear Admiral Jackson in another cablegram said the last heard of the lost NC-3 was a report received at 5:15 a. m. Washington time saying it was "slightly off course." As both cablegrams required six hours for transmission, navy officials were inclined to believe that the searching destroyers had picked up both of the lost planes.

According to dispatches from Trepassey, N. J., the three planes before the start sacrificed everything to gasoline, the NC-3 even throwing over its twenty-five pound radio surface sending set, although retaining its air set. The NC-3, which had the most difficulty in leaving the water, at the last minute left behind Assistant Engineer Braxton Rhodes. The other planes carried their regular crews of six, with 1,600 gallons of gasoline.

[The lack of the surface sending set may be the cause of the silence of the NC-3.]

First in Lisbon Wins.

The machine which will achieve the distinction of being first to cross the Atlantic ocean will be that which arrives first at Lisbon, Portugal, the first European landing place of the flight and starting point of the last leg to Plymouth, England.

While the performance of the NC-4 is viewed as the most spectacular aviation achievement in the history of heavier than air craft, Commander Read has not equaled the American navy record, either for duration or distance in seaplane flying. The greatness of the feat, it was said, lies in the fact that it was entirely overseas.

90 MILES AN HOUR

HORTA, Island of Fayal, May 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—The NC-4 averaged ninety miles per hour to Horta bay, and, according to Lieut. Commander Read, made the flight in 13 hours and 18 minutes.

The three American seaplanes for a considerable time after their start from Trepassey flew virtually together, but finally the NC-4 drew ahead.

Commander Read looked to be in splendid condition on his arrival here. When about 200 miles from Corvo island, he said, he met bad weather and fog. This continued to the end. His plane flew at an altitude of 3,000 feet; then was compelled to come down close to the water owing to the fog.

Fit to Continue Flight.

There was no mishap or untoward occurrence during the passage, and the NC-4 was found to be in perfect condition. The members of the crew had no sleep, but the men were all fit and anxious to continue on their voyage to Europe.

Commander Read said the NC-1 had made a landing at sea, close to Horta, but the NC-3 had not been heard from for considerable time.

During the early part of the flight the seaplanes were favored with full moonlight, and they met three steamers on the way.

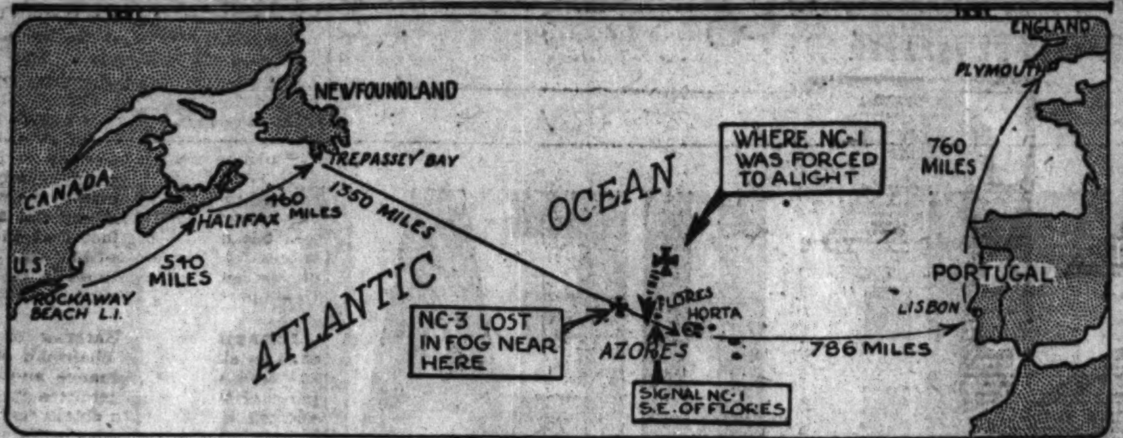
Ponta Delgada Excited.

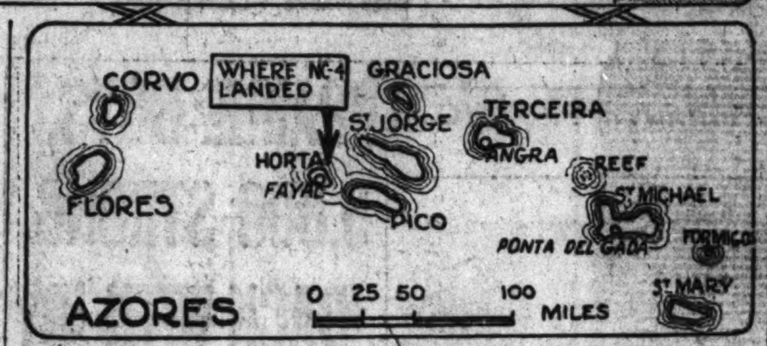
PONTA DELGADA, Azores, May 17.—The news from the oncoming seaplanes brought interest in the trans-Atlantic flight to a high pitch this morning. Small knots of people gathered on the water front shortly after daybreak to seek news of the flyers and to await their arrival, and as the day progressed the crowd rapidly increased.

The section of the harbor where the planes will be moored has been cleared of all craft to permit of a safe landing. Two destroyers are ready to assist the planes if they alight outside the breakwater.

Admiral Jackson, Fleet Commander Wortman, Commander Orwine, and scores of other naval officials remained up all night to receive reports of the seaplanes' progress. The wireless worked excellently throughout the night hours, merchant ships and radio stations heeding the request of the navy to refrain from interfering with messages regarding the flight.

THE SEA FLIGHT TO THE AZORES





A late dispatch to the navy department reported that the NC-1 had been found and the crew taken aboard the steamship Iona. The NC-3 also has been reported to be in wireless communication with the destroyer patrols. The sending radius of the NC-3 wireless when afloat is only fifty miles, and this indicates the destroyers are in the immediate neighborhood of the missing plane.

TIME LOG OF THE GREATEST FLIGHT IN ALL HISTORY

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17.—[Special.]—Herewith is given a table showing the progress of the navy seaplanes on the historic trans-ocean flight based on information as reported to the navy department in official dispatches. The information in the table has been officially checked up in the light of the latest information received.

While official dispatches dealing with the flight covered its progress in terms of Greenwich mean time, the information as officially received has been reduced to equivalent terms of official Washington time. In this table the official starting time of the planes is reckoned from the time they took off from the water at Trepassey for the Azores. As expressed in terms of Washington time the official record of the flight so far received is:

GLEE AT TREPASSEY

Trepassey, N. F., May 17.—Arrival of the NC-4 at the Azores aroused great enthusiasm at the naval air station here today, but caused no surprise, as every one attached to the base had felt supreme confidence that at least one of the big aircraft would be able to make the long "hop" successfully.

Some anxiety was felt for the NC-1 and the NC-3, but it was believed their crews were in no serious danger, unless they had strayed far from the destroyer patrol posted all the way across the Atlantic.

The mother ship Aroostook sailed late today to catch the planes at Plymouth, England, leaving only the Prairie and the Hisko to refuel any guardships which may call here on their way back to their home stations.

The crew of the destroyer Ward, which arrived here today, reported sighting the three seaplanes last night, the NC-4 leading by about four miles. In the distance the lights on the planes gleamed like stars and all of them, flying low, disappeared in a few minutes. They were plainly visible in the bright moonlight and the roar of their motors could be heard for a long distance.

Britons Figure Chances.

St. Johns, N. F., May 17.—American and British airmen here took the keenest interest today in the flight of the NC boats. The British flyers eagerly read radio messages telling of the progress of the planes, and when their arrival at the Azores seemed assured applied themselves to figuring how they could beat the Yankees to England.

Frederick P. Raynham and his navigator, Capt. William F. Morgan, spent the morning poring over weather reports trying to chart out a course across the Atlantic which offered "even chances" for the success of an airplane flight.

"Looks as if we'd have to sit while the Yanks fly," was the comment of Harry G. Hawker, to his navigator, Lieut. Commander Mackenzie Grieve.

DANIELS LAUDS FEAT

New York, May 17.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, returning from Europe, stepped ashore from the transport Mount Vernon today and attributed the wonderful showing of the NC planes to painstaking work in preparation for the undertaking.

"There is no such things as 'navy luck,'" said Mr. Daniels when one of the party which greeted him at the pier used the phrase in commenting on the progress of the NC squadron.

"We have been working up this flight for two years," he continued, "and, as in other projects within its sphere of activities, what the navy has done was due to a perfect system of coöperation."

Confident of Commanders.

Secretary Daniels expressed confidence in Commander John H. Towers and his associate aviators, saying that their work had fully justified their appointments. He commended also the courage of the flyers.

Before leaving for Washington tonight Secretary Daniels addressed the following wireless message to Commander Towers at the Azores:

"My good wishes and confidence in you and your associates. I only wish it were possible for me to be with you now as it was my pleasure to take a flight with you in 1913."

LONDON NOT EXCITED

LONDON, May 17.—News of the start of the American trans-Atlantic flight was calmly received here today. The nation had been stirred up to a high pitch of excitement by a false report of a start being made Thursday evening. Extra editions were issued, but the morning newspapers showed the story was untrue. Therefore the actual start did not arouse so much interest. Reports of the progress of the planes, however, were eagerly awaited.

SEND LETTER BY PLANE

Washington, D. C., May 17.—The first letter to be dispatched across the Atlantic through the air is a message of greeting from the Savings division of the treasury department to the British National War Savings committee.

It was intrusted to Commander Towers' fleet of seaplanes just before their departure and is to be delivered to the chairman of the British committee in Fleet street.

Assistant Secretary of War Benedict Crowell and a number of military and civil aviation experts will leave for Europe this month to study possibilities of developing the science of aviation along the lines of civilian usage. Secretary Baker announced today that the party would sail from New York May 24 on the transport Mount Vernon.

Attempt at First Flight.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 17.—The first attempt to cross the Atlantic by the air route was made by Melvin Vaniman in a dirigible balloon named the America, Oct. 10, 1910. He set sail from Atlantic City. When two days out the craft encountered a storm and Vaniman and his crew were picked up on the eighteenth by the steamship Trent, 375 miles east of Norfolk.

Vaniman's second attempt in the Akron, July 1, 1912, from Atlantic City, resulted in his death and that of his four companions. At a height of more than 500 feet the big gas bag exploded.

FLIGHT TO AZORES SETS NEW RECORD FOR LONG DISTANCE

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17.—The nearest approach to the record made today by Commander Towers' fleet is a flight at Hampton Roads last month by Commander H. B. Grow in a naval seaplane. He stayed up twenty hours, circling around above the station. It is estimated he traveled about 1,300 miles, although the exact distance was not measured.

During the war a Frenchman flew almost 1,000 miles to Warsaw, Poland, but was forced down behind the German lines, short of his objective.

Another Frenchman made a flight to Madagascar, taking it in short jumps, none of which approached the long stretch covered from Trepassey to the Azores. In a similar way a big Handley-Page traveled from India to England.

A British dirigible last March is reported to have stayed up forty hours, cruising 1,200 miles around the edge of the North sea.

Against these records is the sensational accomplishment of Commander Read in the NC-4. He covered the 1,200 miles from Trepassey to the Azores at an average speed of 80 miles an hour.

He has now covered 2,200 miles of the scheduled route with 1,725 miles to go before landing in England.

VOICES OF SKY SEND CHEERS TO SPEED FLYERS

Wireless from Ships and Land Pursues the Birdmen.

Trepassey, N. F., May 17.—[Special.]—A graphic story of the American planes at sea reached here this afternoon when Commander Milton S. Davis brought the destroyer Ward back from station 6, 315 miles out of this harbor, to refuel.

The wind had carried the ship twenty miles off her station when word was flashed that the three seaplanes were off. Sights were taken in record time, and the Ward raced at full speed back to her station, arriving on the dot of 9 o'clock, an hour after her officers knew the trans-Atlantic air liners were on their way.

Sails Full Into Moon.

At 11:30 the lookout reported a strange reddish light off the starboard bow, about 25 degrees. Through a powerful glass Capt. Davis watched an unfamiliar object which he described as "like looking at Mars through a faint haze." In a few moments others on the destroyer got a view with the naked eye, and just then Oldis Light, astern, signalled an object four or five miles away, seemingly sailing straight into the moon. The light winked its signal thus:

"—. —.—. .————" and the signal man in the crow's nest of the destroyer sang out, "NC-1."

Back from the Ward went this message.

"Destroyer Ward—good luck."

Canada "Pulls" for Success.

With four trained signalmen's ears clamped to wireless receivers, Lieutenant Commander Davis stood for hours listening to the chatter between the planes and the jocular conversation with the Canadian government wireless station at Cape Race, which was pulling all night for the success of the American air explorers.

Once Cape Race asked:

"How are you getting along up there?"

The seaplane replied:

"Fine, thanks; but little cold up here."

Merchantmen, eager to get news of the great venture afoot, butted in off Cape Race, only to be rebuked so sternly that one seaplane said to another, and the Ward overheard:

"Listen to that limey jump on these fellows."

'Remarkable,' Wright Says of Flight to the Azores

Dayton, O., May 17.—The flight to the Azores by the American seaplane NC-4 marks a big step forward in the progress of aviation, Orville Wright, who, with his brother, Wilbur, invented the airplane, said today.

"The naval aviators accomplished something really remarkable," Wright said. "The remaining laps of the journey should be made with little trouble."

Though he regarded the feat as epoch making, Wright scouted the idea of air liner service between the United States and Europe for years to come.

"The thought of air liners is farfetched," Wright continued. "The two drawbacks are the danger and expense. I doubt whether the present flight would have been attempted if destroyers had not been stationed all along the route to assist in event of an accident. The air liner may come, but its advent is far removed."

WOUNDED BURGLAR SUSPECT HELD.

James Madigan, 2245 Dayton street, who was shot as a burglar suspect by a Wilmette policeman on the morning of May 2, was bound over to the grand jury and placed under $1,000 bond by Police Magistrate D. M. Mickey of Wilmette yesterday.

CHICAGO FLYER PAYS TRIBUTE TO NC CREWS

Chicago's ranking naval aviation officer paid high tribute to the crews of the NC flying boats. Lieutenant Commander Lee Hammond, who has flown the giant trans-Atlantic craft himself, yesterday described some of the sensations experienced by the pilots in their race through the dark from Trepassey to the Azores.

"The ordinary army pilot can't appreciate the details worked out by Commander Towers and the Curtiss company in preparing for that 'hop,'" Lieutenant Commander Hammond said. "I was at Rockaway Beach the week preceding the start, and had a jump in each of the big boats.

"Chicagoans have a reason for special pride in yesterday's glorious achievement by Towers, Read, Bellinger, and their crews. The people of this vicinity should realize that the men who built and groomed those planes for that flight were educated at Great Lakes. It was there that the navy operated its Liberty motor and riggers' schools."

The success of the NC planes in the trans-Atlantic flight was received with joy at Great Lakes naval training station yesterday because those in close touch with the situation believe the bureau of navigation will elaborate and enlarge the navy aviation schools now concentrated at the station.

ANXIOUS WIVES AWAIT NEWS OF U. S. SEA FLYERS

Mrs. Stone Happy Over Mate's Success; Mrs. Towers Brave.

Washington, D. C., May 17.—The most anxious watchers for new the seaplanes were Mrs. J. H. Towers wife of Commander Towers, "admiral" of the seaplane fleet, and Mrs. F. Stone, wife of Lieut. Stone, pilot the NC-4. To the latter on her first came the good news that her husband's plane had reached the Azores.

"I knew he would get there" exclaimed when told of the safe arrival of the NC-4.

"And isn't it fine that Elmer able to make such a wonderful after such a bad start?" she said citedly.

Sorry for Others.

She was anxious to hear about the NC-1 and the NC-3, and was "awfully sorry" when told that the navy heard nothing from the NC-3 for hours and that the NC-1 had been forced to descend to the open sea.

In another part of the city Mrs. Towers greeted as "splendid" the word that one flyer had reached goal. She said the flight was planned on such a scientific basis that it could hardly fail, and added her belief "Commander Towers will finish anything he starts out to do."

Relieved by Rescue News.

The news of the safety of the NC-1 crew was immediately flashed to Mrs. P. N. L. Bellinger, wife of the commander, who, throughout the has kept a ceaseless vigil awaiting news.

"O," she cried over the telephone when called from the navy department "I am so relieved—and so happy. have worried because fogs are frightening on the ocean. But all the time I could only feel that everything would come out all right. But I sorry Commander Bellinger was forced down. He was so confident of a successful flight."

Glenn Curtiss Asserts Flight Will Be Ha

New York, May 17.—"I have been confident, ever since the project was first thought of, that a flying boat capable of sustained flight across the Atlantic was entirely feasible. The success of the demonstration just made by the navy is only a forerunner of regular scheduled trans-Atlantic flights," was the statement of Glenn H. Curtiss today.

Curtiss was one of the builders of the original NC boats. The initials NC stand for Navy Curtiss type of plane.

Chicago Men Return Laden with Medals Bravery Won.

BY EDWARD J. DOHERTY.

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—This aggregation of Illinois scrappers that got home today brought back enough medals to start a mint.

They've been shot to pieces. The 132d infantry has had nearly 300 per cent replacements. This unit, the 131st, which is on the water, and the 124th machine gun battalion, constituted the "Chicago doughboys' brigade," and there are few brigades in the American army which suffered such heavy casualties, or fought so valorously.

"They are wonderful men," says Chaplain J. J. O'Donnell of the 132d, who has the rank of captain, a wound stripe, the D. S. C., and a pair of mild blue eyes. "There never were finer boys in any army."

Father O'Donnell went over the top with his men with an automatic in his hand, after he had gone down through the trenches giving general absolution. The night before he had given his boys communion.

This One Cornered Market.

There are seven men in the outfit that have been awarded the congressional medal of honor, the highest an American soldier may win. The 132d regiment has more of these medals to its credit than any entire division.

The man who has the most medals of all is Corp. Berger Loman of Company H, 132d infantry, 1838 North Spaulding avenue, who in time of peace is a union painter.

He has the Legion of Honor, the Croix de Guerre with a palm, the congressional medal, the Medaille Militaire—and he is to be awarded the Victoria cross.

He's 34 years old, a native of Bergen, Norway, and a bachelor. And he wears his medals in his pocket.

How He Won Medals.

How did he get those medals? He and Bob Waterhouse, his pal, just went out and captured two machine guns and killed or captured the crews and then Loman captured an artillery piece and turned it around and mowed down some of the retreating Huns.

Capt. George H. Mallon of Company E, 132d infantry, got the congressional medal and the Croix de Guerre for a similar stunt. He and nine men captured eleven machine guns and a whole battery of artillery.

Others Who Were Honored.

Top Sergt. George B. Weber, 506 South Ashland avenue; Corporal Edward J. Powers, 3940 Arthington street; Private I. Jensen, 3712 Eddy street, and Private James J. Snider, 2535 West Harrison street, all members of the 132d machine gun company, returned with medals, Jensen with two of them.

Gus Glockler, 4620 South Talman avenue, and Walter Lenik, 1646 West Eighteenth street, Chicago boys in the 124th machine gun battalion, won the French war cross and a corps citation by fighting machine guns and capturing prisoners.

Capt. Frank Schram of the 132d, 1464 Farragut street, Chicago, was decorated by King George. Likewise Maj. Harry Yagel and Lieut. Komorowski. They received the British military cross for their gallantry in the Hamel offensive July 4.

SEEKS JOBS TO PROVE WELCOME TO PRAIRIE MEN

William G. Edens of the governor's welcoming committee is out for a practical city reception to her fighting men.

"There will be a great display of flags and good will when the 33d comes home," he said yesterday, "but Illinois' duty does not end there. When the great reception is over the problem confronting the state is to see that there are positions awaiting every man. Not a single man must be without a job.

"Every farmer in Illinois, as well as every other employer of labor, must feel that this is his duty and begin making plans to provide work for the heroes. It will constitute their real homecoming welcome. Federal authorities who have been finding jobs for men as they are discharged, are nearly swamped. We should take the job of finding employment for Prairie men."

Officials of the "justice bureau," 120 West Adams street, announced that job finding coöperation has already been pledged the bureau by practically all auxiliaries of the Prairie division.

their military marches never could thrill this bunch as that band did today on Hoboken pier with the song of Mrs. O'Leary and her cow.

It was the noisiest, best natured crowd that has pulled into Hoboken since Reilly's Bucks came home, full of Chicago pep.

Yes, they cheered when the band started up "How Dry I Am"—just like every other boat full of soldiers. But they hollered again for "Illinois." That's one tune they can never get enough of.

Delegation on Small Boats.

Gov. Lowden and a delegation of about 200 men and women from Illinois went down the river in the Princess to greet the Mount Vernon. Senator Medill McCormick was aboard, as were Roger Sullivan, Col. B. A. Eckhart, Adjt. Gen. F. S. Dickson, Joseph Mason, and others of the biggest men in the state. And they shouted like schoolboys as they came alongside the big transport. The governor spied Col. Davis and sang out a welcome. Mothers were weeping with joy.

"There he is!" they cried. "Right there! O, don't you see him?" They could pick out their boys from the thousands of others on the boat, and only they, it seemed, could do it.

The Princess came up the river with the Mount Vernon, the busy little tugs were all around, an army tug rammed the U. S. S. Gloucester and tore a two foot hole in its side, whistles tooted and screamed. Banners were flying everywhere. It was hustle and noise and confusion, and yet an orderly precision was maintained and the ship docked most gracefully and "according to the best traditions of the navy."

The Princess tied up to a nearby pier, and the governor and Roger Sullivan were the first off it.

Daniels Is with Him.

Secretary Daniels, a bunch of admirals, Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., commander of the 33d division, a flock of congressmen, and a covey of French dignitaries were the first to leave the Mount Vernon.

The mist had evaporated now. The day was warming up. The sun was shining, glinting on hundreds of medals, crosses, gold chevrons, and stripes.

And soon the fighting men had landed and were put into company formation and fed. Pie and coffee and buns, they had. The first bit of pie in a year and the first real coffee—it seemed—in a century. The 132d gobbled up 1,500 of those pies without the least bit of difficulty.

Then over the ferry to Long Island, and into the barracks.

Probate Court Judge Henry Horner and A. B. Friedman of 4409 Drexel boulevard were there to greet them. There were two women there, too, standing in the rain for hours. They were Mrs. P. H. Leahy of 4728 West Adams street, and her daughter, May Elizabeth.

Mrs. Leahy held a flag in one hand. In the other hand was a sign: "Welcome, David P. Leahy."

Dave was on a baggage detail, so he could not come with the others.

His mother and sister were disappointed, of course, but they stood in the rain and cheered and cheered for the other boys.

Half the men will be permitted to come to New York tomorrow. The other half will be given permission Monday. Thereafter, while the men are in barracks, 25 per cent of them will be allowed to see the city daily. There is quite a little disappointment for them in the fact that they may have to stay at camp ten days or more. Everybody, including Col. Davis, who went to the camp with his men, was of the firm opinion that they would be on the way to Chicago by Tuesday.

Some Liking for New York.

They like New York—what they have seen of it. But you hear such scraps of conversation as this: "Fifth avenue is pretty, but say Sheridan road for me. There's a house right on the bend you know, and from the window of that house you can look clear down Sheridan road, you can see the pier and Lincoln park and—

"What's her name?"

"Kismet, and the 't' is silent like in gooseberry pie."

"This Brooklyn bridge is some punkin's all right, but the Madison street bridge in Chi has peculiar fascinations for me."

"Ain't that Woolworth building some whopper?"

"Yeah, but the Masonic Temple's pretty tall, too."

"So this is New York?"

"Some sky-line, but nothing like looking at old Chi from out in the lake, Eh? Eh? Jake."

Gov. Lowden, Adjt. Gen. Dickson and a host of the governor's "Illinois Welcome Committee," are going out to the camp tomorrow morning.

Miss Divisional Parade.

Washington, D. C., May 17.—Plans for the parade of the 33d (Illinois national guard) division as a unit in Chicago have been definitely abandoned, it was stated officially today at the war department.

Regiments will be paraded as they arrive, however, and, if it is possible to do so, a complete brigade will be assembled at Chicago. Officials here said every unit of the division would be paraded before demobilization if the sentiment in favor of such action warranted it.

"Rainbow night" was observed at Winnetka last night in honor of Col. Henry J. Reilly, a resident. The weekly bluejacket dance has been widened to a community affair, to which all returned soldiers and sailors are invited. WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17.

DEMOCRATIC house members buried their differences and elected Champ Clark minority leader by acclamation. Mr. Clark strongly urged support of the administration, referring to President Wilson as being universally acclaimed the foremost man in the world. His remarks attracted especial attention because of the fact that the unsuccessful fight against him was based on his failure at all times in the past to support administration measures.

REPRESENTATIVE BRITTEN of Chicago is slated to be chairman of the subcommittee on ordnance and navy yards of the house committee on naval affairs. He expects to obtain favorable action on appropriations sufficient to start work on the $2,000,000 project for the construction of a retaining wall and harbor and the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

A BILL for the repeal of the war-time prohibition act will be offered in the house by Representative Sabath of Chicago. He bases his argument for the bill on the grounds of loss of revenue.

THE opposition program for dealing with the league of nations in the senate begins to take definite form. Senator Johnson of California announced he would introduce a resolution Monday calling for the administration to transmit immediately to the senate the complete text of the peace treaty. This will be followed by measures to separate the league covenant from the treaty.

SENATE Democrats in caucus today adopted a resolution condemning the decision of the Republicans not to recognize pairs in the voting Monday on senate reorganization. This action was interpreted in some quarters as a move to retain control of the senate despite denials of Democratic leaders.

IN caucus tonight house Republicans adopted a legislative program which includes tariff legislation designed to increase revenues from imports and revision of the schedules upon dyes and chemicals to protect them from German invasion, declarations for the return of the telegraph and telephone lines to their private owners, for passage of a woman suffrage amendment, for strict economy in appropriations, and investigation of war expenditures.

JAPANESE CHIEF MAKES APPEAL FOR GOOD WILL

TOKIO, May 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Viscount Uchida, the Japanese foreign minister, gave out the following statement for publication today:

"The recent development of the international situation has given rise to numerous diplomatic questions of great moment, the satisfactory settlement of which can only be arrived at in an atmosphere of good will and mutual confidence among the powers concerned.

"To attain this end, each nation should be guided by calm and unbiased judgment in its estimate of the conduct of foreign nations. While careful not to lose sight of its own standpoint, it should not forget to appreciate the standpoint of other peoples and to seek to adjust and harmonize the special positions from which those questions are viewed by each party.

"Suspicion or prejudice, not warranted by the actual facts, or a display of selfishness without due weight being accorded to the interests of others, is deplorable in any case and is doubly dangerous at the present moment when the whole structure of international relations is in process of reorganization, looking to the establishment of a solid and lasting peace."

SOLDIERS WAIT AS LEGISLATORS TAKE THE BERTHS

Forty-seven Officers Remain in Brest, Yielding Place.

BY EDWARD J. DOHERTY.

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—Forty-seven officers of the 33d division, tired, as all the others, of the weary stay in France and eager to get home as soon as possible, were left behind in Brest when the Mount Vernon sailed.

There was a party of congressmen who also wanted to get home. They had not been to war, but they were members of the military affairs committee and they decided to take the Mount Vernon. The boat was overcrowded, so the fighting men had to stay behind.

Bell Gives Up Stateroom.

Not only that, but Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., commander of one of the finest divisions in the whole American expeditionary force, and Col. Abel Davis, who led a regiment that went through the fiercest of the fighting, gave up their staterooms to the members of the congressional committee.

They took smaller staterooms, and field and staff officers traveled second class. Ten Russians who had been officers in the French army and who were en route to Siberia also traveled second class.

"The Congressional Cloth."

It was not without some reluctance that Col. Davis gave up his stateroom. The congressmen did not make it pleasant. They insisted on having the best staterooms. One of them pleasantly remarked that certain honors were due "to the congressional cloth."

"We also wear the cloth," Col. Davis said. "We wear the khaki, and there is no better cloth worn by men. True, some of it is stained with mud—and some of it is stained with blood. But, as you say, certain honors are due your cloth—and we give it to you."

President's Message to Congress at White House

Washington, D. C., May 17.—President Wilson's message to the forthcoming congress was received at the White House today. It is approximately 4,500 words long, Secretary Tumulty announced.

He refused to disclose any of the president's recommendations on domestic legislation.

It is likely the message will be read to congress Tuesday, as Monday probably will be occupied with organization work in both house and senate.

'YELLOW CROSS' AGAIN DIVISION FROM PRAIRIES

Member Tells How They Won Battles and Glory.

BY WILLIAM LEWIS JUDY.

The 33d division has a nickname, a distinguishing insignia, and a rattling reputation.

In the States they called us the "Prairie division." Over here we are the "Yellow Cross division." When we shall again shake hands with the Goddess of Liberty and shall again smell that familiar smell of the Chicago stockyards we shall once more be the "Prairie division."

Now, who are we, anyhow? Well, we fought with the bloomin' British on the plains of Picardy, in northern France, in July and August, 1918, and when the decorations were handed out on that bright summer's day on the green behind the old château at Molliens-au-Bois King George himself was there to pin the medals on the breasts of the Illinois boys.

British Tommies Good Pals.

We fought side by side with the Tommies—good pals they were—and with the Americans of the British empire, those fighters after our own hearts, the Aussies—I mean the Australians, the daredevils of a rough and ready empire. They it was who paid us the biggest compliment ever given to a Yank crowd over here. The whole world now knows the famous phrase, and I'll tell you how it came about. The Aussies celebrated the Fourth of July with us at Hamel, when we went over the top together up near Albert, and after it was all over they took us by the hand and said: "You'll do us, diggers, but you fellows are too damned rough." Here, too, took place an event that shall be forever glorious in the annals of England and America—here, for the first time in history, the soldiers of the two mighty nations fought side by side in a common cause, and this event shall grow more glorious and more sacred in years to come when these two nations look back to it as the first symbol of the new and greater union between them.

Many Medals Coming In.

We fought with the French, and now we are to get fifty Croix de Guerre. The King of Belgium heard about us, and is sending us eight of his medals. The congress of the United States gave us nine medals of honor—a record that I believe no other division can boast of. The big safe at division headquarters is now too small, for it is crammed with Distinguished Service crosses from our own general headquarters—110 to date, to be exact—and more of them on their way.

We have a lot of doughboys like Corporal Paul Hobschied of the 131st infantry. He's wearing a D. S. C. because up at Chipilly ridge he laughed at the boche snipers, made a dash at them, and on his way stopped at a German dugout, rapped on the door with a few hand grenades, and single-handed chased out thirty Germans yelling "Kamerad!" and brought them back as prisoners.

"The Grand Old Man."

We've a buck private in the 124th machine gun battalion, Clayton Slack—slack by name but not by nature. He's going to get a Belgian medal, a Croix de Guerre, a medal of honor, and maybe a lot of others, because all alone he rushed a machine gun nest, tagged ten Germans as prisoners, grabbed two loaded machine guns which were killing our men, turned 'em around, and gave the Germans hell and their own bullets.

Now I come to the grand old man of 'em all—Col. Joe of the 131st, of the "Dandy 1st" of the old Illinois national guard. He's 63, but likes a fighting spree. Out in front he went at Gressaire wood and led his men over the top, across No Man's land, and on the run took a hill that the Germans said they'd hold forever. They're still there holding the hill but hiding under the ground and some wooden crosses. Well, the colonel had his steel hat knocked off by the burst of a shell, but say, have you seen him on dress parade? There's a Distinguished Service order which the King of England gave him, and I think he's the only American officer wearing one of 'em. There's our own D. S. C.—he's got that, of course. And there's a Belgian medal, too, that is his pride.

Chasing Out the Boche.

Ask a boche where he had the hottest time of his life, and he'll tell you at Consenvoye bridge, when, Col. Allen's engineers in the lead, the Prairie division chased him out of the Bois de Forges, held by the enemy for four years with the boast of the boche that it could never be captured—especially by Americans.

We have fought everywhere in the A. E. F. We have been with the British, with the French, with the French colonials, and with our own troops. There are three American armies—1st, 2d, and 3d—and we've been in all of 'em. There are nine American corps, and we've been in all of them except the 1st and 8th. We've got the record in this regard.

Our troops have camped along the North sea, on the Somme, on the Meuse, and on the Moselle. They have passed through Chateau Thierry; they have bivouacked in Germany.

Some of Their Feats.

What division captured more prisoners and more guns, and advanced more kilometers than any other division except three or four? The Prairie division.

What division captured 1,436 prisoners in one day? The Prairie division.

What division has a general wearing a wound chevron? The Prairie division.

What division was one of the five American divisions rated by the German high command as first class? The Prairie division.

What division commander was praised by great headquarters because the horses of his division and the care of them "stood as a perfect model of the standards that ought to exist in these matters throughout the army"? The Prairie division.

Division Colors Fast.

Our divisional colors are yellow and black; fast colors, guaranteed not to run. The design is a yellow cross on a black circular background two inches in diameter. Yellow is an unusual color for a fighting crowd, but in far away Texas, when we marked our equipment for overseas, Col. Gardenhire had only yellow paint, and that is why we used yellow. It's a good color. It's the distinguishing color of the cavalry, and in the Philippines the yellow cross on government property terrified the superstitious natives and kept them from stealing it. Over here it had the same effect on the boche.

We are proud of the yellow cross, and proud of the fighter who has been our leader from the day the division was organized—Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., known by all the rank and file of the regulars as "Do It Now" Bell.

Proud State Is Upheld.

We came to France with a great reputation to uphold and high standards to maintain, for we are the Prairie division; we hail from the fields of Illinois, out where the prairies begin their stretch, out where the east joins the west and the best of the two is kept. Behind us are the traditions and glories of a great state—a state which in that other great war—the greatest until this time—gave to the nation its great leader in the White House, Abraham Lincoln, and its great leader on the field of battle, Ulysses S. Grant.

We have fought as worthy sons of worthy sires. We shall return from our long journey strong men and noble, victors, and proud because in the hottest of the battle, in the front ranks of the bravest, we fought as only Americans can fight.

Written at Diekirch, Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, Europe, the 14th day of March, 1919.

SPARKS OF JOY WHICH FLY AT LANDING

BY EDWARD J. DOHERTY.

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—The officers and men of the 132d infantry had a most welcome surprise after they docked. None other than John J. Garrity, Chicago's chief of police, and the former colonel of the regiment, was there to greet them. They were glad to see Gov. Lowden and the other big fellows, of course. But Garrity—they love that man. And every officer who could do so came over and shook hands with him. He shook hands, too, with many of the enlisted men.

Capt. Norman Wood, 1018 East Forty-second place, returned with the 132d. His brother, Capt. Franklin Wood, also of the 132d, was not with him. He was killed in action. He had just been promoted, and had not been assigned. He couldn't wait to get a company before going into action. He volunteered to lead a platoon—the job of a lieutenant or a top sergeant—and was hit as he leaped over the parapet.

Capt. J. J. O'Donnell, regimental chaplain of the 132d, recruited personally 300 of the men. They were from St. Patrick's, he said, and Our Lady of Sorrows, and other west side parishes.

"The Chicago brigade wants to parade as a unit," said Corporal Rutherford Corbin of the 124th machine gun battalion. "That's the 131st, 132d, and us, you know. We've been together throughout the war, the only brigade that has been with the British, French, and American armies. No other brigade has so many medals from all three governments. And no other brigade in the A. E. F. has seen such service as this."

"How healthy are my men?" asked Col. Abel Davis. "Say, look at me. Ain't I just the picture of vim and vigor though? Well, I'm the sickest of the bunch."

Col. Davis, by the way, has the D. S. C. and the Legion of Honor medal and the Croix de Guerre with palm have been awarded him, but not conferred upon him. He will receive them in Chicago.

Think the boys are coming back broke? They changed 650,000 francs into $98,000 over there in Brest—that is, the 3,234 enlisted men of the 132d Illinois did. And they only got $75,000 pay a little while before that. How did they do it?

William J. Grace, 5730 Bishop street, who enlisted in the "Fighting Seventh" at the outbreak of the war, comes back captain of Company D, 124th machine gun battalion. His brothers, Corporal Henry and Private Mike, are in the same outfit, and if they don't like the way he bosses them around they can't say a word.

GOLD AND BLACK CITY TO GREET PRAIRIE HEROES

State-Wide Body Prepares Record Welcome to 7,380 Fighters.

Reserve forces of the Prairie division, that mighty army of home folks whose chief objective now is preparation for what it is declared will be one of the greatest homecoming receptions Illinois ever has known, received its operation orders yesterday.

Walter H. Wilson, chairman of the state executive committee, and Lieut. Gov. John J. Oglesby, general chairman, called lieutenants of the city and state organization together and allotted to them details of the huge welcome program, intimating strongly that failure to deliver in any respect will mean summary court martial.

First on the general order comes the plan to turn Chicago into a decorative sea of gold and black, the fighting colors of the Prairie division.

Insignia is Keynote.

The division's insignia, a gold cross on a black background will be the key to the color scheme, which will be followed not only in street and business house decorations, but in all Chicago homes.

Victory Way will remain in all of its decorative beauty, with the gold and black interwoven to make the welcome stage even more elaborate.

The official reviewing stand is being moved to the center of the Victory Forum, where, with the jeweled alter as a background, Gov. Lowden, Gen. Wood and other state and city officials will review the marching heroes. Another huge reviewing stand, to hold 2,500 people, will be erected adjoining the official stand to care for the state reception committee.

L. F. Myers was delegated to organize Chicago hotel owners in a unit to meet the "chow" demands of the division. Every hotel in the loop is to be pressed into service for the noon meal to be given the 7,380 men who will constitute the first Prairie contingent to arrive home May 26 or 27. This banquet undertaking is looked upon as the biggest of the kind ever attempted jointly in Chicago.

Arrive in Three Details.

According to plans, the fighting men will be brought into the city in three details, arriving at the "zero hour" probably in the Park Row, Dearborn and La Salle street stations and marching to the Coliseum, 1st regiment armory and other trysting places for their first reception.

Railroad officials told the committee requests from every part of the state are pouring in for excursion trains to be run on the days of the three parades. They forecast the greatest homecoming crowd in history as an outstanding feature of the demonstration.

The railroads have been unable so far to make definite arrangements regarding train service. Announcements concerning the service will be made as soon as the complete division arrives at eastern ports and its schedule can be made up by the war department.

"Every citizen in the state will have a part to play in the Prairie division demonstration," said Mr. Wilson. "Coöperation from every source is needed to insure a fitting welcome. As details of the plans of various units are received from the governor's committee in the east, they are being woven into the Chicago plan. The committee will be in close touch with commanders of all the units at all times after their arrival. The public will have the division news as soon as we get it."

Plan Greatest Welcome.

"Nothing short of the greatest reception ever given returning troops would be worthy of the men in the 33d division," declared Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal church. "They have acquitted themselves with distinction.

"Illinois justly is proud of them. The more I see and hear of the really great work done on the European fronts by American troops, the more keenly I realize not only America, but the whole world owes them a debt of lasting gratitude."

BELL PLACED IN NEW COMMAND AT CAMP GRANT

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—It was a tremendous day for the Illinois Welcome clubhouse in East Thirty-fourth street. There was a reception to Gov. Lowden, Maj. Gen. George Bell, commander of the 33d division, and Adjt. Gen. Dickson. A hundred soldiers and sailors lined the corridor when the officials arrived. And they gave three cheers that were heard for blocks.

Gen. Bell was notified today by Washington that he was to become commandant at Camp Grant.

Eighteen staff officers of the 33d division returned with Gen. Bell. They were as follows:

Lieut. Col. W. H. Simpson, chief of staff; Col. Harry D. Orr, division surgeon; Lieut. Col. O. J. Troster, assistant chief of staff G-1; Lieut. Col. Edward W. Wildrick, assistant chief of staff G-3; Lieut. Col. James H. Stansfield, division adjutant; Lieut. Col. B. M. Chiperfield, division judge advocate; Lieut. Col. J. T. B. Jones, division quartermaster; Maj. F. W. Barber, division inspector; Maj. M. B. Southwick, D. M. T. O.; Capt. F. M. Roa, aid-de-camp; Capt. Evan A. Woodward, aid-de-camp; Capt. O. F. Prince, headquarters troop; First Lieut. H. H. Harris, recreation officer; First Lieut. H. F. Babor, headquarters detachment.

Gen. Bell has been decorated by the British, the French, and the American governments. The king of England conferred upon him the rare decoration of knight commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Only about five of these decorations have been conferred upon high American commanders. The president of France made him a commander of the Legion of Honor.

From our own government the general has received the distinguished service medal in recognition of the splendid achievements of himself and his division.

READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS IN THE TRIBUNE

FORD JURY MAY HEAR FACTS THAT LED TO EDITORIAL

Plea of Plaintiff Opens Way to Flood of Evidence.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Mount Clemens, Mich., May 17.—[Special.]—The farmers went back to their fields today and tried to forget the hectic atmosphere of the Henry Ford-CHICAGO TRIBUNE libel suit in Judge Tucker's court.

The trial enters its second week Monday with the opening statement to the jury on the part of Attorney Weymouth Kirkland for THE TRIBUNE still uncompleted and the question of the limitation of evidence in the case still undebated and undecided.

Attorneys for Mr. Ford claim that, in attempting to show that the anarchist editorial was written in a spirit of malice, they have a right to show THE TRIBUNE's Mexican policy. They will not admit, however, that THE TRIBUNE attorneys have the right to show Mr. Ford's long campaign against preparedness and the attitude of THE TRIBUNE on this and kindred subjects.

Will Hear the Argument.

Judge Tucker told the attorneys they could argue this point any time they wanted to. He would not force one side to argue it until the other was ready. He would not interrupt Mr. Kirkland's opening statement, as requested to do by the Ford attorneys, to take up this legal problem.

Mr. Kirkand spent today with assistant counsel in going over the evidence of Mexican outrages which he expects to introduce.

Where an Editorial Got Its Start.

In outlining this line of evidence to the jury Friday, Mr. Kirkland said:

"Let us see what the conditions were, or what the government of the United States thought the conditions were, in Mexico about the time of the publication of these editorials advocating intervention, and about the time of the publication of this editorial upon which this suit is based.

"It seems that in 1916, the early part of 1916, the Mexican bandits had made a raid on a town called Columbus, N. M. There were some sixteen or nineteen American citizens killed. I think it was in that raid a man named Moore was shot in front of his wife and his body thrown into a burning building. That is only one of the numerous incidents.

"Go Get Villa!"

"Following that, President Wilson instructed Gen. Pershing to get Villa, the Mexican bandit, whose soldiers had perpetrated that raid. The town was partly destroyed and building were sacked and stores robbed, and I think in that raid some American citizens were taken prisoner into Mexico.

"Pershing and his forces started after Villa. They were a week getting started because they did not have the proper equipment and did not have automobiles; they did not have the necessary equipment to go after this bandit. This force had behind it the United States government after it got started and got as far as Parral, a town in Mexcio. Some of the troops got into Parral, and they got in there by permission of the Carranzista government, supposed to be the federal or real government, and at Parral one of the bodies of American troops was led into an ambush by the Carranzista soldiers, supposed to be our allies.

Breeding Contempt in Mexico.

"Follow these things and think if THE TRIBUNE should have advocated intervention in Mexico regardless of the consequences at any other place on earth! The officers in command of these soldiers got these men out of that ambush, and they began to retreat, followed and being attacked by these Carranzista soldiers. They would stop and fire, and retreat again, until they got to a farmhouse or something and got refuge in there and finally were rescued by a larger body of Pershing's soldiers. I think they lost three American soldiers killed and a number injured.

"You asked me what the reason was. Just because they were Americans, I think. The other reason was that the forces back of the United States government, and the force upon which the government depended to compel obedience, was treated with considerable contempt by the Mexicans.

"Some more of the troops were in there to protect the flank of Gen. Pershing's small body that had gone into Mexico, and they went to the town of Carrazal, and there they were attacked by our supposed allies, the federal troops of Mexico, the Carranzistas, without any reason whatever. Our men did not attack them. Some of the troops were Negro soldiers, and some were killed and the rest were stripped naked of their clothing, and they were marched through the town of Carrazal to be laughed and jeered at by the Mexicans and Mexican soldiers, and their guns and ammunition were taken from them and given to the Mexican soldiers.

"When we wanted to get these Negro troops from the Carranzista government, we had to appeal to them, and they were finally led across the border to the United States naked, with towels around their loins.

Revealed in Official Note.

"The Carranzista government had told Gen. Pershing, when he was at Parral, that his troops could not go south, they could not go east, nor go west, but only back north, into the United States of America, and the Carranzista government sent a note to the United States requesting an immediate withdrawal of those troops. And in reply to that note Secretary of State Lansing on the 20th day of June, 1916, two days before this editorial about which this suit was made was written, and this note of Lansing was published in all the metropolitan dailies in the country, including the cities of Chicago and Detroit, and it was read by the editorial writers of THE TRIBUNE at that time that they talked upon and wrote the editorial upon which this suit was based; and they had the contents of this note in mind, and this note not only shows you what conditions existed on the Mexican border, but what had existed for years back; and I say to you that this note would justify any one or any paper in asking for intervention in Mexico."

VAMP BRINGS PAIR TOGETHER WITH POLICE AID

Instead of Separating, Loving Couple Clinch Again.

"My husband's up there with a vamp. Le's go get 'em," said the little girl to the big policeman at Randolph and Clark streets last night. Patrolman Charles Dillon nodded and up they went into the Astor hotel.

On the register it said, "Ernest Klein and wife, Benton Harbor, Mich." In the room the little girl and the big policeman found a man and a blonde woman.

"This your wife?" asked the B. P., pointing to the blonde.

"No."

"Is this?" pointing to the L. G.

"Yes."

Wanted "Something on Him."

"C'mon to the station."

They went. There he said he was Aaron Klein, 652 East Fiftieth street. The blonde woman said she was Mrs. Betty Johnson, 280 Grand avenue.

"T' th' cell with 'im," said Lieut. Luke Garrick.

"O, no, don't do that. I love him, O, how I love him!" cried the L. G.

"Well, whaddye want him pinched for?"

"O, kind sir, you see we've been separated two whole weeks. I went to get a divorce and my lawyer said I didn't have anything on him. So we, I mean he and I, we—well, we just agreed—O, don't lock him up. I love him, O, how I love him."

"I Love Her, O, I Love Her!"

"How about you, Mrs. Johnson?"

"Well, I was told I could get a little easy money if I'd come downtown tonight to help 'em—I don't know just what it's all about."

"And you, Aaron?"

"O, I love my wife, I love her, O how I love her!"

"Well, take you wife and clear out of here."

They cleared.

"O, hell," remarked the blonde as she went out.

COURT REFUSES TO DISMISS SUIT TESTING DRY LAW

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—Federal Judge Augustus N. Hand denied today the motion of United States Attorney Francis G. Caffey to dismiss the test suit brought by the Jacob Hoffman Brewing company of New York to restrain the federal attorney from enforcing the act of Nov. 21, 1918, the so-called wartime prohibition act.

The court's decision is a big victory for the brewing interests. It means that they can have their day in court on the merits of the question of whether beer containing 2¾ per cent alcohol is intoxicating.

United States Attorney Caffey sought to have the suit thrown out of court on nine different grounds, one of which was that the United States government as a party had not consented to be sued.

A liberal interpretation of the decision tends to the view that the court may grant injunctive relief to the brewery, restraining the United States attorney from proceeding under the law until the issue is determined by the court.

The decision also applies to the suit brought by the Clausen-Flanagan Brewing company, which Mr. Caffey sought to have dismissed.

After citing many precedents, Judge Hand states that he is satisfied that the action is not properly against the United States, as claimed by Mr. Caffey, and that it should go to trial.

DANIELS PLANS TO BOOM NAVY UNLESS HALTED

"The uppermost thought in the mind and heart of all our soldiers across the sea," Mr. Daniels said, "is a burning desire to come home. And we are bringing them back rapidly—289,000 were brought back in April; more than that number will be transported to the United States in May and in June. This will leave about 400,000 American troops in Europe July 1, and there will be facilities to return all our soldiers as soon as the needs of the country will release them."

The secretary declared the navy's building program would be carried out in detail unless interfered with by the provisions of the league of nations.

"With a league of nations," Mr. Daniels said, "there would be no competitive building program.

"The party returns with much first hand information of the best foreign opinion as to technical naval policy on the sea, under the sea, and in the air. The result will be taken up with our own officers of experience for consideration before the matured and well digested opinins of the department are presented to congress with reference to future policies and the character of ships to be constructed."

WHITE HEADS STATE SOCIETY.

George H. White was elected president of the Empire State society at its annual meeting last night at the Auditorium hotel. Dancing followed the society's dinner. Col. Whigam, 108th engineers, related his experiences in France. More than 200 members of the society attended.

ORGANIZATION OF CITY EDITORS HOLDS SESSIONS

Plans for widening the scope of activities and bringing into closer fraternal relation newspaper men of the country were the high spots touched upon by members of the National Association of City Editors in their third annual meeting held in the Hotel Morrison yesterday.

The purpose of the association, as stated by Hassal T. Sullivan, its founder, is to develop the profession and to bring to its members full realization of opportunities and their possibilities.

Most of the afternoon was devoted to a change of the constitution to remove the possibility of a "one man power" operation.

At a banquet in the Hotel Morrison last night the principal speakers were Thomas D. Mutch and James Dooley, members of parliament from Sydney, Australia.

Other speakers were Col. William Lightfoot Visscher, Miss Carol Bird of Detroit, and Prof. W. G. Bleyer of the University of Minnesota. H. Colin Campbell presided.

Women's Row Over Fare Halts Traffic; Two Held

Two young women were arrested last night after they had stopped street car traffic for wenty minutes in an argument over fares. They gave their names as Mrs. Helen Riggs, 4121 Potomac avenue, and Mrs. Nellie Kures, 4407 Thomas street. They were arrested on complaint of John Grudki, street car conductor on an Ashland avenue car.

WAR HAS SHOWN SAFETY OF U. S. AGAINST INVASION

Sea Transportation Much Slower than Was Estimated.

Washington, D. C., May 17.—Gen. March, chief of staff of the army, announced today that experience in troop transport during the war had shown that estimates made by the war department in 1915 as to the possibility of a foreign nation landing troops in the United States were entirely too high.

These estimates, Gen. March said, included 387,000 men in sixteen days by Germany, 404,000 by France in the same time, 180,000 by Austria, and 233,000 by Japan.

The estimates were based on a calculation of a transport making a round trip every thirty days, whereas experience proved that thirty-five days are required for even the very fastest of the transports and seventy days for cargo ships.

Seventy-seventh's Record.

Gen. March also announced that official records of the war department show that the 77th division made a larger advance against the Germans than any other of the American divisions in France. The New York City national army men went forward a total of seventy-one and one-half kilometers. A kilometer is about five-eighths of a mile. The 2d [regular] division advanced a total of sixty kilometers and the 42d [Rainbow] division fifty-five kilometers.

First Regulars Come Fourth.

Fourth in the list was the 1st [regulars] with fifty-one kilometers. The 89th [Kansas, Missouri, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico, and Arizona] was fifth with forty-eight kilometers.

These five divisions, with the 3d [regulars], which recorded an advance of forty-one kilometers each, carried the American line forward for more than 5 per cent of the total advance made by all the forces of the United States.

The official record of the other divisions as given by Gen. March were: 80th, 38 kilometers; 26th, 37; 32d, 36; 33d, 36; 91st, 34; 37th, 30; 30th, 29½; 5th, 29; 90th, 28½; 4th, 24½; 78th, 21; 36th, 21; 79th, 19½; 82d, 17; 35th, 12½; 27th, 11; 28th, 10; 92d, 8; 29th, 7; 81st, 5½, and 7th, 1.

Progress of Demobilization.

Discharges from the army have reached a total of 2,101,029 officers and men, of whom 109,527 were in commissioned grades.

Total forces in France on May 15 were given officially today as 943,005. Voluntary enlistments have passed 33,000, the three year men outnumbering by several thousands those who are enlisting for one year.

DAVIS' BROTHER, WITH RED CROSS, BEATS HIM HOME

Doctor, Envoy of Mercy, Pleads for Starving Poles and Russ.

Col. Abel Davis, commander of the Prairie division contingent which received the state's advance welcome in New York harbor yesterday, will share family honors with his elder brother when he comes home.

Dr. H. I. Davis, prominent Chicago physician, reached the family hearth one jump ahead of his fighting brother yesterday, after having carried the American Red Cross into the lives of hundreds of war sufferers in Poland and Russia.

"Like all travelers from these desolate lands, I have been a long time coming home," said the Red Cross veteran. "My age held me from the army, but I feel I have accomplished a little.

Get Food to Starving.

"I left Warsaw April 3 and came by hard stages to Paris. At that time the conditions in Poland and Russia were frightful, as the world knows now. They can be but little improved even at this date, although the Red Cross has been operating at top speed to relieve the suffering, and Herbert Hoover has been working wonders in getting food for the starving people through from Switzerland.

"Poland has been fighting so long her people have forgotten peace ever was theirs. While the rest of the world is at least preparing for peace, Poland has had to mobilize for a new war against the menace of the bolshevists, who know no peace and cannot be reached by covenants; against German and Russian intrusion, and the civil troubles that place the country in constant turmoil.

Poland Needs Help.

"Poland needs help at every point.

"When I left, after having worked with the Red Cross against the rush of starvation, pestilence and want that swept the whole land and could not be stopped, whole villages were affected with contagion.

"Poland has had no crop for three years or more. The land is now in no condition to produce, without long preparation, and there can be no land preparation, for the remaining men must make up the army of defense. There will be no food produced for a year, at least, and meantime it is up to people all over the world to join the relief work."

Dr. Davis will resume practice in Chicago after a short rest.

GERMAN LEADER LEAVES PARIS; NEW PLEA MADE

Italy Consents to Give Greece Group of Islands.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, May 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, head of the German peace delegation, has started for Berlin. He left Paris at 11:10 o'clock tonight for the German capital. The decision to make the journey to Berlin was reached at a full meeting of the German delegates this afternoon.

BULLETIN.

VERSAILLES, May 17.—(Havas.)—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau forwarded today to M. Clemenceau a new note dealing with the Sarre coal district.

PARIS, May 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Italy has relinquished her claims to the Dodecanese islands off the Asia Minor coast in favor of Greece. This ends one of the most acute controverses before the peace conference.

The question of the future of the Dodocanese islands involved the question of self-determination, as the population is Greek. Italy has held the islands since the Tripolitan war, but now retires, under the terms of the treaty of Lucerne, which provided that the islands should be held until the Italian prisoners in Tripoli were delivered up by the Turks.

Indemnity of Austria.

The indemnity clause of the Austrian peace treaty provides for a payment one-twentieth as large as that demanded from Germany. The sum asked for is 5,000,000,000 gold marks [$1,250,000,000], without bond.

The exchange of credentials between the Austrian peace delegation and the representatives of the allied and associated powers will take place Monday. The function is set for 3.30 p. m.

It has been requested by the Italians that the Austrian treaty provide for the return to Rome of the many priceless art treasures taken by Austria as booty in previous wars.

Proof of Propaganda.

Further indications that the German people's indignation over the peace terms as reported in Berlin dispatches is not as spontaneous as it has been made to appear, are found by the Temps in the circumstance connected with the dropping from airplanes over Berlin of May 9 of protests against the requirements of the peace treaty.

These protests declared that the object of Germany's enemies was not the destruction of German militarism but to impose upon Germany a shameful peace of violence and pillage. The Temps adds:

"One might think that this language was provoked by the presentation of the peace treaty on May 7 to Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau. Not so, however. The proclamation, of which we have a copy, was printed on May 4, three days before the presentation of the treaty and while Germany was still ignorant of its terms."

Pope to Ask Clemency.

ROME, Friday, May 16.—The entire German episcopate has addressed a petition to the pope praying for his good offices to mitigate the conditions of peace which, in their judgment, it is "impossible to fulfill."

Pope Benedict, with a view to coöperating in the speedy reëstablishment of a lasting and humanitarian peace throughout the world, has taken steps to communicate the petition to one of the most important delegations at the peace conference with the object of having the conditions imposed on Germany so modified as to make them acceptable.

Won't Modify Peace Terms.

LONDON, May 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Speaking at the Primrose league yesterday, Earl Curzon of Kedleston, government leader in the house of lords, said that if Germany refused to sign the treaty of peace the "allies were not unprepared for every emergency." "No substantial modification of the treaty will be permitted," he added.

Secretary Lansing, talking with American correspondents in regard to Germany's ships, said:

"There has been no agreement in Paris on the allocation of the German ships, but I do not think there is any doubt that we will keep our German ships."

Terms of Peace Are Denounced.

LONDON, May 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—There was a mass demonstration outside of the headquarters of the American mission at Hamburg on Thursday, during which the terms of peace were denounced, according to a Berne dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company.

Serious Rioting at Stettin.

BERLIN, May 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Serious rioting occurred at Stettin Thursday night, according to the Lokal Anzeiger. A crowd stormed the prison and liberated all under detention there and attacked the barracks.

As a result of veiled insinuations in the Pan-German newspapers that the Ebert-Scheidemann government intends to sign the allied peace terms, notwithstanding their severe provisions, semi-official announcement was made today that these insinuations strike a false note, and that the government is fully united in its intentions to carry out its recently stated policy of declining to sign the compact.

Reports that lack of unity exists in the cabinet also are denied.

Bernstorff May Head New German Cabinet, Is Report

BERLIN, May 16.—[French wireless service.]—Persistent, but contradictory reports of a government crisis are heard in Berlin.

The weekly newspaper published by the Independent Socialist, Breitfeelne, says that Count von Bernstorff has been making an effort to form a new cabinet which would include Dr. Dernburg, Mathias Erzberger, and Noske, minister of defense.

Pacifists in Cabinet.

On the other hand, there are reports from official circles that a plan is on foot to create a cabinet of pacifists in the hope of winning for Germany the confidence of the allies. This cabinet would include Karl Kautsky, Dr. Muehlon, Dr. Forster, Herr Hoferding, and Privy Councillor Willing, the brother-in-law of Maximilian Harden.

Among those mentioned as possible successors to Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau as foreign minister are Count von Kessler, former German minister at Warsaw, and Herr von Gerlach.

New Red Trouble in Munich.

BERNE, May 14.—[French wireless service.]—Bavarian communists and workmen made several unsuccessful attempts this week to regain the power at Munich, according to telegrams received here from Kempten and Rosenheim. The Hoffmann government, it is added, is sending large forces to southern Bavaria to recover the weapons distributed among the population by the communists. Only about one-fourth of the weapons have been found.

MONACO PRINCE ADOPTS A GIRL AS A DAUGHTER

PARIS, May 17.—[Havas.]—The hereditary Prince Louis of Monaco, only child of the reigning Prince Albert, has solemnly adopted as his daughter Mlle. de Valentinois, who has been a member of the reigning family. The act of the prince meets with the wishes of the French government and it assures the continuation of the reigning dynasty in a direct line.

Mlle. de Valentinois is a natural child of Prince Louis. On the order of his father Prince Louis in 1911 legitimatized her birth.

SOVIET REPORTS DNIESTER DEFEAT OF ROUMANIANS

LONDON, May 17.—A Vienna dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says that, according to a Hungarian official agency report, M. Tchitcherin, the bolshevik foreign minister of Russia, has telegraphed to Bela Kun, head of the soviet government of Hungary, that the Ukrainian red army has defeated the Roumanians along the Dniester river and have crossed the stream, the Roumanians taking flight.

New Karolyi in Power.

BASEL, May 17.—Count Jules Karolyi, nephew of Count Michael Karolyi, former premier of Hungary, has set up a government in opposition to the bolsheviki at Arad, Hungary, according to Vienna newspapers. He has issued a manifesto declaring it to be his first duty to restore law and order and then transfer the administration to a government possessing the confidence of all parties. The manifesto says in conclusion that the entente powers have been advised of the formation of the new government.

MOSCOW REPORTS NAVAL ATTACK NEAR PETROGRAD

LONDON, May 17.—A wireless dispatch from Moscow today reported that a cruiser and two destroyers of unknown nationality bombarded the region north of Ropsha, twenty-four miles north of Petrograd, without resut.

Recent unofficial dispatches have reported British and French warships mobilizing at Helsingfors preparatory to an attack on Petrograd, which the bolsheviki are reported to be evacuating. Ther eis nothing to indicate, however, that the vessels mentioned in the above dispatch are either British or French.

A. E. F. DEFENDS WOMEN SLURRED BY A LECTURER

Denies Canteen Workers Unsafe, as Stated in New York.

BY SPEARMAN LEWIS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, May 17.—The long deferred row between the war relief organizations attached to the American expeditionary force—which every well wisher of the organizations in France has been anxious to avoid, for the general good of all concerned—has broken with the usual fury of a pent up storm.

The first bolt was brought to earth by a rod which, friends declare, was innocently raised in New York, where Elizabeth Marbury was quoted in a cabled interview to the Paris newspapers as saying women canteen workers in France were unnecessary and unsafe.

The ink was hardly dry on the Paris editions before scores of soldiers, sailors, and officers of both branches of the A. E. F. began calling in person to denounce the double reflection—first on the women, second on the men of the A. E. F.

Round Robins of Protest.

The next mail began making cries of "Get the boys home toot sweet," which looked like May zephyrs alongside a snow storm. Round robins of protest and denunciation were received from points far distant—Brest and Toul, with Coblenz yet to be heard from.

Without exception men of all ranks rally to the support of the women canteen workers as the only touch of home, mothers, sisters, sweethearts seen in France, and declare the girls safer here than they would have been among some men who stayed at home. Many say they will not attend the Marbury lectures and will request the commanding officer to deny her admittance to their respective camps.

Here Are Some Expressions.

"In my opinion, based on personal contact and observation, this is the most damnable, infamous insult and rottenest piece of propaganda that could possibly have been uttered against the women of the A. E. F., who have been so untiring in their efforts to make life pleasanter for the men and to maintain the morale of the army. Unquestionably the high-minded, splendid influence of these women has been the greatest contributing factor in keeping the men with their organizations for return to the United States.

"I have had the pleasure of attending many dances given by our women and, without exception, these dances have been conducted in a manner that would in no way be objectionable to the severest critic. At each of these dances hundreds of men are to be found. Here the question arises, where would these same men be, what would they be doing, if they were not at the dance? And it isn't only at dances that women and men of the A. E. F. are to be found together. One may visit any hut or canteen occupied or operated by American women, and there can be no mistaking the pleasure of association of our women and men of the A. E. F.

"SERGT. O. C. MORRIS."

Praises American Woman.

"God bless every woman war relief worker who is doing or has done duty in Europe. When I return to the United States it will be my pleasure and pride to say I have met some of the finest, broadest, cleanest, best types of true blue American womanhood during my stay in this country.

"Go to any Red Cross canteen. They are scattered all over the country. Where will you find more patient, accommodating women than the workers in these places? During the past two or three days when the weather has been so hot and sultry I have visited three or four Red Cross canteens and there were those 'dear big sisters' serving hundreds of soldiers and sailors without a word of complaint or protest at the heat and with a smile for each boy who stepped up for his chow. I'd like to know how long a man would stand over a pan of steaming hot food without getting irritable.

"What is home without a sister or mother? While we are living here in Paris as our home, thank God there are American women and girls here who are acting in the capacity of sisters and mothers.'

"WILLIAM J. HAMMOND,
"Chief Yeoman, U. S. N. R. F."

"Most Honorable in World."

"All the boys know the American girl is the most honorable girl in the world, and heavens knows what we fellows would have done if it hadn't been for the girl canteen workers of the Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, Salvation Army, and Jewish Welfare. God bless them.

"After twenty-two months in France I have yet to see an act of our American girls which was wrong.

"Did Miss Marbury ever do any hospital work or is her sixtieth trip to France for pleasure? She and her friends will get a cool reception if they visit my division. We are not ashamed of our canteen workers, Red Cross girls or our lassies.

"Let this knocker of American women leave the country whose women she roasts.

"FIRST DIVISION BUCK WITH THREE SERVICE STRIPES AND THREE WOUND STRIPES."

"Gross Insult."

"Miss Marbury's remarks are a gross insult to American womanhood and Americans as well.

"As a member of the first division, I appreciate the wonderful work these girls did to alleviate some of our hardships and how willing they were to do all we asked of them.

"Their presence among us acted as an incentive as well as an inspiration to do great things, as they were practically representatives of our mothers, wives, and sweethearts. They were 'true blue' in every sense of the word.

"SERGT. DOUGLAS SOMLEZO."

The officials generally deplore the Marbury interview issued on the eve of her sailing for France, declaring the usefulness of her lecture tour has been seriously impaired.

TARIFF TO GO UP, SEMI-LUXURY TAX OFF, G. O. P. PLAN

House Republicans Caucus on Legislative Program.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 17.—[Special.]—House Republicans in caucus tonight adopted a comprehensive legislative program for the special session which includes tariff legislation "designed to increase the revenues from imports and to afford adequate protection to American labor and industries."

While there is a sharp difference of opinion as to how far the tariff revision should go, most of the Republicans expressed themselves in favor of repeal-revising the schedules upon dyes and revising the schdules upon dyes and chemicals so as to protect these industries from German invasion expected with peace.

The resolution containing the legislative program, in addition to declaring for the return of the telegraph and telephone wires to their private owners, for the passage of a woman suffrage amendment, pledges the party to strict economies, and promises investigation of administrative activities and expenditures in the war, and legislation to extend our foreign trade and to promote alike the interests of our manufactures, agriculture, and labor.

Covers a Number of Topics.

The resolution says that "the conference of the Republican members of the house of representatives of the sixty-sixth congress declares it to be the purpose of the Republican majority in the house to proceed at once to the orderly, thorough and careful consideration of a constructive program of legislation, which, beginning with the passage, at the earliest possible moment consistent with proper consideration, of the appropriation bills which failed of passage in the closing days of the sixty-fifth congress, will include among the matters to receive early attention the following:

"The return of the telephone, telegraph, and cable lines of the country to their owners.

"The woman suffrage amendment.

"Railway legislation and development of transportation facilities.

"A military policy and measures necessary for the earliest possible return of our soldiers from overseas.

For Merchant Marine.

"A comprehensive American merchant marine program.

"Public oil and coal land legislation.

"Water power legislation.

"Budget legislation.

"Tariff legislation, designed to increase the revenue from imports, and to afford adequate protection to American labor and industries.

"Reduction in domestic taxation, simplification of the laws relative thereto, and the immediate repeal of obnoxious confection taxes.

"Measures to conserve the welfare of our returning soldiers.

"Such investigation of administrative activities and expenditures since the beginning of the war as will fully inform the people and serve the public interest.

"Revision of immigration laws and deportation of undesirable aliens.

Reduce Expenditures.

"We promise a close scrutiny of appropriations with a view to reducing the enormous total of public expenditures without injury to any essential activity of the federal government, and it will be our aim to legislate with a view of aiding in restoring and sustaining normal and prosperous conditions in trade and industry, and among all our people."

Prophesied dissension at the caucus did not develop, harmony reigning from the beginning.

MOTHER GOOSE CHARACTERS COME TO LIFE

Little Miss Muffet and Mary with Her Lamb Are Popular Among Reincarnations at Eli Bates House.

Mary Smicka — Jennie Lobianco

Mother Goose, Old King Cole, Simple Simon, and all the other characters of the nursery jingles frolicked at Eli Bates house last night in "The House that Jack Built." Children of the neighborhood took the parts and had the time of their lives watching Jack and Jill go up the hill, while Mary and her lamb were visiting backstage with Little Bo-Peep and Little Boy Blue.

There were blackbirds in the big pie and fairies, witches, and court dancers. King Cole's fiddlers three sawed away on their violins, and the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe had a hard time keeping her children quiet.

Little Miss Muffet, who was Jennie Lobianco, and Mary with a little lamb, portrayed by Mary Smicka, were two of the most popular characters.

Mrs. R. H. Livingstone and Mrs. Mary T. H. McInnerney directed the performance. Tony Vienna was business manager.

HARMONY RULES DEMOCRATS, WHO UNITE ON CLARK

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 17.—[Special.]—Harmony prevailed at the Democratic house caucus today. In accordance with an eleventh hour agreement reached between opposing factions after the insurgents hostile to Champ Clark realized their cause was hopeless the former speaker was chosen minority leader and nominee for speaker by acclamation. It was the seventh consecutive time the honor had been conferred upon him.

Following his victory Mr. Clark came out squarely in support of President Wilson.

"Harmony should be the watchword and plan of campaign of the Democrats of the Sixty-sixth congress," Mr. Clark said. "By our unanimous and harmonious action here today we start in by presenting a solid front to our friends, the enemy. Let us keep up the good work to the end."

TURKISH EMPIRE TO DISAPPEAR; MANDATES RULE

America May Assume Full Control Over Constantinople.

PARIS, May 17.—[By The Associated Press.]—The occupation of Smyrna is preliminary to the establishment of mandatories throughout European and Asiatic Turkey, virtually terminating the existence of Turkey as an empire.

The sultan of Turkey is expected to establish a small zone around Brusa, fifty miles southeast of Constantinople, as his capital. French newspapers report that the United States will become the mandatory for Constantinople, but the American authorities say that this has not been decided finally.

Where Mandatories Rule.

The council of four, it is said, has agreed that Great Britain shall be the mandatory for Mesopotamia and Palestine, France for Syria and Cilicia, Italy for Adalia and the United States for Armenia.

Greece Will Get Much.

PARIS, May 17.—[By Havas.]—The allied occupation of Smyrna is taken by the Paris press as an indication of the early end of the Ottoman empire.

European Turkey, the Echo de Paris predicts, will be divided into two parts, one to go to Greece and the other to be created into the international state of Constantinople, with the United States as mandatory. Armenia, according to the newspaper's forecast, will become a nation under an American protectorate, England will have the mandate for Southern Mesopotamia and Palestine, France will be given control of Syria, with possibly Diarbekir, Adana and several mandatories in the neighborhood of Anatolia, while Italy will receive the Adalia district and be made protector of the Turks, whose new capital will be Konia or Brusa, fifty miles southeast of Constantinople.

PUSH DRIVE FOR $300,000 FOR CHICAGO Y. W. C. A.

The campaign to raise $300,000 for the Young Woman's Christian association is progressing in Chicago. It has been under way for a week. Mrs. Luke I. Wilson of the campaign committee makes this statement of the situation and the purposes of this drive.

"There are 236,811 women employed in Chicago, over 78,000 of these in the loop, as we found in a recent survey. Over 40 per cent of these women and girls, it has been estimated, have no homes here, and are at the mercy of whatever boarding facilities there are in the city. The total capacity of all the woman's residence clubs in the city is only 2,556—a lamentably small proportion for those needing homelike, respectable rooms. Besides this, there is no definite provision for wholesome recreation for these girls.

"With the money to be raised we intend to begin on the solution of the housing and recreational problems of the women and girls of Chicago. We are equipping a large new recreational center in the loop, to be ready Aug. 1, and will establish recreational and residence centers in other parts of the city, besides enlargng the work of the Y. W. C. A. already begun here. The climax of our campaign will come the week of June 2 to 7."

AUSTRIANS SELL JEWELS TO FEED STARVING GIRLS

Raise $400,000; Americans Increase Their Fund by Like Sum.

BY FARMER MURPHY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

VIENNA, May 10, via Paris, May 17.—The amount of relief for underfed Austrian children was tripled today as a result of action by the Austrian government and the American Relief administration. The American program called for $400,000, distributed over four months. The Austrians today agreed to raise a similar amount, whereupon the Americans increased their own contribution by another $400,000.

Reports of investigators which have gone forward, showing the frightfully underfed condition of children, is making them a prey to disease and death, induced the Americans to increase their allotment, especially as the need is immediate. Tripling the relief now will save many lives which a month or two months hence would be beyond saving. The Autrians also hope to add greatly to their own fund by asking private subscriptions of money, jewelry, or other valuables. Many persons, formerly rich, now are poor as far as money goes, but they can give rings, precious stones from necklaces, or the like, and a generous response is expected.

Jewels Run Kitchen.

To sustain a privately run kitchen for children, one countess recently gave a thousand kroner worth of jewelry as she had no money. Contributions of the same sort are looked for for the new fund.

To promote the plan of the American relief administration to reëstablish commercial life by an interchange of commodities among the countries of southeastern Europe parties of Americans with some British have left for the Ukraine.

They number about twenty, headed by Lieut. Col. William A. Jones and Capt. E. R. Mitchell. They have taken a train of forty tank cars with which to bring back oil from the region southwest of Lemberg.

Delegation Lacks Bread.

The Austrian peace delegation left for Paris this evening. A notion of how close run this city is for food may be got from the fact that at a late hour in the day it suddenly was discovered there was not a single piece of bread provided for the party of sixty.

Meetings called for Sunday to demonstrate in favor of annexation to Germany proved something of a fizzle. In a city of more than 2,000,000 some hundreds only attended. The total is said not to exceed a thousand. After one of the meetings a party of students went to the Czecho-Slovak embassy and made an unfriendly demonstration. Foreign Secretary Bauer of Austria immediately went to the Czech ambassador and said the guilty parties would be prosecuted.

American Irish Demand Safe Conduct for Envoys

PARIS, May 17.—The American delegation, representing Irish societies in the United States, reached Paris from England last evening. So far as can be learned, the delegation has no definite appointment to see Premier Lloyd George.

The members of the party made no statement concerning their plans.

The Irish delegates called on Secretary Lansing and asked that he present a formal request to the British government that Prof. de Valera, Arthur Griffiths, and Count Plunkett, Irish Sinn Fein leaders, be given a safe conduct to come to Paris to present their case to the peace conference.

LOOK AT FRANCE AND YOU WILL SEE WHY THE TERMS

Chicago Woman Tells of Tour Among the Ruined Towns.

BY MRS. SPEARMAN LEWIS
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, May 17.—I left Chicago twenty-six days ago. I came to France with an open mind, feeling as do many American women that perhaps the stories of devastated France have been exaggerated. Such of the late fragments of the anticipated peace terms that came to us on the Megantic were measured in the coffee room as severe, and the same at home.

To those of you whose only interest in Europe has been a desire to get over here "before everything is all cleared up" I can send a message you need not fret, if you are delayed a year or two. Your children's children will still look upon the ruins of invaded France.

With the sun of spring only a few days old it already begins to smell bad in western Belgium and northeastern France. The bones of men and horses lie about unburied.

Their little truck gardens are beginning to come up. Some I saw actually planted between great rows of barbed wire and trenches which once bordered "No Man's land." Every housewife that has ever hung out a Monday's wash would have laughed or cried as she beheld this same barbed wire strung from pole to pole and laundry hung out to dry with the barbs serving as clothes pins.

Between Laon and St. Quentin we stopped at the country villa of Capt. Maurice Mercadier of the French army, one of our party. The beautiful home had been occupied by the German commandant in that sector. Its bombing Capt. Mercadier accepted as the fortune of war, but when from room to room we went and found filthy pictures and obscene poems in German scrawled upon the walls; when we found priceless tapestries with spikes deliberately driven through them; when we found statuary deliberately knocked about with rifle butts, and everything movable carted away we wondered what sort of military superman was represented at Versailles. And this is a home but one of hundreds.

POPE REQUESTS ALL CHRISTIANS UNITE UNDER HIM

Tells American Protestant Bishops He Cannot Join Them.

ROME, Friday, May 16.—The Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago; the Rt. Rev. Boyd Vincent, bishop of Southern Ohio, and Bishop Reginald Heber Weller of the diocese of Fond du Lac, Wis., accompanied by the Rev. S. Talbot Rogers of Racine college and the Rev. Edward L. Parsons of Berkeley, Cal., all prominent figures in the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, were received by Pope Benedict today.

Mgr. Cerreti, secretary for extraordinary affairs at the vatican, acted as interpreter. The pontiff was most cordial to the visiting prelates and thanked them for their call.

Interview with Secretary.

Before seeing the pope the Americans had a long talk with Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state. During the interview the cardinal said:

"Rather than a union of the Christian churches, the holy see aims at the unity of the church, which, in the opinion of Rome, can only occur by all returning to the Catholic church."

For One Fold.

Pope Benedict told the visiting clergymen that it was not possible for the Catholic church to take part in the proposed world conference. The pope said that, as "successor to St. Peter, the vicar of Christ has no greater desire than that there should be but one fold and one shepherd."

The pope added that the teaching and practice of the Catholic church "regarding unity of the visible church is well known to every one, and therefore it would not be possible for the Catholic church to participate in the proposed conference."

The pope explained that he in nowise wished to disapprove of the participation in the conference of those who are not united to the chair of St. Peter, but, on the contrary, he earnestly desires and prays that "those who take part in the conference may, by the grace of God, see the light and reunite with the visible head of the church, by whom they will be received with open arms."

Bishops Express Regret.

After the visit to the vatican the deputation issued this note:

"The deputation regrets that the Roman Catholic church will not be represented in the world conference, as substantially all the rest of Christendom has promised to coöperate. The preparations for the conference will proceed, and the deputation will continue its work, until invitations are presented to those communions which have not yet been reached."

Bishops Anderson and Vincent will leave Saturday for Paris and London, while Bishop Weller will go to Egypt.

TWO BANDITS GET $300; ESCAPE AFTER BATTLE

Two men in an automobile staged two holdups yesterday and escaped after a revolver battle with the police.

They held up George Lear, driver for Carson, Pirie Scott & Co., at Vincennes avenue and Forty-ninth street, and obtained $200, his day's collections. They next stopped George Pitassi, driver for Hillman's department store, and obtained $100.

Detective Sergeants McShane and Byrnes of the Fiftieth street station encountered them at South Park avenue and Fifty-eighth street and ordered them to halt. They opened fire. The officers returned it. The men escaped by running up an alley. The automobile was found in a garage at 5716 Prairie avenue.

Three Boys Are Drowned in Council Bluffs Reservoir

Council Bluffs, Ia., May 17.—[Special.]—Three boys, Frank Bishop, aged 10; Willie Kilbardy, aged 8, and Tracy Booth, aged 13, were drowned in the city reservoir this evening.

telephone conversation at the Prairie avenue flat and are set down in her statement as "Powers," "O'Brien," and "O'Barrow." One is said to be an alderman, one an attorney, and one a labor leader.

One Offers to Surrender.

Attorney George W. McGurn appeared at the state's attorney's office yesterday and said he represented Patrick Berrill, business agent of the Truck Drivers and Chauffeurs' union, local No. 705. He had been informed, he declared, that Berrill was wanted as a witness in connection with the case, and would surrender his client if a formal charge was made. He said his client was innocent.

The only alderman named Powers is Ald. John Powers of the Nineteenth ward, and in connection with the name of O'Brien, assistant state's attorneys mentioned a lawyer who handles numerous criminal cases.

The state's attorneys made it plain that they had no evidence of any conclusive character against the persons mentioned, and that the statements of the girl were unsupported. Neither did her statement indicate that the persons who were to receive the bonds were aware they had been stolen.

Ald. Powers could not be communicated with, and neither could any attorney named O'Brien.

Hoyne to Ask Indictments.

State's Attorney Hoyne announced that the grand jury would be asked to indict at once all members of the yeggmen's organization against whom conclusive evidence had been found. The fact that a member is now in prison will not give him immunity from further prosecution when his term expires, according to Mr. Hoyne.

Jordan is said to have constructed a $9,000 bungalow for himself and family from a part of his share in the loot.

"I entered a furniture store in Indiana," French continued, "accompanied by Jordan. It was dark and the watchman started to shoot at us before we saw him.

"Jordan ran, but the watchman cornered me on a balcony. I offered to surrender, told him I was a home town boy, and he volunteered to let me go. But when I got several blocks down the street he followed and fired at me. I was wounded in an arm and leg, but I escaped notwithstanding.

"In that robbery I was unarmed.

Dynamite in Cigarets.

"When we rifled a northwest side real estate office in Chicago one night we put the dynamite in cigarets and thrust it into the safe through a hole made when we knocked off the knob of the combination. The hole was so big three of the cigarets dropped inside the safe before we managed to make one stick in the opening.

"The result was when the charge was fired the door of the safe was blown through the wall of the building, over the street and into the wall of the structure on the opposite side of the thoroughfare.

"We robbed the north side branch of the Bowman Dairy company, knocked the watchman over the head, then laid in wait behind a door and held up and bound four other employés as fast as they entered to see what the noise was all about.

In Midnight Raids.

"Our method in operating in towns outside of Chicago was to attempt to enter about midnight, when the lights usually would be extinguished in the streets. We then would obtain our loot, walk sometimes several miles to a railroad junction and catch a train back to Chicago.

"I recall once in Wisconsin we were looting a vault of Liberty bonds when one of us remembered if we did not abandon the job instantly and rush for the tracks the last train would depart without us.

"But three boxes remained to be opened. So Jordan said, 'To —— with the train!' And we stuck at the job until it was finished. Fortunately we were not picked up by the rural constabulary, but it was a long chance to take."

$100,000 FLYER IN NECROLOGY IN NEED OF TOMB

Mausoleum Expert Again Under Arrest After Ambition Fails.

Cecil E. Bryan's one hundred thousand dollar venture in necrology is extinct, but certain prominent Chicagoans connected therewith will evince much animated interest this morning in the news that Mr. Bryan is again under arrest.

His ambitious project concerned those grand monumental structures erected only by kings, emperors, and millionaires—mausoleums—of which the Taj Mahal and the palatial tombs of the mamelukes in the Cairo valley are eminent examples.

In the Hallowed Quiets.

Then there were other projects—subsidiary—such as the Consolidated Equipment company and the Hassewar Marble company. But the mausoleums were the thing. It was these that were portrayed in the limp leather catalogue, upon whose frontispiece was inscribed the legend: "Safe in the hallowed quiets of the past."

Mr. Bryan, who disappeared from Chicago last June, is in custody of a Chicago detective sergeant, Patrick J. Knox, at Pasadena, Cal., where he was located after a search that extended over thirteen states. Extradition proceedings are pending for his return.

Claims of $60,000 Alleged.

The complainant is Chilton D. Hudgens, 1140 Morse avenue, architectural engineer, who charges confidence game. Mr. Hudgens says he has a list of creditors whose claims total $60,000. The sum named in his charge is [illegible],000.

Mr. Bryan in 1915 was a consulting engineer and architect with offices at [illegible] South Michigan avenue. He and his wife and two children were then living at 922 Galt avenue. Mr. Bryan in that year incorporated under the Illinois laws the firm of Cecil E. Bryan, Inc., to promote the mausoleum venture.

Indicted Last Fall.

Mr. Hudgens alleges that he invested $5,000, but that Bryan diverted the money and that he never received any returns. He filed suit, obtained judgment, but could not collect, he said. Last September he brought the case before the grand jury and Bryan was indicted on a charge of confidence game.

Since then Hudgens has been seeking him. He obtained his first trace early this spring when he learned Bryan had submitted a bid for a mausoleum to be constructed by the archdiocese of San Francisco. Bryan was arrested at his home in Pasadena.

He obtained his release on bonds and did not appear when the case was called on the extradition angle. Detective Sergeant Knox located Bryan in Berkeley, where he was again arrested.

Declared Bankrupt in 1918.

The $100,000 mausoleum concern was declared bankrupt last year. The assets were found to be $5,000. Hudgens names the following firms and persons as being among the creditors: The First National bank of Chicago Heights, which advanced $7,000 on collateral represented as worth $14,000; later found to be worthless, it is alleged.

The Franklin Printing company, $3,000 for publishing the mausoleum catalogue.

Dr. Frank Crane, $100, for preparing the literary addenda of the catalogue.

Bryan has retained attorneys and will fight extradition. Gov. Lowden has already issued a warrant for his return and all that remains now is for the governor of California to visé it.

WEDDING BLOTS OUT WAR

Ceremony, Delayed for Years, Unites French Bride and Bridegroom Here.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT DE VOGELAERE.

[By Tribune News Photo Service.]

Albert de Vogelaere, 1649 Fairfield avenue, claimed Mlle. Germaine Uzenot for his bride yesterday after over four years of war and the 3,000 odd miles between Chicago and Sarthe, France, had threatened seriously to interfere. Mlle. Uzenot arrived in Chicago two weeks ago, clad in the working garb she wore while serving "pour la patrie" as a railroad guard while the French men were at the front.

But yesterday she laid aside her working clothes to don frilly white things with veil and orange blossoms. Albert doffed the khaki he wore as a member of the 145th machine gun company for black broadcloth and they journeyed to Holy Name cathedral where a French priest performed the marriage ceremony.

City Employes to Work for Tax Rate Increase

City employés held a meeting yesterday in the city hall and agreed to use their efforts with members of the legislature to have the general assembly pass favorably on the $2.35 city tax rate asked by the city council. Salary raises for almost all city employés depend on the increase.

Heart Disease Kills Baby Girl 3 Days Old

A coroner's inquest over the body of a three day old baby girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hoffman, 1546 North Campbell avenue, yesterday, satisfied the parents death had resulted from natural causes. The baby died early Friday morning at the Norwegian Lutheran Deaconess home. The coroner's jury found death was due to heart disease and made no recommendations.

REAL COEDS ACT AS CRITICS WHILE FAKES PERFORM

Naughty, naughty Nineties—they opened their doors last night after many weeks of camouflage and smoke!

Mandel hall on the Midway was crowded to the roof, literally. Everybody wanted to see the "Nighties," as some students call the show. Real coeds were conspicuous by their numbers. They came to see how the fake coeds would perform.

Slender, graceful and fawn like the chorus did the tripping. No accidents marred the evening. Hair, rouge and dress—all remained in place. Only once was there tittering from the coed wing—when a "fake" forgot himself in the Egyptian dancing role.

Carlin Crandall as the "leading lady" set a new record as a male "vampire." Many university coeds are expected to apply for formal instruction.

The Blackfriars will give their next performance Friday and Saturday.

RECLUSE FOUND LONG DEAD IN COTTAGE HOME

The absence of William Robbins, peddler and recluse, which has puzzled neighbors for almost five months, was solved early yesterday when policemen battered down the door of his four room cottage at 2622 South Throop street. His body was found on the living room floor. He had evidently been dead since Christmas.

Death is believed to have been due to natural causes.

MILK COMBINE CLEWS HUNTED IN WAGE BOOST

U. S. Seeks Link Between Producers, Dealers, and Drivers.

When Commissioner Fred L. Feick of the federal department of labor settled the milk "strike" Friday night by conceding the maximum demands of dealers and drivers, another branch of the government was waiting to enter its authority.

There is hope for the consumer.

Investigation is under way by the department of justice to determine whether a connection exists between the milk drivers and dealers and the alleged producers "trust," on which war has been declared by United States Attorney Charles F. Clyne.

Records and correspondence of the dealers' and drivers' associations may be seized as were the documents of the farmers, now being presented to the federal grand jury.

Meeting Is Under Inquiry.

The first evidence called for in an attempt to show participation in the "conspiracy" to maintain a high price for milk was that regarding a mass-meeting of 3,000 striking drivers at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium, Thursday, in which Charles H. Potter, president of the Illinois Milk Producers' association, made the statement the farmers were with the drivers.

"We are willing to let anybody have milk whom your executive committee approves of," said Potter.

"It is just like Potter says: Stick together and we will win," declared Willis K. Kittle, secretary of the Illinois Milk Producers' association, who spoke following the president. "We have over 12,000 members on our books and with 3,000 or 4,000 others we can do something."

Seeks Plot Evidence.

Assitant District Attorney Frederick Dickinson, having in charge the federal investigation of the milk "combine," stated yesterday the evidence necessary to involve the drivers must show they entered into or lent themselves to a conspiracy in violation of the interstate commerce laws.

He stated the increase of 1 cent a quart on the price of milk was out of proportion to the added cost of distribution resultant from the $9 a week raise to the drivers.

"A raise of half a cent a quart would more than meet the increased cost of distributing," he stated. "The increase of 1 cent a quart is hard to understand, in view of the fact the retail price has remained the same since the 1st of March, although the wholesale price was lowered.

"In January the producers received $3.76 a hundred pounds for milk, in February, $3.50; March, $3; April, $2.80, and May $2.50, and it should go down another notch in June. But the retail price remained at 13 cents until Commissioner Feick raised it Friday night."

City May Enter Trade.

Addition of 1 cent a quart to the cost of milk, the price the consumer must pay for settlement of the drivers' strike, may result in the city going into the milk business, running its own pasteurization plants, and dealing with the public without any "middleman's" profit.

This was the answer of Health Commissioner Robertson to the decision arrived at by the dealers in settling the drivers' strike. The drivers were given an advance in pay of $9 a week, but the commissioner said this charge had been unfairly tacked on to the price of milk to the consumer. He called upon the dealers to sell milk at the 700 depots in the city for 11 cents a quart, undelivered. If they do not do this, the commissioner said, he will urge the council and the legislature to back him up in a plan permitting the city to go into the milk business.

Dr. Robertson declared an increase of half a cent would have been sufficient to meet the increased cost of delivery.

Calls Price Outrageous.

Dr. Robertson's plan, which he took up yesterday with Corporation Counsel Ettelson, provides for the construction of three large municipal pasteurization plants, one each for the north, south, and west sides. Dr. Robertson believes milk could be sold to consumers by grocers "over the counter" for 10 or 11 cents a quart.

"Fourteen cents a quart for milk is outrageous," said the commissioner. "The dealers buy the milk delivered in Chicago for 22½ cents a gallon, less than 6 cents per quart."

Dealers Claim Loss.

Meantime milk dealers declare that, by reason of the increase granted the drivers, they are facing a year of business without 1 cent of profit, and bankruptcy stares them in the face. Secretary William B. Wanzer of the Illinois Milk Dealers' association figured it out.

"The cent increase on the retail price of a quart only covers two-thirds of the raise in the wages of the drivers and the inside men," he said.

"The increase in wages totals $2,400,000 a year does it not?" he was asked.

"That's right," he said. "The increases in the milk price yields two-thirds of that, or about $1,600,000."

"Well, that leaves $800,000 as a loss to be stood by the dealers," it was suggested, "and as the dealers' association has stated the net profit is only one-quarter of one cent on each quart, 400 quarts will have to be used to make a dollar.

"As they have to stand the loss of $800,000, 400 times 800,000 is 320,000,000, or the number of quarts they will have to sell to make up the loss before the profits begin. Now, the dealers do not sell over 80,000 quarts a day, so they will not make a dollar profit for the year."

Lose $5.50 a Week a Wagon.

"You can't figure it out that way," said Mr. Wanzer. "Say the drivers sell or deliver 150 quarts a day, or 150 points, as we call it. The 1 cent advance would mean $1.50 a day, or $10.50 more a week we would get from each driver's sales. Now, for each driver there is an inside man, also raised in wages. So we are paying the drivers $9 more a week and an inside man $7 more, which makes $16 more a week that the two men cost us. Take the $10.50 away from it and we are $5.50 a week in the hole on each driver."

"That will figure out a deficit of $858,000 a year," it was suggested.

"Well, I don't know whether it should be figured that way," he said. "Say, I will get somebody who can figure good to get you out some figures later."

Later Mr. Wanzer called with an expert on figures, who figured out a few. The expert figured that $16 divided by $13.34 gives 0.12, "the cost of the increase to us, and we are .002 losers on each quart under the agreement."

A number of amateur mathematicians have found $16 divided by $13.34 gives a result of 1.19.

U. S. SERVICE GETS JOBS FOR 4,557,259, SAVES $10,000,000

COMPLETE figures on the number of unemployed for whom jobs have been obtained by the United States employment service during its sixteen months of activity, received yesterday by Dr. P. L. Prentis, federal director, show that 4,557,259 men and women were given employment.

"Figuring these 4,557,259 men and women as worth a minimum of $2.25 a day each," declared Dr. Prentis, "even if they were given jobs only one day sooner than they could have otherwise obtained employment, the economical saving to them and to the country during the sixteen months amounted to more than $10,000,000."

He asserted, however, the saving was possibly two and one-half to three times that amount, as the minimum wage is much higher and the average loss of time in turn-over is at least three to four days.

During the sixteen months 6,633,890 applicants registered with the service and 5,975,890 were referred to opportunities.

The number of actual placements is determined by a return card system.

HOLLAND FORCED TO GUARD KAISER, SAYS VAN DYKE

Holland had a bad egg wished upon it when William Hohenzollern sought Dutch hospitality last October, according to Dr. Henry Van Dyke, former ambassador to the Netherlands, yesterday. Dr. Van Dyke will address the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight on "Peace by Righteousness."

"While the presence of Mr. Hohenzollern is not to the liking of the Dutch, yet the government is bound to observe international law in the matter. I believe that there will be no deviation in her course in this respect," said the former minister.

Dr. Van Dyke said that more than five-sixths of the people were decidedly anti-German throughout the war.

Resentment toward the United States because of the requisitioning of Dutch ships is rapidly cooling, according to Dr. Van Dyke. "The Holland-America steamship line, which had the largest number of ships requisitioned, made a net profit during 1918 of $8,000,000 through our operation of their boats. It also declared a dividend of 40 per cent on common stock last year," he said.

Did you ever stop to think what home ownership means as an investment? Often, in a city like Chicago, we lose our perspective. We forget the homes our fathers owned, the homes to which we still go with a fine feeling of happiness and comfort. Buying a home is not only the purchasing of an investment—it is the establishment of personal responsibility, the laying of the cornerstone of one's personal credit, and goes a long way towards creating family happiness and establishing family unity.

There are hundreds of thousands of people in Chicago who are today building savings accounts. If all of them were saving for the purpose of owning homes this city would be much richer in money, in character, in citizenship, than it is today. What is true of Chicago is true of the nation; and the Government recognizes this and is spending vast sums of money to crystallize national prosperity into permanent prosperity through home ownership.

The Success of the Wm. H. Britigan Organization Is Founded on Home Ownership.

In the last five years this organization has sold to the people of Chicago nearly Fifteen Million Dollars' worth of home property. Seven Thousand people are paying in to us nearly Two Hundred Thousand Dollars per month as part payments on lots on which they expect to build their homes. All of these people are better off today than they were a few years ago—and they will be much better off a few years hence than they are today. They have laid the foundation of personal independence and on that foundation they will build their own personal security.

The Characteristics of the Portage Park District.

Nature was lavish in her gifts to this section, which is a high ridge of ground of great fertility. Surrounding this property on every side are beautiful homes fronting on well-shaded streets, each with its well-kept lawn, its shrubs and its flowers. The district contains two parks, schools, churches, fine stores and shops. It is a beautiful, well-developed community of some five hundred families—a district of refined and substantial people. Some of the homes in this district cost many thousands of dollars, others are modest bungalows, but they all reflect the home spirit and express the home idea. In buying property in this district, therefore, you get not only real estate values, but you get the values that come from a development which has resulted in the settlement of this district by the right class of people.

An Investment Whose Elements Are Absolute Solidity and Growing Value.

When you put money into a lot in Portage Park you put it into an investment that has two characteristics, (1) it is permanent, and (2) it is constantly increasing in value. The monthly payment you make on this property.

(1) Is a method of saving money.
(2) Is an investment.
(3) Builds your credit in the community.
(4) Builds your personal confidence.
(5) Points the way towards home ownership.

The Britigan reputation back of this property assures you that when your lot is paid for it will be worth more than the price you paid for it. In buying this property you buy not only property developed as part of a great residential district, you buy not only location and transportation facilities, but you also buy the reputation and the interest of this organization in this property—a thing that is as great as the combined interest of all our purchasers.

Build Your Financial Independence Today—

AT PORTAGE PARK

The purchase of a lot at Portage Park is a Savings Investment. It is a means by which you can acquire an investment that will stand like Gibraltar against the poverty of old age. Out of every 100 men 25 years old today 36 will die in the next 40 years. Of the 64 who are living, only about 5% will be self-supporting, which means that 95% will be dependent on their daily earnings or on their relatives and friends or on the public. If these men had provided for the future by acquiring a home when their earning power was at its height, if they had begun to lay aside a little month by month, they would not be left dependent in old age. The moral is: "Get your HOME TODAY." The Government says: "A man can borrow money on what he puts into a home, but he can't on what he pays out in rent." This organization will help you TODAY to put yourself in the class of independent citizens who do not need to depend on anyone in later years.

See Our Portage Park Property Today, Rain or Shine. It May Be the Solution of Your Personal Problems.

We invite you to take advantage of this great opportunity that we offer you to build a savings and investment account. In a very few years your lot will be paid for, in a very few years more you will have a home and will have solved the problem of providing against old age when your earning power will be on the decrease. It's easy to live up a salary no matter how large it is. The value of a savings account depends largely on the object for which you are saving. There is no more substantial and beneficial object than the buying of a home—an investment not only in land and bricks and mortar, but in family happiness and personal satisfaction.

Over One-Half Our Portage Park Properties Has Been Sold. See It Today. Tomorrow May Be Too Late.

Up to noon, Saturday, May 17th, we have sold more than one-half of the lots in this valuable property. Homes have already been started here, apartments and bungalows will soon be under construction all over the entire subdivision. You don't have to be a real estate expert to judge the values in this section. One of Chicago's principal half-section line streets bounds it on the north and the second largest park on the North Side adjoins it on the south. Right up to its very edge has been built beautiful home districts. Transportation is on every side and there is assurance of more transportation within a very few years.

ILLINOIS FIRST TO RATIFY EQUAL SUFFRAGE, PLAN

Women at Springfield Receive Good News from Washington.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., May 17.—[Special.]—Illinois will be the first state of the union to ratify the federal constitutional amendment for full woman suffrage, providing the plans that have been worked out carefully by Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout and Mrs. J. W. McGraw materialize effectively.

The big "if" in the proposition, naturally, is the disposition of the extra session of congress that assembles Monday noon in Washington. Suffrage leaders in Springfield express complete confidence that the immediate step of legislative importance that will be taken at the national capital will be the adoption of the joint congressional resolution that will put it up to the states to ratify the full suffrage amendment.

Bulletins that have been relayed to Mrs. Trout from Washington indicate that the submission resolution is much nearer to a victory than might appear from some of the bearish statements that have come from the Washington headquarters of the woman's party and the belligerent militants.

May Be Big Feature of Week.

According to this, it is possible that ratification of the suffrage amendment may become one of the big features of the coming week's legislation.

The week will open with the senate and house calendars jammed to the limit. The senate is confronted with more than 150 of its own bills and 65 house bills. Pending on the house calendar, ready for action on second or third reading, are 140 senate bills and nearly 100 house bills.

The Chicago revenue bills, including more than sixty measures, will get to a decision in the senate Tuesday.

Fight Over Rate.

Senator Glackin fights first for the $2.35 rate for city taxes, and the $110,000,000 bond issue bills for permanent improvements follow closely after. The test will come Tuesday, as between the $2.35 rate and the $2 rate, that is held to be sufficient by the Bureau of Public Efficiency and the Civic federation.

Following the visit of the house waterways committee to the deep waterway route it is expected that the administration waterway bills will be handled decisively in the house during the week. They are through the senate.

The Ettelson-Dahlberg traction bills will be up for hearing on both sides of the rotunda in committees probably Wednesday. Definite committee action on the public utilities bills, involving home rule, is expected Wednesday or Thursday in committee.

All the wet and dry bills, including search and seizure, will get to a decisive vote Wednesday in the house.

Serbian and Italian Soldiers in Montenegro Clash Over Fiume and Adriatic Questions

BY THOMAS STUART RYAN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

CETTINJE, May 2, via Paris, May 17.—Allied troops are remaining in Montenegro.

Surprise was expressed by the Serbs when they, like the Italians, were ordered to leave the country since Serbia declares Montenegro part and parcel of herself. Gen. Tahon, a Frenchman commanding Bocche di Cattaro, transmitted the order, but it originaed with no less a personage than Gen. Franz d'Esperey, commander in chief of the allied army of the east.

Serbs Refuse to Move.

Three times did the French deliver the order, and three times did Gen. M. M. Mihailovich, commanding the Serb division at Zeta, in Montenegro, decline to move. His chief, he said, was not the allied generalissimo, but his superior in Sarajevo. He acquainted the latter with what had happened. Later Belgrade was informed, but no reply came from the government, and Gen. Mihailovich sat tight.

The plan, it was said, was first to remove the allied troops, then by a plebiscite to feel the national pulse on the question of a Serbian union. With the Serb army present it was felt this could not be done; and Gen. Tahon ceased to command in Montenegro, since, theoretically, there would be no troops to command. But he faced the stone wall of the Serbian refusal; at the same time the Italians declined to leave while their rivals remained.

Gen. d'Esperey then changed his tactics by placing Gen. Tahon once more in command of Montenegro, besides Bocche di Cattaro. This means both Italians and Serbs will stay where they are to await the last word from Paris.

The Serbian general's viewpoint may be understood. Outside Montenegro, around Bocche di Cattaro, there are 2,500 Italian troops, while within the country one battalion is stationed at Antivari, Montenegro's best port, and companies are at both Dulcigno and Virpazar. Ostensibly they are there to protect Italian capital invested in the little railway from Antivari to Virpazar.

"We could drive them out and keep them out," said Gen. Mihailovich, clicking his spurs on the hardwood floor of the old Austrian legation and twirling a mustache strangely reminiscent of those that once grew on the banks of the Spree. "But we will trust the entente to force their removal."

He has under him one division of Serbian infantry, three Montenegrin battalions, and some mounted batteries. Besides these troops there is a part of the Kossovo division in the northeast. Gov. Pavichevich—or, as he likes to be called, Ministre Delegue du Royaume des Serbs, Croates et Slovenes—thought d'Esperey's order must be a mistake.

"Why, the Serbs are at home here," the governor said. "I can understand putting the Italians out. But to take an analogous case, if the Americans were ordered by Gen. Pershing to quit France, would the French troops be forced to leave with them? This is Serbian soil. You might as well ask us to leave Belgrade."

A Real Job.

No man could envy Gen. Tahon his job. Day after day 3,000 Serbian troops live with 2,500 Italians in and about Cattaro. They frequent the same taverns, make love to the same girls, meet on the coutnry road, and most dire of all, they discuss and hear discussed the Fiume question. When they are caught shooting and cutting each other, Gen. Tahon must speak to them softly.

The Slav giant looks down at the Latin and sneers at his deification of art and his Machiavellian trend. And the Latin returns the sneer, hating the Slav for his uncouthness, his lack of finesse in his hates as well as his loves.

The air is fetid with propaganda. You walk into a Montenegrin coffee house, and while rakiyes is being served you are told in confidence peace would come quickly in every war weary land if Italy were pushed back to her old frontiers. There follows tales of Italian atrocities at Fiume that make us wonder why we thought the Germans cruel in Belgium.

So it is in Albania there are cries of Serb imperialism. Once the new Jugo-Slav empire gets Albania these people say it may laugh at Graeco-Bulgar alliance and reach out for all the Balkans.

In connection with this I might mention the genuine popular fear of such encroachment, and the Albanian insistence voiced unoffically by merchants and peasants that Uncle Sam administer the most ramshackle country in Europe. It is quite pathetic that up in the mountains near Plav, where trouble has taken place with the Serbs, illiterate Albanians will recite you the fourteen points and argue at length on article 5.

Clash of Races.

While officials vent their ire in warlike speeches, the peasants and soldiers express themselves more directly. At Teodo, Dalmatia, three Serbs ducked thirty Italians in the gulf, and on another occasion at the same port an armed conflict resulted in several wounded.

At Castelnuovo Italian soldiers marched through the streets shouting "Viva Italia!" and "Viva Fiume!" They were attacked by civilians, whom they charged with fixed bayonets, thus rousing the anger of the Serbian soldiers in the town. The casualties in this fracas were eight wounded.

We await each clash on tiptoe.

FAVORS PRESBYTERIAN UNION.

New Orleans, La., May 17.—Federal union of all Presbyterian and reformed churches of the United States was recommended in a report of the conference committee on federal union at the session today of the fifty-ninth general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States, known as the Southern Presbyterian church.

GLACKIN TELLS STATUS OF BILLS FOR MORE BONDS

State Senator Edward J. Glackin explained his bills yesterday for increasing the city's bonding powers for public improvements at a luncheon given by the Chicago Plan commission at the Hotel Sherman.

The senator predicted victory for the enabling legislation if all the various civic organizations would urge this. There are thirty-three pending bills, all interwoven and having to do with taking the "lid" off the city's right to issue such bonds for public improvements as the voters approve.

Charles H. Wacker, president of the commission, urged all citizens to get behind the bills. He said it was "high time that Chicago got out of the village class in the matter of public improvements." The pending bills have nothing to do with the city's appeal for a higher tax rate. This comes in a separate set of bills.

Many influential business and professional men attended the conference. Most of these agreed to use their efforts to aid the bills.

SEEK GIRL THREATENING SUICIDE.

George Leland Hoerter, 6722 East End avenue, asked the police last night to search for Mrs. Mamie Morgan, 18 years old, a domestic, who disappeared from his home yesterday morning, saying she was going to commit suicide.

AMERICAN LEGION CHIEFS MAP OUT STATE CAMPAIGN

Illinois representatives of the American Legion met in Chicago yesterday for their first executive session in a campaign expected to result in organization of the entire state.

At the call of Col. George G. Seamna of Taylorville, chairman of the executive committee, representatives empowered to act for the twelve districts, embracing 100 counties, gathered in the headquarters of the Fort Sheridan association and worked throughout the afternoon on the constitution and by-laws. Capt. Myron E. Adams, executive secretary, reported the preliminary work well under way. It is hoped by leaders that the state organization details can be cleared at the next executive meeting in Springfield May 31.

Among those present were Maj. John P. Cummings, Chicago spokesman at the convention in St. Louis; Cornelius Lind, Lieut. William Knight of Rockford; William Weber of Champaign; Capt. Leo G. Hanna of Peoria; Capt. Marshall Field III; Lieut. Engle of Freeport, and other district chairmen.

DIAMOND MARKET IS FIRM AS A ROCK

Mail Orders Filled

WHEN the mines will reopen and the usual supply be resumed nobody knows. The demand for fine Diamonds never slackens. Nothing else can take their place in Engagement Rings, which leads up to the important fact that Roberts' Are Still Selling Diamonds at Popular Prices, because they made heavy direct importations before the recent advance in prices. For these carefully selected gems the cutters got spot cash (a long established Roberts rule).

The Diamonds here listed below, and others from $5.00 to $1,500.00, are all mounted in the Roberts factory, near the Roberts store, where rents are low and all overhead costs of business are kept down to the lowest level that high efficiency allows.

Whoever would buy a Solitaire Diamond Engagement Ring or a piece of guaranteed Diamond Jewelry for a Bride, or as a Gift, whoever would buy Diamonds as an investment, must see that Roberts offers them the only possibility of economy.

KING "8"

New Chicago Representatives

THE man or woman contemplating the purchase of a motor car will welcome the news that we are now distributors for the King "8" in the Chicago territory.

The King "8" needs no introduction to Chicago motorists—hundreds of these dependable cars are in use here.

Shortly you will see many new models on the streets of Chicago. The King was one of the first two makes to introduce the eight-cylinder car. The King was so fundamentally right at the start that succeeding models have required few changes. The King car offered this year is the best of four years of good King Eights and many years of good Kings.

The King construction embodies the finest of materials and the best of workmanship. It has strength and stamina without excessive weight. It renders unfailing service day in and day out, and year in and year out.

The King's small bore and long stroke eight-cylinder motor converts every ounce of gasoline into wonderful power and amazing mileage. For a car of its size and weight we believe the King to be the most eonomical powerful car on the market.

The King handles perfectly. Its instantaneous response to the accelerator makes driving a pleasure, no matter what the traffic or road conditions. Its comfortable riding qualities must be enjoyed to be appreciated.

The 1919 models will satisfy your every expectation. The "FOURSOME"—first of its type and now widely copied—will fill your eye and quicken your desire to grasp the steering wheel. The comfortable TOURING CAR and luxurious SEDAN offer all that could be desired in these two body models. The ROAD-KING is a "racy" two-seater for the person who wants a car with more style and individuality than the ordinary roadster.

MILL MAN SEES 'DOOR TRUST' AS FRANKENSTEIN

Will Ultimately Destroy Those Who Formed It, He Says.

Here is another of those dull building material stories.

Wonder why they are printed? There isn't a murder angle to them. Nobody runs off with anybody's wife. You can't squeeze a giggle out of them. Yet people read them.

Perhaps it is because folks are thinking of lower rents, new apartments, a cozy bungalow, or something. Perhaps they figure the high price of building material has something to do with their not getting them.

And perhaps—who knows?—perhaps some public spirited public official with a grand jury in his pocket may read it. Aren't the possibilities exciting? Gee, whiz!

Well—

Scrutinizing the combination between the millmen, the carpenter contractors and the carpenters' union, the so-called "door trust," through the eyes of a man with the viewpoint of the mill owner, a TRIBUNE reporter obtained a new slant on the building material situation in Chicago.

The viewpoint is that of E. E. Hooper, secretary of the Lumbermen's association of Chicago. It is "Division G" of the lumbermen's organization that is called the Millmen's association in the trick agreements with the contractors and the carpenters.

Hooper admits that the combination has Chicago "hog tied" by the union label. He admits that by excluding outside competition which produces lower priced sashes, doors and interior trim, the Chicago mills will receive some benefit.

Mills Will Unionize.

But Hooper looks a few years ahead. He sees better equipped mills, in smaller communities where living is cheaper, unionizing and coming into Chicago to compete at lower prices with the members of the combination. The union label, now a powerful weapon to keep them out, will be no bar then. But the unions will then have the mill owners neatly wrapped around business agents' thumbs.

In fact Hooper frankly says that he thinks the owners were foolish for entering the agreement. He does not think there is anything illegal about it. But he thinks the high price which has followed on the heels of the combination has prevented building and has stopped the profits that the owners hoped to glean by hooking with the unions.

Forced Into Combination.

But he goes on the explain that the owners were forced into the combination by the cloely knit Carpenters' District Council of Chicago.

"The nub of the whole situation is this," said Hooper; "we could not pay the wages unless we entered a combination that would keep out lower paid, nonunion competition. We either had to pay the union scale or fight strikes at a time when our business was poor because of the war and when many firms were lucky to be breaking even without labor trouble.

"I think that Chicago mills deserve the Chicago business. The big benefit to the mill owner was that it cut off competitors with whom he could not compete. It shut out, for instance, the companies who sell "knock down" doors to builders directly.

"I am glad THE TRIBUNE exposed the whole thing for that reason. The discussion of the subject shows how hard it was for Chicago firms, paying taxes in Chicago, to meet the figures of outside mills which could produce the same material at lower figures. Many of the Chicago mills with a large investment tied up could barely make a living income. It meant that Chicago money went out of the city.

"At the same time the combination builds up the labor unions to an alarming degree. Eventually the mill owners will realize that they are running around in a circle. The final effect of the combination will be to help the unions install union controlled shops throughout the middle west. Then the Chicago companies are back where they started except that they are at the mercies of a group of business agents."

Questions of Rent Payer.

All of this, of course, is from the viewpoint of the mill owner. So the reporter asked a few questions that would occur to a rent payer. With the answers they follow:

"What percentage of the millwork used in the city during normal times was made by Chicago houses?"

"O, from 35 to 40 per cent," answered Hooper.

"Well, then, what would happen if building should be resumed despite the high prices? How would the Chicago mills be able to increase their output 150 to 200 per cent?"

"I don't know."

"Independent mill owners say it can't be done. Chicago's building boom would be throttled or strikes would start if the builders tried to buy outside manufactured stuff."

"I don't know."

Asked About Prices.

"Isn't it a fact that prices on Chicago made, union stamped material are twice as high as those of the big mills of Wisconsin?"

"I don't know much about prices. I guess they are higher. They have to be for the owners to pay the union scale."

"Do you think the combination is legal,"

"We consulted our attorneys before entering into any agreement and they told us the combination was not illegal."

"If I were to purchase ten doors for my bungalow at Oshkosh, for instance, where I could get them at half what I would pay in Chicago, isn't it a fact that the union carpenters, plumbers—in fact, all union men would refuse to work on my house?"

"That's about the situation, I guess. That's what article 3 of the union agreement with the contractors means."

DIES IN MYSTERY

Highland Park Electric Railway Aid Whose Death Starts Inquiry.

Herbert J. Strang

HIGHLAND PARK DEATH PUZZLES LAKE CORONER

Analysis of the stomach contents and brain of Herbert Strang, 39 years old, who died suddenly Thursday midnight at his home, 438 Lincoln place, Highland Park, was ordered yesterday by Coroner John L. Taylor of Lake county.

An inquest was convened Friday, but was continued pending further investigation and the result of the analysis.

Mrs. Strang, who testified, told a reporter she believed death was caused by embolism of the heart. Examination disclosed a blood clot there.

Dies Before Aid Arrives.

The testimoney was that Mr. Strang had eaten heartily at dinner and had retired about 9 o'clock. He awoke about 11:15 and called to Mrs. Strang, whose apartment is on the second floor of the home. She went downstairs. He complained of acute stomach pains. She summoned a physician. He died before he arrived.

Veteran Rail Employé.

Mr. Strang was in comfortable circumstances. He owned his Highland Park home. He had been in the employ of the North Shore Electric line for twenty years. He was the son of Thomas Strang, formerly chairman of the board of supervisors of Lake county.

The funeral services will be held this afternoon at the home, under the auspices of the Highland Park Masonic lodge. Burial will be at Racine.

'HATE A. F. OF L. AND HATE ME,' IS GOMPERS DENIAL

New York, May 17.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, denied today a published statement that he was considering resigning his post as head of the federation.

Mr. Gompers is here presiding over the meetings of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor to make arrangements for the annual convention at Atlantic City next month. He has completely recovered from the injuries received some weeks ago in a taxicab accident.

Mr. Gompers in a statement said:

"The enemies of the American Federation of Labor, who would weaken or destroy it, have every year publicly declared and privately avowed their determination to defeat me at each forthcoming convention. They hid their hatred of the American Federation of Labor by aiming their shafts of bitterness and opposition at me.

"I am neither war-worn nor weary. I am not a quitter, nor can there be any easy berth provided for me. I shall be the president of the American Federation of Labor or a worker among the rank and file.

"When ferreted down, the rumor that I desire to retire from the presidency will be found in the wish of some one who hates me for my Americanism or for my loyalty to the cause of labor."

Woman Reports Theft of $500 in Furs from Auto

Miss Helen P. Gielsdorf, head of G. P. Gielsdorf's, dealers in furs, with offices in the Tower building, 6 North Michigan avenue, reported to the central police last night that furs valued at $500 had been stolen from her automobile in front of the building.

"GRAFT" CHARGE STARTS UPROAR OF ALDERMEN

Realty Agent Denies Kunz Remark on Toman.

A "graft" charge hovered about yesterday's meeting of the city council committee on streets and alleys.

Ald. Stanley H. Kunz nearly broke up the meeting by making a statement that he had been informed that Ald John Toman, chairman of the committee, was to receive $500 for "voting right" on an alley vacation matter, which was before the committee.

The case was that of Louis J. Krejci, a real estate man, who was seeking the vacation of a northwest side alley so plans for a $400,000 theater and store building could be completed to erect it at Irving Park boulevard and Milwaukee avenue.

Cites His Authority.

"I was informed by Krejci that Ald. Toman was to get $500 for having this matter approved," declared Ald. Kunz.

The statement nearly caused hostilities. Ald. Toman was so angry he could not talk.

The real estate man was sent for, and told his story.

"I told Ald. Kunz I was to get $500 as a commission for handling this matter," said Mr. Krejci. "Ald. Kunz must have made a mistake. I said I was to get the $500, not Ald. Toman or anybody else."

The committee then recommended the vacation matter by a vote of 9 to 2.

Toman to Demand Inquiry.

"I shall ask the council to make a thorough investigation of this," said Ald. Toman. "I think it is high time that such loose statements are stopped. I know nothing about this matter other than what every other member of the committee knows. It was sent to a subcommittee, which investigated and recommended to the committee that the vacation be allowed to proceed."

Ald. Kunz did not answer the real estate man's denial.

The visitors will be taken to the Congress hotel, their headquarters during the conference, and will be the guests of honor at a luncheon to be given them today at the Blackstone hotel by Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick.

Simpson, Shot by Wife While in Court, Is Low

Elmer E. Simpson of 126 East Garfield boulevard, shot April 26 by his estranged wife, Mrs. Emma D. Simpson, while in Judge Brothers' courtroom in the county building, was declared to be in a critical condition at St. Luke's hospital last night. Hospital authorities are of the opinion he will not survive the night.

HIT WITH FLATIRON; DIES.

Harry Smith, 47 years old, 47 West Nineteenth street, died in the county hospital yesterday of a skull fracture suffered on Friday when he was beaten on the head with a flatiron by another colored man, believed to have been Joseph Brown, 1822 Federal street. Brown and his wife, Mrs. Josephine Brown, are under arrest.

$93,000 PAPER FOUND IN OFFICE OF EX-BANKER

Prisoner's Keys Open Way in Search for Loot of $135,000.

Liberty bonds and negotiable stock certificates amounting to $93,000 were found by city detectives in the office of John Worthington in the Hartford building yesterday. Using keys found on Worthington when he was arrested Friday night, the detectives began their search for $135,000 worth of securities which are said by the police to have been stolen from the office of the Crittenden Brokerage company in Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.

William Kent, vice president of the Austin Avenue Trust and Savings bank of Oak Park, whose ambition to become president was used by Worthington in an effort to gain control of the bank, according to the police, was released when he satisfied the detectives that he had been ignorant of the charges they hold against Worthington.

Exposed by Ruse.

Kent, known to be an acquaintance of Worthington, was told by the president of the bank, Henry Pillinger, that he could become president if he could raise $17,000 to cover a "note" Pillinger was supposed to owe. This ruse led Kent to expose Worthingtoh's resources and the arrest followed.

Thomas J. Watson, according to the police, made an affidavit that Worthington had approached him in an effort to get rid of some of the stock, which, according to the detectives, has been identified as a part of the loot of the Pittsburgh robbery.

"Joseph Blata," named by Worthington as the man who gave him the securities, is being sought by the detectives in their effort to clean up the case.

In Earlier Bank Trouble.

Worthington has figured in banking operations before, according to police records. In 1914 he started the "American Banking Association bank" in Chicago. It crashed in 1914 and $250,000 in cash disappeared. Worthington was tried but was acquitted in a long legal battle.

Banks Are Undisturbed.

Officials of the Austin State bank, 5645 South boulevard, which had been mentioned incorrectly as the concern with which Kent was connected, prepared to meet demands of all depositors. There were no unusual withdrawals, however. The Austin Avenue Trust and Savings Bank of Oak Park also prepared to meet a run, but no unusual situation developed.

Kent, who resigned as vice president, when taken into custody said at his home, 229 Scoville avenue, Oak Park, last night that he had no suspicion of Worthington.

"I've known him six years," he said. "He was negotiating for a loan of $8,000 on $10,000 securities. This never went through."

CLAIMS 20,000 SEEK TO DODGE U. S. INCOME TAX

Chicago Returns Being Checked; Big Penalty for Evaders.

Declaring one-fourth of the 80,000 nontaxable returns on incomes of Chicagoans show willful evasion or misunderstanding of the exemption rules, G. G. Dunlap, chief of revenue field deputies, announced yesterday that a careful checking of all claims will be made.

A penalty of 50 per cent additional tax, $1,000 to $10,000 fine, and a maximum sentence of one year in jail has been provided by the revenue law for cases of willful attempt to defraud by claiming exemption. For cheating the government by error in making an income tax return, the individual is subject to a 5 per cent additional tax.

Forty-thousand exemption claims by heads of families are being examined to determine whether they comply with the law. The majority of the claimants are young men earning from $1,200 to $1,800, who state they support families or parents.

What Is a Family Head?

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Roper defines the "head of the family" as a person who actually supports or maintains in one household one or more individuals closely connected with him by blood relationship, marriage, or adoption, and whose right to exercise control and provide for these dependent individuals is based on some moral or legal obligation. A man required to maintain his residence away from home because of business is still the head of the family if he finances the home.

Aliens who claim exemption as heads of families living abroad will be compelled to pay tax as their excuse is not legal, the commissioner has ruled.

Investigate Many Reports.

The Chicago income tax bureau is going over all returns made on incomes less than $5,000 and where discrepancies occur in favor of the individual money will be refunded. Where the tax paid was not sufficient notice will be sent the individual to furnish the difference.

SUBMARINE CHASER FLOTILLA TO ASCEND MISSISSIPPI RIVER

New York, May 17.—A flotilla of ships of the type utilized by the United States navy in driving the U-boat from the sea is now under sailing orders at Key West. This anti-submarine flotilla will soon sail for New Orleans and from that port start on a cruise up the Mississippi river and its tributaries on what promises to be the most novel educational expedition which the navy department has ever sent to interior waters. The ships comprising the flotilla have all seen active service, while the officers and the majority of the men in the crews have all had active service in the war zone. Not only will the types of ships be shown afloat, but each will be prepared to give demonstrations of the methods of patrol, guard, and attack upon enemy submarines.

To meet the conditions of Mississippi navigation and the varying drawing depths of the ships, the flotilla will go directly up the river as far as practicable. No stops on this run will be made, except for fuel and supplies. On reaching the head of navigation the cruise will then be laid out in detail, not only for the Mississippi but for all of its tributaries supplying sufficient water for the ships.

"BOMB" ON DESK OF VICTORY LOAN WORKER FIZZLES

A mysterious package was left on the desk of Charles N. Strotz of Winnetka, a vice chairman of the Chicago Liberty loan committee, at 110 South Dearborn street. It was wrapped in brown paper and addressed to "Chas. H. Strotz." Mr. Strotz tore off the wrapper and found a complicated affair of gas pipe and tin.

Patrolman Andrew Johnson was summoned.

"Not muh!" he said, and called the detective bureau. Some one else called the department of justice. Coppers, city detectives, and federal agents poured into the Westminster building.

Enter Sergts. Egan and McDonough of the "dynamite squad." Egan grabbed the "infernal machine." Exit all hands except McDonough.

They carried the thing over to the bureau, where Egan pulled a wooden plug out of each end of the pipe and found—

Nothing.

PETERS, KILLER OF RUSSIA, STOPS SECRET DEATHS

Explains Why He Has Signed 4,500 Warrants to Execute Foes.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.

FOURTH ARTICLE.

MOSCOW, April 23, via Paris, May 17.—"The time for the terror is over. We can fight our internal enemies now with more open legal methods. Today's counter revolutionists can be sentenced only after an open trial before a revolutionary tribunal. No longer does an extraordinary commission for suppression of counter-revolutions, sabotage, and speculation have power secretly to sentence men to death, except in cases of open revolt. At the present moment this power is necessary, but now the revolution is sufficiently settled down and safe to be more tolerant and open."

Peters, chief of the revolutionary tribunals and one of the most hated and feared men of the entire revolution, told me these things yesterday.

"Peters, the Killer."

"The world looks upon you as being a pretty tough citizen," I said when I first met him. "They call you Peters, the killer."

Peters smiled, but it was not a proud smile.

"The people don't understand the Russian revolution," he said. "We have been fighting with our back to the wall. We have had to protect the life of our government. Each of us has had to do the job he has been placed in. The French revolution was made by individuals—the Russian revolution by the communist party. Here we have had a strong communist party discipline. We do what the party orders us to do. I am placed at the head of the revolutionary tribunals, and I have to do my work."

Too Much Party.

Unconsciously, it seemed to me, he has put his finger on the great weakness. This has been a party led revolution. Party orders were above humanity, democracy, everything. Fanatic party loyalty, fetish, doctrines, theories, the cold science of their political philosophy had dehumanized many of them.

The torch of advancement they had been carrying all these years had set them afire until the masses were no longer a people to them, but a class they were trying to free. They were so aflame with ideas of helping the proletariat class they had no time to pity individuals.

Peters went on: "No one knows how we are all hoping for the time when our fighting days are over, and we will be able to put all our strength and energies into building up, and there will be no time for counter revolutions. Most of the executions have been ordered when the revolution and the government was in danger. When we have had comparative peace internally there have been very few cases come up before the extraordinary commission."

4,500 Put to Death.

From the start of the bolshevik revolution up to the first of the present year 4,500 people have been executed in all Russia by order of the extraordinary commission, according to their figures. Of this number, 533 were executed in Moscow and 659 in Petrograd. Peters made a very careful note that, of the 659 shot in Petrograd, 429 were killed in the two tragic Red Terror days in September, at the time of the attempted assassination of Lenine and the assassination of Uritsky, head of the Petrograd extraordinary commission.

The extraordinary commission, Peters argued, was not to be held responsible for the 3,000 executions during the Red Terror, because this was a result of mass terror and direct orders from the local soviets. Of the 533 executed in Moscow, ninety-one were killed during the two days of the Red Terror.

No Lust to Kill?

"We didn't kill those 4,500 just to kill," Peters argued, "but after all they are only 4,500. Think of the men who have given their lives on Russian scaffolds and Siberian prisons for the world. We feel sorry for these 4,500, but just wait a minute and think of the hundreds of thousands who sacrificed themselves for the whole great struggle. The first year after the 1905 revolution Stolypin killed 32,733. Yet the world points to us as real murderers."

I thought of all the tales I had heard of the cruelty of this extraordinary commission and the revolutionary tribunals, and I told him the world held him responsible for these.

Peters shrugged his shoulders and went on talking in a low tired voice. His bulldog face, with its great mane of black hair, bore a pallor that told of long days and nights of hard work. He seemed a very old young man. He told me he was 32 and that he had been a revolutionist since he was 16. I got him to ramble on about himself—Peters, the killer.

"I am a Lett, born near Libau, in the Baltic provinces, son of a peasant. When I was 16 I left home because my father didn't believe in my revolutionary ideas, went to Libau and started working in a factory. I joined a circle of revolutionists there and used to hold meetings in the woods or go out to sea in a boat. The police were persecuting us all the time. When I was 18 I became a professional revolutionist. I was arrested and spent a year and a half in jail before I was tried. I was finally acquitted in Riga and returned to my farm, but in the spring of 1909 the police tried to arrest me, but I escaped.

Escaped to England.

"In 1910 I landed in England and went to work in London, spending in all seven years there. The second year in London I was mixed up in an anarchist row with the police, but I was acquitted. I spent seven years in the same business in London, and when I came to Russia after the February revolution I was a manager of one department.

"I have always favored open trials. Now we have them. Maybe a little later we can even ease up on other things. The present moment is the most critical of our life. If we can stand against our enemies three months longer, we will be solid and secure. But even if they should succeed in crushing the government and killing every one of us, within sixty days there would be disorders, riots, and a new revolution. Then soviets would come again. The working men and peasants are going to demand their own government."

HELD UP IN HOME

Woman Bound and Robbed of $1,000 Gems by Daylight Intruders.

Mrs. C. H. Muetze

Rings and trinkets worth more than $1,000 were the prize in a daylight robbery at the home of C. H. Muetze, 3841 Grand boulevard yesterday. Two young well dressed robbers gained entrance to the Muetze home by a ruse, overpowered Mrs. Muetze, and bound her with her own silk stockings.

"Mr. Muetze sent us to get the key to his automobile," one told her at the door. "We are going to make some repairs on it." Mrs. Muetze, of Japanese birth, turned to get the key. The intruders forced their way in. "Keep your mouth shut, or we'll kill you," said one, producing a revolver.

Mrs. Muetze fought, and was severely bruised and scratched. She was put under the care of a physician later. Three rings and a diamond bracelet were taken, according to the husband, who is connected with Hannah & Hogg, liquor dealers, at Clark and Lake streets. The burglars escaped in a waiting automobile.

Lies the one we love so dearly,
In her lonely, silent grave.
Those who saw her in her casket,
Pure and white and O, so fair,
Thought she was the light of heaven
As she lay so sweetly there.
Just one year today you left us.
How we miss you, mother dear,
And remember all your kindness
As we drop a silent tear.
Oft we thing of you, dear mother,
And our hearts are sad with pain.
O, this world would be a heaven
Could we hear your voice again.
The flowers we lay upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But the love we bear for you, dear mother,
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by your loving children.

YOU CAN OWN A CHOWCHILLA, CALIFORNIA, DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT FARM

Your Profits Start the Second Season

We Farm Your Farm and Divide the Profits

YOU CAN LIVE IN CALIFORNIA LATER —OR BE A STAY=AT=HOME FARMER

Selecting and owning a farm made Safe and Profitable

Most every man with ambition and foresight wants to own some land. In many cases this ambition is a desire to some day own a farm, located within convenient distance from a thriving town or city. Those who have up to this time been compelled by circumstances to live in a city look forward to the day when they can live close to Nature in the open on their own farm. Some men and women are planning and acting upon this desire—with others, without action it will ever be a dream which will never come true.

There are thousands of others who would like to move some day to California—the land of Plenty—the Land of Sunshine and Flowers—the Land of comfortable, all the year around weather where there are no sudden climatic changes—and where every one is happy and prosperous.

But the problem of selecting a farm, where the soil and all conditions are right for growing profitable crops and marketing them—the dread of enduring pioneering hardships and forcing themselves and their families to live remote from the advantages of modern civilization—has kept thousands of men and their families living in the cities who would otherwise satisfy their ambition and desire if they could be SURE—ABSOLUTELY SURE—that selecting and owning a farm could be made both safe and profitable.

This is an indisputable truth which we have proved time and time again during our 64 years' experience in the business of farming and selling land. So in taking over the Chowchilla Ranch and dividing it into 20-Acre Units we have safeguarded your every interest—we have made it possible for the city dweller, as well as the farmer, to own a Chowchilla DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT Farm—to KNOW IN ADVANCE that the Soil, Water, Climate, Transportation and nearby Markets will insure success from the very first. All this has been done for you in advance. Our interests are equal with yours—we have too much money involved to allow a single failure at Chowchilla—your success is our success—because under our plan we farm your farm for you—we share the expense and divide the profits. Later, we turn over to you a valuable, cultivated, improved, crop growing, profit producing farm of which you will be the proud owner.

If, on the other hand, you are not ready to move to your Chowchilla DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT Farm in the Garden Spot of California—we will continue to farm it for you under our crop-sharing plan—and you can be a stay-at-home farmer—without moving to California—without giving up your income, occupation or present business, you can make money at long distance—without physical or mental effort on your part, you will own a profit producing farm—yours to hold or sell, as you please.

Scarcity of foodstuffs and prohibition swell farm owner's bank account

The Farm Journal of Philadelphia, one of the leading and most widely circulated farm publications in this country, in an official announcement states:

"Prohibition will bring about an increased sale of foodstuffs and means more profits for the farmer.

"The liquor people tell us that the annual sales of liquor are $2,455,639,634, as shown by the taxes paid to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. An offhand calculation shows that one-third of this sum will continue to be spent for amusements, movies, and soft drinks. Of the balance, $1,637,093,000, 40% will be spent for FOODSTUFFS.

"This means that the farmer will have an immediate demand for more crops—$654,837,235 MORE DEMAND, to be exact. And part of this increased expenditure will go back to the farmer—say, $163,709,308. Then the increased demand for popcorn, confections, etc., will send more millions into the farmer's bank account, or say, $820,000,000 in all.

"The crop value for 1918 was over $24,000,000,000, or an AVERAGE of $3,700 per farm, so that the increased crop sale, one entirely due to prohibition, will virtually be a 10% increase per farm for the entire country."

And please note, the above figures are the AVERAGE—mostly farms where only one crop can be grown each year—while Chowchilla Farmers grow two money making full crops each year—and two crops annually mean DOUBLE-PROFITS.

The figures quoted above, too, show an average for the entire United States, whereas the average ANNUAL INCOME of farmers in one of the middle west states was in excess of $7,000 during 1917, and over $8,000 during 1918.

Then the United States farmer must raise sufficient foodstuffs to feed the 46,000,000 people who live in our cities and towns and to help feed at least 300,000,000 almost starving Europeans.

Any one who is abreast of the times or who looks into the future will readily agree that RIGHT NOW is the time to invest in LAND—the basis of all wealth—and that the big profits will be made by the producer of food.

If you are a farmer, or own an interest in a farm—read this

Since our ancestors landed on the Atlantic shores, civilized progress and farm development has been westward. The breaking up of the virgin soil and converting the raw land into improved farms has moved from East to West. For this reason some of the richest virgin land, such as the San Joaquin Valley of California, in which Chowchilla is located, has been left to the last.

Another reason is that the land around Chowchilla has up until recent years consisted of vast ranches reserved for cattle raising—but for some time this land has been TOO VALUABLE for cattle grazing. The Chowchilla ranch is now being rapidly converted into small, medium sized and large cultivated farms under a plan which interests the city man and the farmer alike.

Farmers are buying these farms—farmers from the richest sections of the middle west. The first farmers who have settled at Chowchilla have MADE GOOD—other farmers are following them. Once a farmer visits Chowchilla and personally investigates, he almost invariably buys a larger acreage than his original purchase.

A farmer from one of the best sections in Illinois visited Chowchilla last February and wired: "I bought 40 acres Chowchilla land under your contract. I am so well satisfied that I have today bought and paid for 120 acres more."

An Iowa farmer wires: "I purchased 40 acres of your Chowchilla land and today inspected same. I was so pleased with your land and farming operations that I increased my purchase to 160 acres. Everything as represented."

This Illinois farmer wired: "I have examined the land, 40 acres purchased under your contract, and after having gone all over it I bought 120 acres more. I can produce four times as much on one acre of this land under irrigation as I can on land in Illinois."

We have in our office, ready for your inspection, these original telegrams and many others just as convincing.

"If this land produces two profitable crops yearly, why haven't the farmers bought it all up?"

There are farmers today working out their lives on clay knobs, and hill sides where the top soil is only a few inches deep, others where the lack of rain means crop failures, others spending thousands of dollars to reclaim swamp land, others where the irrigation system cannot be depended upon and still others where the soil can only produce a limited variety of crops and ONLY ONE CROP ANNUALLY. And more prosperous farmers in other sections wonder why.

During our 64 years, we have found that certain farmers stuck to their farms because it had been handed down to them by their father or grandfather—and another class bought and located on a farm because they happened to be born and raised in that vicinity—and others are farming today in certain sections because when they moved there they investigated NO OTHER SECTION OF THE COUNTRY.

Farmers have not been great travelers in the past—but each year more and more are making investigations which sometimes require a considerable journey. They are making farming a BUSINESS. They are moving to other sections where a larger variety of more profitable crops can be raised and where two full crops can be raised each year, such as at Chowchilla.

If a manufacturer bought all of his raw material from one place and did not investigate other sources of supply, he could not make a success of his business. The farmer who does not investigate other farming sections may spend his entire life earning a bare existence, whereas the same amount of time and effort in another section would make him wealthy in a comparatively short time.

What farmers at Chowchilla say:

You will find the telegrams which we have previously reproduced in this announcement, as well as the letters from Chowchilla farmers below, reproduced in full in our Book, "TWIN-PROFIT FARMS," with names and addresses.

We invite you to make a Profit-Investigation Trip to Chowchilla—talk to the farmers—meet them face to face—hear what they have to say—ask any questions you wish—make your own investigation in your own way. We give you below excerpts from some of the letters we have received recently from farmers at Chowchilla.

Farmer H. K writes: "I now have 20 acres in Alfalfa, 10 acres in barley, which will be followed by another crop this season. This is two-crop land and the fall crop is just as big as the spring crop and the land is better for the cultivation of two crops. Last winter I fed 24 head of dairy cows and my returns were $300 a month from butter fat. The weather never interferes with farm work and the abundant water (irrigation) makes all crops sure. A man does not have his work wasted by drought or floods. There is always a nice breeze and nights are always cool throughout the summer."

Another Chowchilla farmer writes: "My second cutting of Alfalfa this season amounted to two tons to the acre, now worth $20 a ton loose. This season's total will be 9 or 10 tons to the acre. I have two acres in canteloupes this season, and they are good for $200 to $500 per acre."

This farmer grows Alfalfa: "I make 9 to 10 tons of Alfalfa to the acre. I have 30 acres which will give me, at 9 tons per acre, 270 tons The Alfalfa will bring me a gross return of at least $5,000."

Another Chowchilla farmer writes: "I have been here two years. We have two acres of canteloupes this season, good for not less than $200 an acre. Our Alfalfa is good for 7 to 8 tons to the acre."

This Chowchilla farmer was formerly an Iowan: "Have recently increased my holdings to more than 400 acres. My brother, a practical farmer and graduate of Ames Agricultural College, has invested heavily in land in this country. Between us we now own 700 acres. In all my experience in dealing in land, and I have owned land in a great many states, both irrigated and non-irrigated, I have never seen anything that compares at all with San Joaquin Valley, especially Chowchilla. They raise enormous crops of all the staples, besides citrus and deciduous fruits. In fact, anything will grow here that will grow anywhere. A man can succeed here beyond all expectations in general farming line, namely: Cattle, hogs and alfalfa. The method of irrigation is far superior to the ordinary gravity system. Each man has individual control over his own water."

For obvious reasons we do not give names and addresses, you will find them in our Book, "TWIN-PROFIT FARMS

These Twin-Profit Farms come recommended to you by actual purchasers

You remember what Abraham Lincoln said about no one being able to fool all the people all the time. Those who have gone to Chowchilla and made a personal investigation have purchased. In making YOUR investigation you should consider the class of people who have invested at Chowchilla. These DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT FARMS come recommended to you by actual owners—and these owners include Farmers, Retired Farmers, Farm Renters, Farmers' Sons, Country Bankers—all men who KNOW LAND VALUES—as well as Big Business Men, Professional Men and Women, Investors, City Men, Salaried Men of all classes.

At Chowchilla you will find that the land has a rich Silt Top Soil of unusual depth which produces bumper crops and bumper profits. If this land produced only one crop each year instead of two crops, you would agree that this was a wonderfully profitable farming country.

In addition to having beforehand assurance that this land will produce money earning crops, you also want to know that the living conditions are right and that there will be no difficulty in transporting the crops to markets where they can be sold. A great deal of the crops raised can be sold right on the ground, and there are nearby markets, easily accessible, where top notch prices are paid for everything which will be grown on your TWIN-PROFIT FARM.

Chowchilla is situated on the San Joaquin Valley Division of the Southern Pacific Railway, 38 miles northwest of Fresno, a city of more than 80,000 inhabitants.

There are over 2,000 people now living at Chowchilla, about one-third in the city and the balance on surrounding farms. Chowchilla is growing very fast—it is a modern, attractive, beautiful city, well laid out, with water works system, electric lights, concrete walks, modern business houses, large hotel to which a $40,000 addition is being built, a $60,000 high school, grain elevator, creamery, two national banks, churches, excellent school system, rural mail delivery, moving picture theater, concrete boulevards for motoring. Every one who visits Chowchilla is simply delighted with it—and it is surrounded in all directions by thriving, prosperous towns.

When you own a farm at Chowchilla you are not "putting all of your eggs in one basket." You do not have to depend upon your profits from some single crop like wheat or corn or potatoes or fruits.

Just to give you an idea of the endless variety of different kinds of crops which can be grown with profit on your Chowchilla DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT FARM, we will mention some of them here.

Take Alfalfa, for example. Your Chowchilla Farm will yield from 6 to 7 cuttings of Alfalfa. The first year Alfalfa is started, it will produce up to 6 or 7 tons per acre—the second year and each year thereafter at least 8 to 10 tons to the acre. The cash price for Alfalfa ranges from $18 to $25 per ton.

Now let us consider some other profit earners, such as Canteloupes, which earn about $300 per acre—Potatoes are harvested in nine months in the year—Chowchilla's great field crop, Beans, also is a big profit earner.

From 60 to 75 bushels of corn is not unusual—then a second crop of something else. Another profitable crop is spinach—no trouble to find a cash market—the canners will contract for your crop before it is planted.

There are many big profit earning crops you can raise at Chowchilla when the land in many other sections of the United States is unproductive during the winter months.

You will find all of the big paying Fruits and Vegetables at Chowchilla—the center of the famous Raisin country—the Muscat Raisin Vineyards. At Chowchilla a common expression is "Fortunes in Figs—the earnings of the Calimyra Figs will simply astound you.

Owing to the mild, temperate all-the-year-around growing climate, the wonderful productivity of this richest of California soil—the perpetual sunshine—the unequaled Irrigation System at Chowchilla—these productive farms are constantly setting new records for net profits.

There is a waiting World Market for California Foodstuffs—no other state has so many special profitable crops—big money earners that are not grown much or successfully anywhere else—such as Figs, Olives, Almonds, Apricots, Raisins, Walnuts, Pomegranates, Hard-Flesh Peaches, Japanese Persimmons, Early Canteloupes—the soil in the field, the vines and the trees compete with each other to raise profitable crops for you every month in the year.

DEMPSEY APPROVES TRAINING CAMP ON LAKE NEAR TOLEDO

rns' Hit Paves Way to ackmen's Victory in First Clash.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Connie Mack's lowly but ambitious g Athletics copped the opening of their series with the White yesterday with the aid of the an- lady with the scissors who con- the destinies of the world. Score to 0.

Claude Williams and Tom Rogers, of the St. Louis Browns, hooked in a slab battle that proved a corker the aid of a strong northwest to help them. The verdict was in the second inning, when Burns smote a drive to right and it got away from Leibold for scratch three bagger. He scored a nt later on a line drive by Walk- to Felsch so deep that Hap could cut off the run at the plate.

That was the net result of all the sive effort on both sides. Only hits were rung up by each team. The defense was not only perfect but lliant at times.

Liebold Caught Off Second.

Liebold seemed to be chosen by Fortune as the goat of the occa- Nemo indulged in a nap in the inning of the game and lost the a chance that might have scored a Nemo led off with a double. Weaver tried to bunt, but popped out Burns. While Collins was up Lie- was caught off second and run to th by the majority of the visiting Collins nearly knocked Rogers with a swift slam, but the pitcher overed in time to throw him out.

Most of the action came off in the round. Burns led with a smash right that looked like a single or but the pill hopped past Lie- and the runner reached third. Walker slammed a liner to center and Felsch copped it, but Burns scored the catch. Dugan was punc- by a curve, but the next two easy for Williams.

Rogers Walks Three in Row.

In the home second with one out Felsch beat out an infield hit, but was stealing second in a miscued hit run play. That proved costly be- Rogers lost his bearings for a spell. He passed Gandil, Ris- and Schalk in succession, filling bags. Williams tried to work him another walk, but was forced to and struck out.

The Gleasons made only two more off Rogers in seven rounds and had one more chance to register. Schalk opened the fifth with a single was sacrificed ahead by Williams, neither Leibold nor Weaver could him in.

The Athletics stung Williams for two in the fourth without getting a to second base. Burns caromed safely off Risberg in deep short but nailed stealing just before Walker a safety to right. On the first pitched Walker was caught trying steal. In fact, the Athletics found Schalk's throwing a stone wall against their base running efforts, for he nailed of them, and that was all who to steal.

Kerr Pitches Last Round.

Williams gave way to Murphy, who failed to pinch hit in the eighth, and that brought Kerr to the slab for the final round. He was tagged for a single but struck out two men, and Schalk doubled up the runner on an attempt to steal second.

Collins gave the Sox an opening in the last half by working Rogers for a Jackson passed up the bunt stuff soaked one on the nose harder than ever hit in his life before, but it went straight at Shannon's feet and re- in a double play. Felsch struck out.

LINEUP OF CUBS MADE OVER, BUT RAIN HALTS PLAY

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 17.—[Special.]—Rain, which arrived at Ebbets field five minutes before game time today, made it impossible for the Cubs and Robins to battle and prevented Boss Mitchell of the Chicagoans from trying out a new combination of players which he thought would be a winner.

The Cubs' leader gave the batting order a violent shaking up, inserted King Lear at second base, moving Pick to third and sending Deal to the bench. Pick was to be lead off man, Flack hitting second, Hollocher third, and Lear placed in the cleanup spot with Barber, Merkle, and Mann following in the order named.

Mental Treatment Cures Lear.

The complete change might not have been possible except for the gallant service of a psychopathic healer, who gave Lear a mental treatment at the hotel this morning and apparently cured his lame shoulder. Neither Lear nor Mitchell could believe it for a time, but the big infielder had to admit the shoulder stopped hurting. Mitchell decided right there to put him in the game, and at practice before the rain he was throwing apparently without any pain.

The game wasn't finally called off until ten minutes to 4. About 3:30 o'clock the clouds broke away and men appeared with sponges and buckets to sop up the water. Soon it began raining again and all hope vanished.

Crowd of 10,000 Disappointed.

There was a crowd of about 10,000 on hand. If the weather clears up, Alexander will go in against Pfeffer tomorrow. The two stars were warmed up for action today.

NOTES

Philadelphia again today.

Rogers couldn't beat the White Sox while with the Browns, but the change of raiment changed his luck.

Walker broke his pet bat making a base hit to right in the fourth inning and could' get nothing but a base on balls the next time he came up.

All the flags at Comiskey park were at half-mast yesterday out of respect for the late Herman Schaefer, whose body arrived in Chicago in the afternoon.

Walker stole a clean hit off Gandil's bat in the seventh by running in and taking the ball off his shoe tops.

Felsch was robbed of a hit in the fourth by a great play, in which Thomas and Burns collaborated. It had to be a one handed play at both ends to beat Hap out of his safety.

Felsch saved Williams some trouble in the seventh. Hap went far back into right center and pulled down a terrific wallop by Burns to start the round. Walker drew a pass. Dugan popped a fly to short right and Collins muffed it, but recovered in time to force out Walker at second. Dugan tried to steal and was pinched.

Secretary Grabiner of the White Sox announced that Pitcher Grover Lowdermilk had been obtained for the Gleasons by the waiver route. If the effect of being discarded by the Browns has as good an effect on Lowdermilk as it did on Rogers yesterday, the White Sox may have located a "find."

JOHNSON STARS AS WOLVERINES UPSET MAROONS

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 17.—[Special.]—Michigan defeated Chicago in the first meet of the season, 93 to 42. A strong cold wind precluded the best work being done.

Speer of Chicago was the Midway's best point gainer, getting eight as against Johnson's twenty for Michigan.

The surprise was the result of the javelin throw in which Michigan won all three places, while even Coach Farrell had conceded it to Chicago before the event took place. Jackson and Schneberger were the only two Maroons who qualified for this event.

Graham of Chicago broke the Ferry field record in the pole vault, clearing the bar at 12 feet 3 inches, which is three inches better than the previous record.

Benz Won't Go to A. A.; Will Hurl for Hawthornes

Pitcher Joe Benz, the veteran White Sox pitcher released to Kansas City of the American association, will pitch for the Hawthorne Electrics today against the Gunthers at Gunther park. Benz flatly refused to go to the Kaws. His complaint is the same as that of Lefty Sullivan, the Gunther pitcher whom Comiskey released to the A. A. Benz always has been a spitball pitcher, and the spitter is barred in the association, so Joe figures he can do much better with the semi-pros of Chicago.

Pinch hitters who hit won a wild battle for Michigan from Chicago, 4 to 3, in a great ball game between the two traditional rivals on Stagg field.

The Maroons entered the ninth one run to the good. Coach Lundgren sent Pheney and then Schluntz, who whaled terrific triples. These swats tied the score and Coach Page replaced Crisler with Terhune, who got two men out. Bowerman came through with a lusty double over Cole's head, winning the game. Cole brought the inning to a close by going into deep center and dragging down Garrett's liner with his bare fist.

Parks went to the slab for the Wolverines in the ninth and Sproehnle nearly tied up the ball game with a clout that started for Cottage Grove avenue, but Bowerman caught it back hand with one mitt after a long chase.

Big Ed Bowerman, whose daddy caught Matty many years ago on the New York Giants, was the Michigan star with two doubles and his great catch. Sproehnle featured for the Maroons with a home run and a triple. He was robbed of two other hits. Cole, Garrett, Knode, Karpus, and Hinkle pulled additional fielding sparklers.

12 ROUND LIMIT FOR TITLE FIGHT LOWEST EVER SET

Dempsey's Speed Considered by Rickard in Selecting Toledo.

BY RAY PEARSON.

With everything set for the world's championship fistic battle between Champion Jess Willard and Challenger Jack Dempsey at Toledo, O., on the afternoon of July 4, there is a lot of "stuff" that will be written to interest the followers of the glove sport.

It is worth mentioning here that a lot of those fellows who had been declaring this battle never would take place, are backing water now. They are fickle gents, these fellows, which is clearly proved by the fact that they have become boosters for the bout. Where they used to say: "Wait till they fight," they are now saying, "We'll be off for Toledo on July 4."

Unique as Title Contest.

There are a lot of things concerning this championship which differ from other contests in which the title was at stake. Never in the history of glove sport, and that dates back to 1891, has a championship ever been scheduled for twelve rounds.

There have been seven championship battle in which the title changed hands since James J. Corbett battered John L. Sullivan into exhaustion and defeat in New Orleans on March 7, 1891. That was twenty-eight years ago, and the men who have worn the crown since that time, including Corbett, were Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Jeffries, Marvin Hart, Tommy Burns, Jack Johnson, and the present titleholder, Jess Willard.

Twelve Rounds Under Average.

If all these title bouts were thrown into a bunch and an average taken of the number of rounds required to return a winner, it would show that twelve rounds, the number scheduled for the Willard-Dempsey bout, is not enough. The average shows a fraction less than seventeen rounds was needed to decide the contests. Following is a bit of dope showing the number of rounds required in bouts in which the title changed hands:

James J. Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan, New Orleans, 21 rounds.

James J. Jeffries knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons, Coney Island, 11 rounds. (Jeffries retired with title.)

Marvin Hart knocked out Jack Root, Reno, Nev., 12 rounds.

Jack Johnson knocked out Tommy Burns, Sydney, Australia, 14 rounds.

Jess Willard knocked out Jack Johnson, Havana, Cuba, 26 rounds.

With the average nearly five rounds more than the limit set for the Willard-Dempsey bout, the question naturally is asked: "Will twelve rounds be sufficient to return a decisive winner at Toledo?" Twelve rounds was enough in two of the championships of the past, for Jeffries won the crown in eleven and Hart acquired the title in twelve. All of the others, however, went longer than twelve rounds.

Dempsey May Win in Twelve.

The writer is one of those who believes that one dozen rounds will be enough for the bout at Toledo. That opinion is formed after much consideration has been given the style of fighting of the challenger, Jack Dempsey. In execution Dempsey is undoubtedly the fastest worker the heavyweight ranks ever have known, with the single exception of James J. Corbett. He is a fast moving fighter, not a boxer; and he is a knockout hitter, carrying the sleep producing wallop in either hand. He is young, simply loaded with nervous energy, and doesn't know the meaning of the term "stalling."

If Willard alone were considered, or if the champion's opponent were any other than Dempsey, we would say that a dozen rounds wouldn't do at all. Big Jess is a slow worker. He fights methodically and, judging by the bout with Jack Johnson, in which he won the title, he depends on wearing his man down to win. It took him twenty-six rounds to stop Johnson, and according to a number of ringsiders, the Negro was not knocked out cold, but fell from exhaustion.

Reason for Picking Toledo.

When Tex Rickard picked Toledo he evidently took Dempsey's fast boxing into consideration. Tex was even willing to allow his attraction to go to a city where no more than ten rounds is the limit, but by doing that, he couldn't get a decision. He could get a decision in Ohio in a twelve round bout, and that seemed satisfactory.

CHARLEY WHITE HURT, BOUT OFF

Denver, Colo., May 17.—Charley White of Chicago, lightweight boxer, scheduled to meet Harvey Thorpe of Kansas City in a twenty round bout here May 30, has canceled his engagement. Jack Kanner, promoter, received word that White sustained a fractured rib while boxing with Capt. Bob Roper, a heavyweight, in a Victory loan publicity match in Chicago. Efforts are being made to secure a boxer to take his place.

WILLARD WEIGHS 261; EXPECTS TO BATTLE DEMPSEY AT 245

Los Angeles, Cal., May 17.—Jess Willard announced today that he would leave Los Angeles about May 27 and would go to Toledo direct to his heavy training, without making the previously projected side trips or stops.

Willard said he intended to step into the ring at 245 pounds, adding he weighed 239½ when he met Johnson, and 249 when he fought Moran.

Jess admitted he could not get down to the Johnson weight, although he and his trainers said he had been getting off the tonnage at the rate of a half pound a day this week.

Willard's training schedule now includes twenty minutes' fast work a day. He boxes one or more rounds, shadow boxes a bit, wrestles a little and does a strenuous turn wtih the weights and pulleys. After that program his wind seems pretty good. Then he parboils a while in sweat towels and gets on the scales. Yesterday the scales showed 261.

HINKY DINK HIDES BEHIND A BEARD AND PLAYS GOLF!

Hot Springs, Ark., May 17.—[Special.]—The discovery that Ald. Michael Kenna of Chicago, better known as "Hinky Dink," is a devotee of golf and plays here every day is a topic of greater interest in Hot Springs than Germany's reluctance to sign the peace terms.

This is the alderman's third season of play on the links, but he kept his identity unknown until today a Chicagoan recognized him. He was known on the links as "Mr. Smith."

Ald. Kenna and his wife came to the springs ten days ago. They are staying at the Arlington.

For several days golf players have been wondering who was the quiet little man, neatly attired, who showed an aversion to getting acquainted with his companions.

Became a Sphinx.

He was polite in his manners, but when anybody attempted to get "pally" with him the little gray haired man became a sphinx. He played a fairly good game, making the eighteen holes in about 100 strokes. To his caddy and others he was known as "Mr. Smith."

"An eccentric fellow," was what the other players said of him. No one dreamed that he was the celebrated "Hinky Dink," alderman of the First ward, Chicago, and a figure of national importance in Democratic politics.

Unmasked at Last.

But this afternoon he was unmasked. A Chicagoan, who has known Kenna several years, recognized him as he was teeing off. Kenna readily admitted his identity, but asked that the matter be not made public at the hotels. Players who overheard the conversation between Kenna and his friend told the story and tonight it is the talk of the Arlington and other hotels.

BATH NOT SURPRISED.

Ald. John (Bathhouse) Coughlin expressed no surprise when told of his colleague's doings at Hot Springs.

"I knew that sucker was playing golf for two or three years," said Coughlin. "When he went to the Springs two years ago he bought a golf outfit here in Chicago. It makes no difference how I found it out. He bought brassies, puttee, shoes, knee breeches, cap, sweater, and everything that goes with a complete outfit.

Bought Whiskers, Too.

"I also learned that he bought a set of gray whiskers, which I suppose he wore on the golf links for a disguise. Now that he has got so he can play the game pretty well he has discarded the 'lilacs.'

"I told half a dozen persons of my suspicions, but they all laughed at me. Now, you see, I was right."

"Baldy" Sowers, lifelong friend of "Hink," said he wouldn't believe the Hot Springs story unless he heard the alderman himself make a confession of guilt.

"I think I know the little fellow as well as anybody," said "Baldy." "And I'm not going to swallow this dope from the Springs. The country going dry July 1 and Hinky Dink playing golf! What the —— are we coming to?

NINES OF A. E. F. IN TITLE SERIES

PARIS, May 15.—Baseball teams representing the various divisions making up the American army of occupation began a series of championship games on Wednesday. Gen. Pershing and Maj. Gen. Lejeune, commander of the 2d division, saw the 1st division team defeat the 2d division by a score of 7 to 5 at Montaubaur. Ten thousand doughboys watched the contest. At Andernatch the 3d division beat the 4th, 17 to 4.

Baseball has spread northward into Holland, where Americans and Dutchmen employed at the American base at Rotterdam have formed a league.

Guy Robgood, Oregon Agricultural college, two miler; Private Goodnight, Texas college, middle distance runner; H. L. Smith, Swarthmore, pole vaulter, and Lieut. West, Stanford university, high jumper, have arrived here and are training for the interallied track meet to be held in Paris next month.

'WISH I'D FIGHT JESS TOMORROW,' JACK DECLARES

All 2,500 Ringside Seats Bought Up by Fans at $60 Each.

Toledo, O., May 17.—Although the heavyweight championship battle between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey is nearly seven weeks away, Tex Rickard, promoter of the contest, announced tonight that virtually all of the $60 tickets, the choice ringside seats, had been sold. The number of these reservations had exceeded all expectations. The tickets will be mailed to the prospective purchasers Monday. The number of $60 seats is limited to 2,500.

Officials of the Detroit A. C. placed an order for 500 $60 seats, while the Elks of Detroit requested 5,000 seats of various prices. The Detroit lodge has arranged to charter a special boat to bring 2,000 members to the contest.

Dempsey Inspects Training Sites.

With a party of friends, Dempsey and Manager Jack Kearns motored along the shores of Lake Erie and Maumee bay this afternoon in search of a training camp for the heavyweight challenger. Half a dozen prospective spots were inspected, but the one particularly favored is located on Maumee bay, about a mile from the site of the arena.

It is a former clubhouse of fourteen rooms, containing a billiard room, a room for dancing, and other attractive features. It is situated within a stone's throw of the bay, and the fishing and swimming facilities proved an alluring attraction to Dempsey. It is considered an ideal location and can be easily reached from the heart of the city five miles distant.

Dempsey Yearns for Battle.

Kearns announced that he would close a deal Monday and start work on the construction of an outdoor gymnasium so Dempsey can settle down to his training grind. The heavyweight challenger was delighted with the proposed camp. He was so enthused that he told friends that he wished tomorrow was the Fourth of July and that he was being called into the ring to face Willard.

"The place is big enough for me to entertain a lot of friends, and I know I shall enjoy every minute," Dempsey said. "I won't come into town unless it's absolutely necessary. When I am not on the road or working in the gymnasium, I'll spend my time fishing and later swimming."

Rickard Defers Departure.

Rickard postponed his departure for New York tonight until tomorrow. He expects to return to Toledo about the middle of the week to complete the remaining details for the championship battle.

WANT BEST SEATS HERE.

That tickets allotted to Chicago for the Willard-Dempsey bout will find speedy sale is indicated by the number of applications received by Ernie Young, who is to handle the ducats, and the local fans will need to get on their toes if they expect to be placed on July 4. It seems that most of the local fans who have made applications want the best, which means the $60 seats.

Just how many of these high priced seats will come here for sale has not been learned, and it probably will not be known until the tickets show up next Tuesday or Wednesday. It is understood, however, that the Chicago allotment is $100,000 worth of pasteboards, which includes tickets at various prices.

Ticket Manager Here Today.

Frank Flournoy, the Memphis man who is associated with Tex Rickard in the promotion of the bout, is in charge of all the tickets. Flournoy is expected in Chicago either today or tomorrow to superintend the local sale, but probably will not remain here more than a day or two. While Flournoy is here Rickard will be in New York on a like mission.

Jim Corbett Asked to Referee Vancouver Bout

Vancouver, B. C., May 17.—James J. Corbett has been asked by Tommy Burns, former world's heavyweight champion, to referee the Canadian-Australian middleweight championship bout here May 24 between Mickey King of Australia and Frank Barrieau. The bout is scheduled for fifteen rounds, but will be extended to twenty rounds if no decision is possible at the end of the fifteenth.

Fox and Browns Maul to a Draw in Philadelphia

Plaudit, '98 Derby Winner Drops Dead at Lexington

Lexington, Ky., May 17.—[Special.]—Plaudit, winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1898, and other big stake races, dropped dead at Hamburg Place. The carcas of the brown son of Himyar and Imp. Cinderella was buried near those of the great race mares, Imp and Ida Pickwick and the trotting champion, Nancy Hanks. Plaudit was foaled in 1895, the property of Dr. J. D. Neet of Versailles.

BIG LEAGUE SPURS IN SIGHT

Dick Kerr

Dick Kerr of the White Sox still has his spurs to win as a major league pitcher, but not as a big league player. He has pitched good baseball in spots but has been bad in others. As a batsman and base runner and in fielding his position he is one of the best and wisest recruits that has come into fast company in years.

Active Age Proves Real Quality

Like warriors grown gray in harness, and white-haired employes still on the job, a scuffed and scarred set of Silvertown Cords on an ancient car somehow best tells the story of the matchless service of these patrician tires.

The graceful, well-groomed elegance, with which they when new adorn smart cars, may be shabby; their tough tread worn smooth; but their distinction remains.

Once a Silvertown always a Silvertown. You know them, old or new, for aristocrats.

In their age, you read the history of their wonderful endurance; their useful career of miles and miles of road roughing.

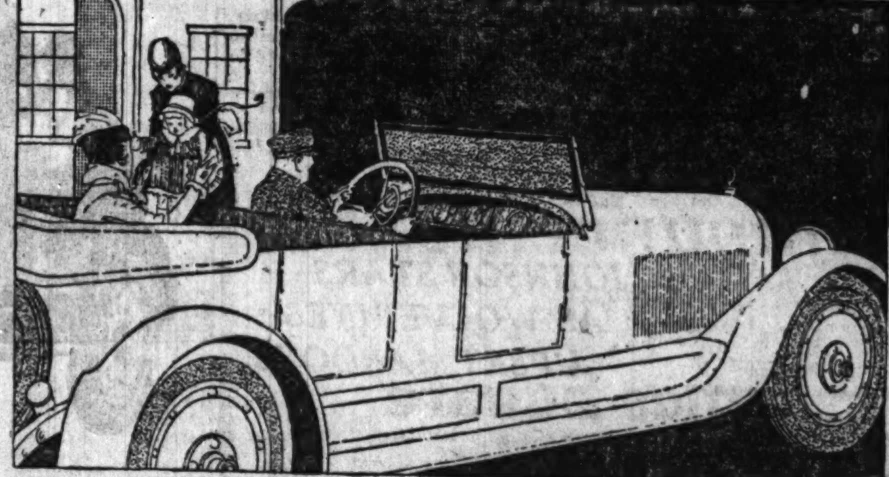
JORDAN



People Demand Light Weight

Thousands of owners now know that Jordan cars possess that peculiar quality of balance which cannot be attained in cars weighing from twelve to fifteen hundred pounds more—nor in extremely light cars of short wheel base.

People demand light weight—but not too light. There must be no ruinous side sway—no jerky up and down vibration.

The new Jordan Silhouette is the lightest car on the road for its wheel base—but perfectly balanced—accurately suspended. Its whole tendency is toward forward movement without side sway.

Many a man who felt it necessary to pay a high price and get a heavy car in order to attain reliability has chosen the Jordan because it combined quality with light weight and perfect balance.

The body is all-aluminum. Smart French angle at dash. Perfectly flat top-edge—without a trace of bevel. Gun metal instrument board. Artistic hardware. Innovation in tonneau equipment. Tailored top. Character in every detail.

The Silhouette finished in Brewster Green or Burgundy Old Wine is built in both four and seven passenger capacities.

OAK PARK TAKES ILLINI PREP MEET —HYDE PARK 2D

University High Captures Class B Title, Giving Cook County a Sweep.

Urbana, Ill., May 17.—[Special.]—High school athletes from the Chicago district ran over the pick of Illinois prep stars in the Illinois interscholastic meet today. Oak Park took the Class A championship with 48 points, and Hyde Park added to Chicago's laurels by winning second honors with 30 points. In Class B University High of Chicago carried away the premier prize with 19 points, beating Georgetown to the wire by three markers.

In keeping with the team performances, Coffin of Oak Park won the individual trophy by taking the century and 220 yard dashes, besides helping the Chicago suburbanites annex the relay.

No Records Broken.

Southard of Edwardsville was runner-up for individual honors by virtue of his performances in the class B dashes. The little southern Illinois runner was the only athlete to equal a record, which he did in the fifty yard dash. No records were broken.

Meyers of Altoona and Furniss of Mattoon, in the weights, made excellent records.

The class B competition was close, with numerous schools breaking into the point column. University High, hitherto in class A, found itself in the larger division because its attendance is less than 400 pupils. Therefore it was eligible to compete with the smaller schools, and found worthy rivals in Georgetown, Champaign, Urbana, and other likely little teams.

Oak Park's team scored in thirteen of seventeen events, which gives some idea of its balance.

Scorer

FROM the fertile brain of Alexander H. Revell, one of the best of the old guard players of the middle west, comes a suggestion for an improved score card. It is an idea leading towards a standard card, although the different distances in the holes at each club would prevent precise standardization. The idea, nevertheless, is worthy of adoption.

Mr. Revell suggests the omission of the bogie score, now practically obsolete. His main suggestion is to place the handicap figures between the scores of the opposing players and to ring these numbers to indicate they are the handicap figures in counter distinction to the number of the hole or par.

He suggests making the handicap figures as large as possible, as many average players are well along in years and usually wear distance glasses, through which it is difficult to see small figures from close range. The handicap is important for the average player to see often. In fact, it is the only thing, aside from keeping score and occasionally noting the length of a hole, for which a card is called into use.

WESTERN GOLF MEET ATTRACTS NATION'S STARS

Ouimet, Guilford, Anderson, and Others to Play in Amateur Tourney.

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—From present indications the field for the western amateur golf championship in June will have all the appearances of a national event. Francis Ouimet, former amateur and open title holder, has written from Boston to say he will without doubt be on hand to defend.

Ouimet also says Jesse Guilford, Massachusetts champion, will be a sure entry in the tournament at the Sunset Hills Country club, as will John G. Anderson of this city.

Oswald Kirkley of Englewood, N. J., Metropolitan champion, and Max Marston of Baltusrol also want to go west again. Business has claimed much of Jerome Travers' time during the last few years, but he wrote in answer to the W. G. A. invitation that there was nothing he would like to do better, and said he would try to arrange his dates so as to get away for a couple of weeks in June.

Robert Gardner, former Yale golfer, who won the national amateur championship title in 1909 and 1915, will be one of the contenders in the national event at Oakmont this year.

SHOTS ON THE LINKS

By JOE DAVIS

SECRETARY JAMES H. BARNARD yesterday issued the program for the twentieth annual amateur championship of the Western Golf association, to be held at Sunset Hill Country club, St. Louis, Mo., June 16 to 21.

The first qualifying round, at eighteen holes, will be held June 16, the sixty-four lowest scores playing eighteen holes the following morning, the thirty-two low scores for the thirty-six holes, qualifying for the first match round, at eighteen holes, in the afternoon. The three remaining rounds will be at thirty-six holes.

Entries, which must be made through the club secretaries, close June 9 with Mr. Barnard, Consumers building, Chicago.

The second number of the Members' Bulletin of the Evanston Golf Club gives notice of the opening of the new course on Memorial day morning, when a class handicap will be played. In the afternoon there will be a handicap and a mixed foursome.

Among the cups offered are the Inauguration cup, donated by W. H. Redington; the President's cup, given by C. Fred Yegge; the MacDonald trophy, Directors' cup, junior championship trophy, Liberty cup, Victory cup, Harvest cup, and Ringers' cup.

Charles Evans Jr. has been elected an honorary member, and Carey Orr, editor of the "Tiny Tribune," has become a member.

Hamilton Gibson, editor of the Bulletin, has presented nine framed pictures of English, Scotch, and European courses. They contain thirty-six photographs, and show how bunkers, hazards, fairways, and greens are constructed abroad.

Roque is to be made a feature of the club, E. J. Phillips being chairman of the committee.

Another interesting note is: "Rhubarb for sale, from the club gardens. Soft, ripe, and juicy—a fine spring tonic."

The annual booklet containing the season's program at Glen View, which is always a thing of beauty, is off the press. The view of the north branch of the river showing the two bridges which lead to the thirteenth green is not new, but it has a new and appropriate title: "On the banks of the ball-bearing stream." When in doubt play a floater.

The club will open its season this afternoon with a class handicap and the qualifying round for the Pumphrey trophy.

Among the new events is the War Service cup, donated by Harrison B. Riley. It will be played for annually by members sworn into the army or navy, and will be a handicap affair.

The third annual spring tournament of the Excelsior Springs Golf club will be held May 23 and 24. The qualifying round will be at eighteen holes for the championship and subordinate flights of eight each. Entries close May 23 with Secretary C. W. Fish at Excelsior Springs. A number of Chicago players are expected to compete.

There is an undeniable quality of goodness in the distinctive appearance of Liberty design.

Its inner goodness is at once revealed by the difference in the way the car rides and drives.

It is the kind of goodness that makes and keeps friends.

Its good repute is best expressed by the fact that many Liberty owners repeat their purchase with another Liberty, and are satisfied with no other car but a Liberty.

453 ATHLETES NOMINATED FOR BIG TEN GAMES

Fourteen Outside Schools Swell the Entry List for Conference Meet.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Four hundred and fifty-three athletes representing Big Ten institutions and fourteen outside universities and colleges have been nominated for the nineteenth annual outdoor track and field meet of the Western Intercollegiate Conference Athletic association, to be held June 7. These figures are according to the preliminary list of entries received by Warren D. Howe, secretary of the graduate managing committee.

This is by far the largest number received for the western college classic in the last decade and shows that this year's meet will be more successful than any decided in years. Not only in numbers will the meet be of greater interest, but the ability of the athletes insures keen competition in most events.

Athletic Boom Predicted.

Teams have been strengthened by the return of soldier athletes. Mediocre performers of last year have improved so they must be considered point possibilities, and coaches are working every day with their squads in the hope of uncovering "dark horses."

Avery Brundage, president of the committee in charge of the event, is anticipating a boom in collegiate athletics. The committee has been working industriously on plans to make the meet more interesting to spectators.

New Ideas for Games.

The committee has decided upon one idea of value to the spectator. The leading distances in the shot, discus, javelin, and hammer will be marked by flags bearing the college colors of the leading athlete. This system is employed at all Olympic games, and has proved so successful that attempts will be made to have it used in all big western meets.

Instead of one announcer there will be men with megaphones stationed on the scenes of all contests to tell the spectators heights and distances in the various field events, while others will let the spectators know what races are to be run on the track and the names of contestants.

Javelin in A. A. U. Style.

No changes have been made in the rules. The alteration made by the committee prior to last year's meet in the javelin throw will be enforced this season. The shaft must be thrown by holding it in the middle, instead of free style. The change was made too soon before last year's meet to put it into effect. This year the rule will be made to conform to the A. A. U. code.

Despite the fact other coaches will have to give Michigan a handicap of fifteen points because of the all around ability of Carl E. Johnson, who should win the high and low hurdles and running broad jump, other squads must be given a chance to win. The coach who has no hope of winning first place will have their athletes in such excellent condition that they may spring the surprise which generally features a meet of this importance.

Announce Entries June 1.

CASTING ROD HISTORY.

THE ancestors of the modern bait casting rod were longer, lighter, and in some respects better fishing tools than the casting rods of today. Their greater length gave the angler more chance of hooking his fish, more control over him after he was hooked, and more pleasure in playing and landing him.

Bait casting originated early in the last century in northern Kentucky. The famous anglers of the Blue Grass state were the first fly fishers for bass and they found need for a fishing method that would produce results when the bass were not rising to the feathers and for taking the immense pike and muskellunge that were plentiful in the Ohio and its tributaries in those days. With this in view they produced the first of the famous Kentucky reels and set about to make rods suitable for casting from the reel.

The first rods they made probably were fly rods with ash or hickory butts and lancewood tips, which they cut down and otherwise rebuilt to meet their requirements. Some of the more expert also used homemade rods of native cane—fine light affairs a bit stiffer but not a great deal heavier than fly rods. Hair thin lines of raw silk were used with these cane rods and the combination made an outfit that would surprise the light tackle fans of today who think that they are ahead of their time.

This fine tackle and appreciation of the bass, however, was confined to the comparatively small area of the Ohio valley. Throughout the rest of the country where bass were plentiful the tackle used was generally crude and heavy—so heavy, in fact, that it gave the bass little chance to show what he could do, and as a result the bass was not taken as seriously as a game fish as he is today.

In the early '70s Dr. Henshall recognized the value of the black bass and was quick to see the possibilities if proper rods were used. Accordingly, he designed such a rod, which to this day bears his name. It was 8¼ feet long and weighed eight ounces in ash and lance and about six and one-half ounces in bamboo. The Henshall rod was introduced to the angling public through the columns of Forest and Stream and by the doctor's famous work, "The Book of the Black Bass." Anglers everywhere were not slow in seeing the merits of the new rod and soon bass fishing became the sport it deserved to be. Dr. Henshall, now a hearty young feller of 83 summers, lived to see his beloved black bass become the game fish of the people, just as he predicted it would.

The Henshall rod, because of its length, was used with the side and underhand casts, and while a few anglers attained a high degree of accuracy with it, it required too much skill to suit the average fisherman. In certain waters bull'seye accuracy is not necessary, but in our midwest lakes, full of dead heads, lily pads, and rushes, the ability to cast with precision was almost a requisite. To overcome this difficulty some Chicago anglers got their heads together and produced the first short rods.

From what we can learn from Fred Peet and others, who were anglers at the time, we are convinced that the first men to make short rods and use the overhead cast were Elmer Wilkinson and James ("Dad") Clark, now of Kansas City. Both of them at that time—it was in the late '80s—lived in Chicago and did much of their angling at Camp lake, just over the Wisconsin line. The Kalamazoo casters, sometimes credited with making the first short rods, came into the field a few years later and their short rods, three and three and one-half footers, were tournament, not fishing rods.

Thus it can be seen that the bait casting rod has run its entire history during the lifetime of men now living, and those who take up the casting game now are really pioneers in a way. At any rate, they belong to the first generation of casters and are charter members of the great clan who feel a thrill when the line is running swiftly and smoothly beneath the thumb as it neatly unrolls from the rapidly revolving multiplyer.

The first casting rods were long, then they were gradually shortened until for a while three foot rods were by no means uncommon; then they gradually lengthened. Four or five years ago the five footer was "all the go"; now the five foot six has the inside track, with the tendency toward still longer rods. Six and a quarter feet, however, is the outside limit for comfortable overhead casting, although a revival of the Henshall rod and the side cast is by no means impossible; certainly the long rod has merits that the best makers cannot incorporate into the short casting tools of today.

SOCCER CHAMPS GET PERMIT FOR TRIP TO SCANDIA

Bethlehems Will Make Tour; Healey Heads U. S. Association.

Election of George Healey of Detroit to the presidency; sanction for a trip to Norway, Sweden, and Denmark by the Bethlehem team; division of the national championship competition into east and west sections, and award of the next annual meeting to St. Louis were the chief happenings of the closing session of the annual meeting of the United States Football association at the Great Northern yesterday.

Although nominated for a third term, Peter J. Peel of Chicago declined to accept the presidency and supported Mr. Healey. There was no opposition to other nominations, the full ticket being as follows:

PRESIDENT—George Healey, Detroit.
FIRST VICE PRESIDENT—Andrew M. Brown, Bayonne, N. J.
SECOND VICE PRESIDENT—James W. Riley, Methuen, Mass.
THIRD VICE PRESIDENT—William Cameron, Chicago.
TREASURER—William S. Haddock, Pittsburgh.
SECRETARY—Thomas W. Cahill, New York.

Tourists to Visit Canada.

The Bethlehem team, which will leave for Sweden July 10, also was given permission to play matches at Toronto, Hamilton, and Niagara Falls, starting at the first city May 24. It also was decided to negotiate for an annual international match with Canada.

Word was received from St. Louis that it would compete in the national championship event next season. In dividing this event into east and west sections, it was decided that, with the exception of the final match, the competition in the western section must end before Christmas, leaving the two winning teams to play off in the spring and then meet the winner of the eastern section. The Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce made a bid for the annual meeting in 1921.

Delegates Attend Banquet.

The delegates were guests at a banquet given by the Illinois State Football association and the Peel challenge cup commission at the Great Northern. William Cameron was toastmaster and Harry B. Miller, city prosecutor, made an address of welcome. President Peel presented the national cup and medals to the Bethlehem team.

This afternoon the delegates will attend the final match for the Peel trophy at Bricklayers' field, Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue, at 3 o'clock, the Scottish Americans opposing Lincoln Park.

Shaw rolled 1,207 for eighth place in the two men.

Gus Blaha was the most sensational performer of the night, with 673 in the singles, which is second high. His last two games carried him, for he got a slow start of 172 and finished with counts of 246 and 255. B. D. Jones, a veteran of many tournaments, was right at his heels with 669.

HEAD LOCK OF LEWIS VERSUS POLE'S STAMINA

Ed Strangler Lewis and W[illegible] Zbyszko, the giant wrestlers, who [illegible] tomorrow night at the Coliseum in a finish match, best two in three [illegible] yesterday finished training and are in perfect condition for what promises to be one of the best tussels in Chicago this year.

Both men took light workouts, Lewis with some gymnasium exercise at the C. A. A. and Zbyszko loosening up at the Illinois A. C. Each was confident of victory.

Zbyszko Relies on Endurance.

Lewis asserted he never has been beaten in a finish match. [illegible] pleased the bout will go to an absolute finish so that the best man will be determined.

Each has outlined his plan of attack, but it is almost a certainty that Strangler will rely upon his vicious head lock for victory, while Zbyszko will depend upon his strength and endurance. Not only Chicago, but out of town grappling fans will be on hand in numbers. Members of the C. A. A. and I. A. C. have bought up large blocks of tickets.

Start at 8 O'Clock.

Joe Coffey, matchmaker of the Coliseum A. C., yesterday announced there will be no preliminaries. Lewis and Zbyszko will start wrestling at 8:30 o'clock. There will be a fifteen minute intermission between falls, but the contest is expected to be over in time to permit the spectators to get home at a reasonable hour.

Why Geared-to-the-Road Gives Ease at the Steering Wheel

Miller Tires ride on a high center ridge, which eases the driver's tension at the steering wheel, driving just like a plain tread tire. Yet the sides of the tread are Geared-to-the-Road by patented caterpillar feet that mesh like cogs with road depressions.

The Uniform Miller is the only tire that has this combination—steering ease with great resistance to skidding and "whip-lash."

Geared-to-the-Road helps the car to hold the road, and produces positive traction, full power ahead, and safety.

Long-Mileage in All—Not "Luck" in a Few

All Miller Tires are long-distance runners—casing after casing. Fine materials and plenty of them are required, of course. But tires must be built alike, or they cannot wear alike.

Miller builders are trained to a single standard—there's no higher perfection than our championship mark. Each builder is rated on every tire he makes; if one comes back his score is penalized.

But instances of that are less than 1 in 100.

CAPITAL JOINS LABOR ON ACT TO GUARD WORKMEN

Plea to Increase Benefit of Compensation Act Points Lesson.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Labor and capital, hand in hand, are now asking the legislature at Springfield to increase the benefit schedule of the workmen's compensation act.

Since 1911 a new idea concerning payment of damages for death or injury through accident has been established. The theory under the old system was payment for damages arising from the employer's fault or negligence. It was recompense for a wrong. The injured employé or the widow of the workman killed had to go into court, where the employer was well fortified behind three great defenses developed in the common law in the early days of the factory system—contributory negligence, fellow servant, and assumed hazard of the employment. Sometimes damages were awarded, but in the bulk of cases they were not. And where a judge or jury did give compensation, lawyers' fees generally ate a large part of it up,

The New System.

In eight years that has been changed. The new compensation system in general abolishes the whole question of negligence. It goes upon economic necessity. Instead of the least able unit of industry assuming industry's risks, the consuming public, acting through the employer, gives relief to disabled workmen and the families of employés killed throught accident. It is insurance against accidental injury or death in hazardous employments.

It is only eight years ago that the first real compensation law that stuck went on the statute books. The Wisconsin act was the first in operation. Two years before some states had passed laws, but they tripped over themselves in the courts.

Employers had been insuring their machinery, their horses, their delivery trucks, but insurance of man power was left to the very last. Once the movement started, however, it went like wildfire. Ten states enacted compensation laws in 1911. By 1913 eleven more states had been added. Growth was so rapid that by 1917 compensation acts had been passed by thirty-seven states and by Alaska, Porto Rico, and Hawaii. North Dakota and ten southern states were the only ones still out in the cold.

Employers Objected.

At first the employers were against the idea. It seems like only yesterday that mine and factory owners were at Springfield in 1911—when the first act was passed—spilling gloom over the state house. They moaned and groaned and filled the rotunda with imprecations. It would close down the coal mines and put the factories hard to it. But it didn't.

When the new theory actually went into operation in 1913 the employers soon swung around the other way. They became converts to compensation just as the bankers, who howled calamity when the federal reserve bill was first passed, later hailed that banking measure as a life saver.

Capital and Labor Agree.

The attitude taken by the employers after the system went in is shown by the fact that every amendment since made in the Illinois law has been by agreement between capital and labor. By agreement the law in 1917 was made compulsory upon hazardous occupations instead of optional. Now both sides are at Springfield trying to get an increase of $1 a week in minimum benefits and an increase in the employers' liability for hospital services. It is now limited to $200 and it is desired to remove this restriction entirely. The fact has been hammered home that adequate medical and hospital service is absolutely essential for the complete economic rehabilitation of injured workmen.

The compensation acts vary throughout the country, but in nearly all the compensation payments are based upon the wages of the injured employé, ranging from 50 to 66 2-3 per cent. The Illinois law has a 50 to 65 per cent basis, depending upon the size of the family, and a movement is on to bring this up in the next legislature to the plane of the Ohio and New York laws—66 2-3 per cent.

Only hazardous employments are covered in fourteen of the thirty-seven states having laws, and in six of these compensation is compulsory. Last year the government estimated at 13,707,000 employés in the United States were covered by compensation acts.

The rapid development of the new idea is reflected in the growth of the Illinois industrial commission. Six years ago it opened a one room office in Chicago. Now it occupies two floors of the City Hall Square building; the number of commissioners has been increased from three to five and the number of arbitrators from two to eight. The state has been divided into five circuits. As soon as a disputed case is filed a hearing is held where the accident occurred, and if appeal is taken from the arbitrator to the commission there are nine centers where review cases are regularly held.

Business on Increase.

Business is continually increasing. In 1914 only 1,502 disputed cases were filed. In the ten months up to May 1 this year there were 4,705. Of the contested claims 22 per cent each year are appealed from the arbitrators to the commission; 10 per cent of these are appealed to the Circuit court, and about 1 per cent find their way up to the Supreme court. Just now there are more decisions from the Supreme bench on workmen's compensation than on any other branch of the law, which is natural, as the law is still being construed.

Last year 60 per cent of the disputed claims came from downstate, due to the high pressure under which the coal mines were operating and the suspension of building operations in Chicago. Industrial conditions are reflected quickly in the compensation cases.

In the ten months ended May 1 this year, out of 4,407 cases filed awards were made in 2,237. The total amount of compensation ordered paid on these awards was $2,233,186, a monthly average of $223,318.

Law Is Compulsory.

The Illinois law is compulsory upon hazardous occupations and optional with others. Between 55,000 and 60,000 employers are under it willy-nilly, and about 80 per cent of the industrial workers in the state are thus included.

In addition, under the optional provision, about 8,000 employers have elected to come under the act.

Most of the claims are paid without controversy. In 1917 a total of $3,368,994 was thus paid. That year there were 492 deaths and 36,268 nonfatal accidents reported. Last year there were 42,000 accidents and about $4,500,000 was paid in compensation without contest. Only accidents that cause a loss of more than one week's time are reported, and these are only about one-fourth of the total accidents. About 98 per cent of the employers reinsure their compensation risks, and the commission is now seeking an amendment by which it can suspend the operations for ninety days of any insurance company that does not pay awards promptly.

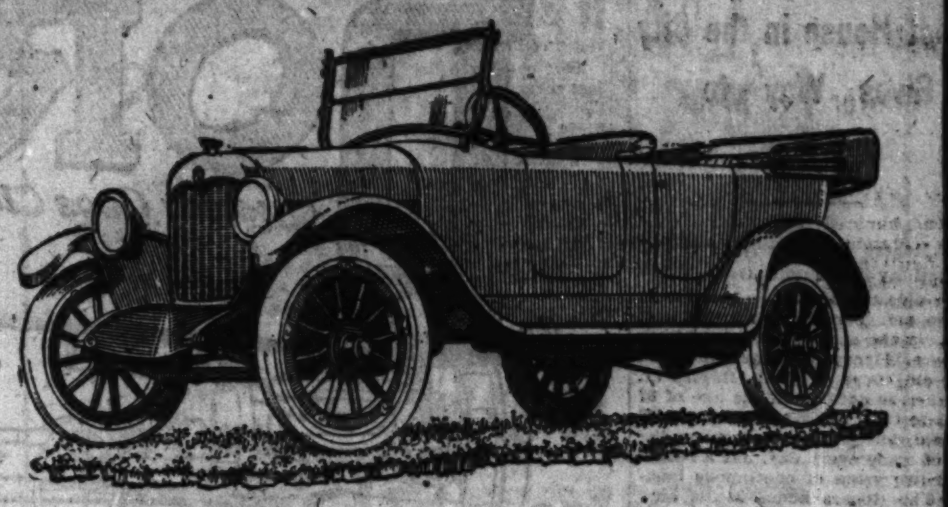
$500 more than the price of a Maxwell will buy you mere size only



FOR a Maxwell has every single modern device that any car selling within $500 of its price possesses.

The only thing an extra $500 will procure is size—a few inches of wheelbase, 2 inches of tire, 50 pounds more of engine, and 5 or 10 other things that a $20 note would easily cover.

Then you run the risk of not getting as good a car as a Maxwell.

For it is one thing to build a 10,000 a year car and another to build a 50,000 a year car.

The chances are in favor by far of finding the real merit in the latter.

The Maxwell has a record run of 300,000—all of one model—behind it.

That means sureness of design, freedom from "temperament," reliability plus, economy for certain, and always a ready market value.

A larger car costs more to maintain. A smaller car has less luxury.

VETERAN ROGERS BROTHERS QUIT THE GRAIN TRADE

Oldest House in the City Gives Way to Another.

The Rogers brothers have retired from activity in the grain trade. They are the oldest house in the business in Chicago, and there are few in the west that have the same record for length of service. Henry W. Rogers, the head of the old house of H. W. Rogers Jr. & Brother, is quitting at the age of 87 with a fortune. James C. Rogers, 77 years old, but still to be seen on the board of trade every day, has a record of fifty-two years of continuous business. The Rogers house is the only one in the grain trade that has not changed the style of its firm since 1867. It is being succeeded by a new organization, the Rogers Grain company.

H. W. Rogers, or Harry Rogers, as he has always been known by his intimates, became a member of the Board of Trade in 1862 and is the third oldest in point of membership. He was a director of the board in the '70s and was president in 1881. J. C. Rogers joined the board in 1867 and served as vice president in 1906-'07.

Organized in 1862.

The Rogers house dates from 1862, when it was H. W. Rogers Jr. & Co. In 1865 it was Rogers & Annan, and two years later it became H. W. Rogers & Brother. Their business was largely in handling cash grain and seeds for country shippers. In all the fifty-seven years in business they were always able to make good, weathering the effects of the Chicago fire, the numerous bank failures and panics of early days, the disastrous failures and the exciting times of the civil war, and all the other wars that have followed.

Many of the present day members of the Board of Trade received their education with the Rogers house. George E. Marcy, president of the Armour Grain company, started with them in 1879 at $4 a week and is now rated at over $1,000,000. He recalls the early days when as a boy he had to go to the railroad yards and the freight houses for samples of grain and seeds. Frank E. Weinand, now in business for himself on the board, is another of the Rogers graduates.

Veterans in Firm.

The present force in the office is composed of H. H. Newall, who started in 1885 and is vice president and general manager of the Rogers Grain company. S. B. Cochrane began with them in 1884. Thomas E. Yore and F. E. Grover started with them in 1888. The latter is now secretary and treasurer of the new company. John Batis joined the force in 1893 and is still with them. J. J. Kemp, formerly of Lexington but now of Bloomington, Ill., is president of the new company.

H. W. Rogers is a bachelor and lives at 1554 Dearborn avenue. James C. Rogers has resided in Oak Park thirty-seven years.

Many interesting stories are told of H. W. Rogers. The old Inter Ocean sent out a questionnaire at one time asking its subscribers to vote on the proposition of publishing a Sunday paper, as it was only published six days in the week. He wrote across the face: "Take it to the Lord in prayer." Some years ago an old employé who had a family of seven children, asked for a raise. He recited the troubles of being head of a family of seven kids. After he finished Mr. Rogers said: "Well, John, I am not responsible for the size of your family."

A Frame That Holds Its Place

A distorting, weaving frame can do an uncanny amount of damage. It can split up the body, set the doors askew, pull off the fenders, throw things out of line generally and make squeaks that defy the oil can.

The Dort frame is built so solidly as to withstand the most severe shocks and strains.

Its main structure is of generously large pressed-steel channel.

Beneath the radiator each side member of the frame is firmly fastened together by a heavy cross member. At the clutch is another cross member giving solid support for the rear suspension of the engine.

Behind the transmission is another, and at the rear a fourth cross member, both given added rigidity by wide gussett plates.

It is strong, with uniformity from end to end.

The Dort is as strong throughout the chassis. Ask us to tell you about it.

Tire Rotation

When a replacement is necessary on a front wheel, don't fit a new tire, but move up a worn tire from the rear.

Do the tires you use enable you to apply this principle which cuts tire bills by 20%?

Tire rotation is practicable only when fully interchangeable tires like Michelin Universal Tread Casings are used on both front and rear wheels.

Many non-skids, while perhaps satisfactory on the rear wheels, cannot be used to advantage in front because their small sharp projections make steering difficult. Recognizing this fault, many tire manufacturers are now recommending smooth tread "driving tires" for front wheel equipment.

Michelin Universals are equally satisfactory for all four wheels because of their broad, flat treads. Use Michelins and secure all the economical advantages of tire rotation. Protect yourself against dangerous front skids and obviate the necessity of carrying two types of spares.

'TO HELL WITH CRAWLING; LET'S RISE AND WALK'

Reilly in Fighting Talk Declares for 100 Per Cent Americans.

"To hell with crawling! Let's get up and walk, as Murphy said to Linehan."

Murphy made the suggestion while leading a patrol in "No Man's Land." Col. Henry J. Reilly, who told about it, borrowed it to advise Americans in general and those of Irish blood in particular while speaking yesterday before the Irish Fellowship club in the Hotel Sherman.

"Those who yelled loudest to shove us into war never did anything to help us prepare for war," declared the commander of "Reilly's Bucks"—son of the commander of Reilly's artillery, who lost his life at the gates of Peking. "Those of us who urged caution—at least preparedness for the battle before we appeared on the battlefield—were cursed and denounced as disloyal, unpatriotic.

Cites His Own Case.

"Take my own case. I am a professional soldier—a graduate of the military academy. I was sent to Europe by THE TRIBUNE to learn the truth. I saw things through the eyes of the professional soldier; I saw what happened and why it happened. In 1915 I came back and wrote what I regarded as the truth—knowing every allied soldier who had appeared on the battlefield agreed with me. I wrote without prejudice.

"I told the truth about the Germans, and because my name was Reilly I was denounced and my standing as a loyal American declared under suspicion.

"And by whom? By those who fought, whose ancestors had fought or who themselves were willing to fight for the United States? Perhaps, in a few cases, but as for the majority of them, no.

Two Kinds of People.

"There are just two kinds of people in this country—and the loudest war howlers were usually of the second kind—those who came to this country for a principle, because it offered a decent chance and fair play, regardless of where they came from, and those who came with no ideals but only the thought of making money, whose only test of patriotism is, 'Is there money in it?'

"In the brigade which the 149th supported was the 69th New York infantry, composed of men of Irish ancestry and including several hundred born in Ireland.

"They went to war because they were Americans, because they believed in the United States.

"And they never took a backward step from the day they started fighting.

"With the rest of their brigade they found themselves out of small arms ammunition in the approach of Sedan. But they fought on with the bayonet against machine guns and captured every objective. Their dead and wounded filled the shell holes.

The Test of an American.

"Now, are these men Americans, or are they not? Any one who wants to can answer that.

"But I'll say I wish we had more of them, no matter where they or their ancestors came from. For them we need to put no price on American citizenship.

"But it is time we made it plain to those who did nothing that American citizenship is worth something, that, if need be, it must be paid for as the priceless thing it is to a real American.

"When the next war comes I hope we will have it so every American citizen must appear on the battlefield. If he is unfit for the battlefield, let him remain at home and suffer and sacrifice in support of the men at the front."

BROKER H. SCULL LOSES FOOT IN TRAIN ACCIDENT

For many years Harry Scull's recreation has been walking—"hitting the dust" between Chicago and his home in Glen Ellyn after the Board of Trade, of which he is a member, closed.

HARRY SCULL

Yesterday Mr. Scull, who is 72 years old, lost his left foot in an accident at Lombard station. He had boarded the train at Glen Ellyn, but got off at Lombard to buy a morning paper. As the train started he attempted to get aboard, but slipped beneath the wheels. He was rushed to the Oak Park hospital, where the crushed member was amputated.

"He's in good condition and doing nicely," it was reported at the Oak Park hospital last night. "Seems to have kept himself fit by daily exercise."

Mr. Scull's daily pedestrian "stunts" aroused the admiration of residents of Wheaton and Norwood Park years ago, before he moved to Glen Ellyn.

Grogan Angry at Club Being Linked in Slaying

Barney Grogan was indignant yesterday when he returned to Chicago from his ranch in Wisconsin and read that the police had linked his Eighteenth Ward Democratic club with another murder mystery.

Moses Flanagan, alias Thomas Maroney, shot nine times and thrown from an automobile near 1842 West Monroe street, was quoted in a dying statement, on May 14 as saying: "Ask Pat Dwyer; maybe he will tell." Dwyer was represented as secretary of the club. Flanagan had spent the evening at his house, 230 South Wood street.

"Dwyer never was secretary of the club," said Grogan; "he merely is a member. I never heard of Flanagan before. The constant linking of the club with crime is merely an attempt to cast discredit upon it for political purposes."

Clothes May Make the Man—But, "It's the Works" That Make the Watch

It has been said, "A silk hat can cover a multitude of sins." Let us add to that and say, "A fancy case and a foreign-sounding Swiss name upon the dial can cover a very poor watch."

American mechanical and engineering world leadership has been won by making comparisons—not comparisons of appearances, but comparisons of facts and performances—putting two and two together and multiplying the result until a new standard of quality and a new high mark in invention has been attained.

That is just what has been taking place in watchmaking. Time was when we had only the European standards to work to, but after nearly three-quarters of a century of American brain work and genius work, the Waltham Watch has been declared, even in Switzerland, unexcelled in all the world.

Let us quote from a leading Swiss horologist, M. Favre-Perret, who was one of the watch judges at the great Centennial Exposition held in Philadelphia in 1876. He stated that the 40,000 workmen in Switzerland, working by hand, produced, each, but 40 watches a year; while an American workman by the use of highly developed and marvelous machinery produced 150 watches a year.

His most significant statement made at that time was that the Swiss watch was inferior in quality to the American watch—in every particular—facts which Waltham proved at the Exposition when it defeated all Swiss competitors in every test and M. Favre-Perret was one of the judges.

M. Favre-Perret, in an article written for the Journal de Geneve, stated that the Waltham factory amazed him for the "precision and rapidity of the machine tools there, which supplanted the slow and variable hands of the artisan." He eulogized the commanding superiority and uniformity of the movements produced and the marvelous reductions in cost—coincident with improvement in quality over the Swiss watch. These are his own words:

"In 1880, at the great International Exposition held in Sydney, Australia, Waltham Watches again defeated the world's best watches, winning every award and many special distinctions. In fact, a Waltham Watch of the sixth grade, Watch No. 6, case number 1221336, gave a better performance than many of the costly and otherwise expensive watches in competition, and was commended in the official report."

In this world competition Charles V. Woerd, mechanical superintendent at Waltham, was given a first-class award for his new mode of compensating balances.

This is the significant fact. Waltham's claim to world leadership in watchmaking is related to America's claim that in engineering and mechanical skill she leads the world.

The Waltham laboratories and experimental shops have given many inventions and improvements to the "works" of the watch. The Waltham Watch embodies so many distinctive superiorities in its "works" that it would need a book to quote them in full. One will suffice:

The balance wheel of a watch automatically allows for variations in temperature to which your watch may be subjected. Owing to the expansion and contraction of metal which, under heat or cold, would increase or decrease the diameter of the balance wheel, thereby affecting the number of time-keeping vibrations per second, the Waltham balance wheel is made of specially treated steel and brass, fused together and rolled under high pressure to produce the necessary temper after fusing.

Therefore, the Waltham balance wheel readily responds to varying temperatures, while the balance in the Swiss watch is apt to be too soft and lacking in temper to keep perfect time or to be easily repaired.

This is but one of many reasons why the horologists of the great nations came to Waltham for time. They appreciated these scientific superiorities in the "works" of the Waltham Watch. Go to any Waltham dealer—and that means the leading jewelers in this city—and he will show you Waltham Watches ranging in price, for gentlemen, from the Cadet Strap Watch, with gold covered back, at $22 up to the Waltham Premier Maximus at $530. And, for ladies, the Jewel Series from $31.50 upward to that exquisite watch (its movement is actually smaller than a dime in diameter) which sells from $150 to $1,000 or more—according to the case.

WE suggest that you compare a Sterling Tube with others.

We believe it is impossible to make a tube at any price, with any different material, or with different construction, that will give as many miles per dollar as will Sterling Tubes. They will make even a poor tire give better service.

A strong, tough, elastic tube strengthens the tire. It holds the air, which is as much a part of the tire as the rubber and cotton. It does not develop slow leaks, which make tires semi-flat for a few or many miles before you discover it—and a tire run flat, for only a few feet, may be damaged beyond recovery.

The highest grade, toughest tube should be used—particularly in cheap tires, because they need reinforcement. And particularly in high-grade tires, because you can't afford to risk the cost of a good tire for the sake of saving (?) a dollar or two on the tube.

Two Vital Spots in your Chassis

The transmission and differential of your car must work all the time you are driving.

They are vital spots in the chassis.

And unless you give them proper lubrication, disastrous friction will soon wear them out and hinder the whole operation of your car.

Dixon's Graphite Transmission and Differential Lubricant has been specially produced to meet, and solve, the difficult lubricating problems met in these vital moving centers.

This Dixon product clings to the moving gears through the hardest kind of "grief." Excessive heat from fast running or hard work on low gear does not affect it. Cold weather doesn't cause it to "bunch up," "pull away" and shirk its work.

Dixon's Graphite Transmission and Differential Lubricant has none of the faults so common to ordinary grease and oil.

Ask for it by name—and be sure you get it.

You will notice the difference at once in the smoother, quieter running of your car—as well as in a substantially lower gas consumption.

STRIKE BREAD LINE LENGTHENS AT WINNIPEG

Mayor Admits Outlook Is Serious; Telegraphers Quit.

Winnipeg, Man., May 17.—Winnipeg was calm and generally quiet at 9 o'clock tonight.

Mayor Charles F. Gray issued a proclamation urging maintenance of law and order. In his statement he said:

"I am certain that before long a way will be found to clear up this unfortunate situation satisfactorily to all concerned."

The mayor's statement was the first announcement from any source that officials considering the general strike situation hold hopes for arbitration of the differences which caused the general strike on Thursday morning.

Summarized, the leading developments today have been:

Strike of commercial telegraphers at noon.

Rumors that the government was mobilizing troops in other cities for transportation to Winnipeg.

Reports that the Winnipeg locals of the three great railroad brotherhoods were considering joining the strikers.

Lifting of the prohibition on the delivery of bread and milk.

Strike of railway ticket agents.

Closing of steam laundries.

Probable strike Monday of stockyards employés.

Formal decision to not hold the annual Memorial day parade tomorrow.

The few eating places which were operating this afternoon did a land office business. The general strike committee issued an order permitting bread and milk dealers to operate on a pre-strike basis, with the understanding that hospitals and other needy places should receive primary attention.

GIRL WHO TOOK POISON ON WAY TO RECOVERY

Miss June Grisby isn't desperate today—but she is ill.

JUNE GRIGSBY.

Motive for the poison was supplied in Ed Long with whom she had been living at the hotel. Miss Grisby's mother, Mrs. Doris Lyon, lives at 1010 North Richmond avenue.

The girl told Police Sergeant George Catt she had taken the poison when Long accused her of going out with other men. She denied this.

Among her effects was a marriage license partly filled out and the draft card of Peter C. Sorum of 2513 Lyon boulevard, to whom it is said she was to be married.

After Honeymoon of Three Weeks, Bride Disappears

The honeymoon nest of Andrew Mooshey at 550 North Wells is silent. The bride of three short weeks has vanished, Mr. Mooshy reported to the police of the East Chicago station last night.

"What's the matter?" asked the desk sergeant.

"I don't know," said the bridegroom.

He explained the bride was employed as a telephone operator in the loop and left yesterday. She did not return.

Visitor Leaves Note for Son; Missing 3 Days

Placing a note under his old testament that he had "gone downtown; won't be long," William H. Griffin walked out of the home of his son, Harold Griffin, 3438 Bosworth avenue, Wednesday, and has not returned. He was visiting here from Three Oaks, Mich. The son told the police he had been despondent since the death of his wife a year ago. It is thought he may have committed suicide.

Model 90 Breaks the World's Non-stop High Gear Record

Overland

Oh Boy!

The owner of an Overland owns all out of doors. In his Model 90 he goes in comfort and with an enjoyment possible only because of the high quality, fine appearance and unfailing performance of his car.

Last month at Oklahoma City, when a stock Model 90 Overland car broke the world's non-stop high gear record, Overland owners were not surprised.

4,370 miles in 7 days and nights in high gear, over bad roads, through wind and rain, without one pause, was a performance that thrilled the crowd. Onto this wonderful mileage record was piled the gas record of 20.6 miles per gallon.

But Overland owners knew from experience how well Model 90 could perform. They were serenely confident and at the finish they were serenely proud.

This Model 90 record is of value only in explaining the appreciation Overland owners have of the economy and faithful performance of their cars. It explains the great demand for Model 90 cars right now.

What Are the Chief Considerations That Influence the Average Buyer in His Choice of a Motor Car?

Appearance

Mechanical Construction
Riding Qualities

SAXON "6"

In our many years of daily contact with the motoring public we have repeatedly found that the majority of buyers come to consider the purchase of a motor car with the above considerations definitely in mind.

So we want to point out to you how completely Saxon "Six" measures up to these requirements.

First let us take appearance—Saxon "Six" is a long, graceful and well proportioned car with high-grade coach work, beautiful finish and real leather upholstery.

In mechanical construction Saxon "Six" stands alone as quality car of low price. Its inherent features are all of recognized merit and proved value.

The motor, axles, bearings, carburetor, battery, ignition system and many less important features down to the smallest detail have been skillfully combined into a perfect and well balanced whole by the ablest automobile engineers in the country.

Next consider the riding qualities of Saxon "Six". There is no better argument of the ease and comfort with which Saxon "Six" rides than a demonstration in the car itself. The long cantilever springs take all the bumps and jolts out of the roughest roads and make riding pleasant in the most stubborn going.

When it comes to performance you'll find Saxon "Six" embodies those qualities that constitute your ideal of motoring satisfaction. It has power and speed in excess of the most exacting demands. It is unusually flexible and handles easily in heavily congested traffic with little or no gear shifting.

Thousands of Saxon owners throughout the country furnish the best evidence of the economy of Saxon "Six". It is daily giving high mileage in gas, in oil and on tires. Repairs and replacements are seldom necessary and Saxon "Six" stays sweet, running over long periods of time with the minimum of service attention.

Price—Saxon "Six" touring car or Chummy Roadster is $1,275.00 delivered in Chicago.

To really appreciate what a thoroughly fine car Saxon "Six" is you must ride in it and drive it. Will you come in and go for a demonstration drive today?

'MIKE DE PIKE'S' WIGWAM SHOWS IT HAS FRIENDS

Plea for Reopening Is Backed by Witnesses as to Character.

It seems to be the way you look at things. Witness the efforts of "Mike de Pike" Heitler to reopen his "Wigwam" resort at One Hundred and Nineteenth and Wood streets in the village of Burr Oak. Those efforts were of no avail yesterday when Heitler appeared before Judge Charles M. Foell in the Superior court to request a modification of the injunction order issued last week. Affidavits were presented in abundance which purported to prove that the Wigwam not only was not a place of ill repute but on the other hand was a refined place of amusement.

For instance:

Kate Balty, a "widow with 9 children," swore that she lived within 200 feet of the saloon, and had never been disturbed by the people who frequented the place.

Henry A. Wolske, justice of the peace in Burr Oak, "deposed and said that he knows the place owned and run by Mike Heitler; that no complaint had ever been made to him of conduct in the saloon."

Even Joseph Valentine, who tends bar there, admitted that the place is orderly.

Assistant Attorney General Franklin Dennison declared, however, that he had absolute proof that Heitler had been violating the law, and stated that he could produce men who had been guests there, and also bar checks stamped "Sunday."

Judge Foell will hear the evidence Monday.

PLANS MADE FOR NEW CAMPAIGN ON WAR SAVINGS

Three hundred war savings workers, representing practically all the counties of the state, attended a conference and luncheon in the gold ballroom of the Hotel La Salle yesterday to plan a "thrift revival" campaign.

The conference was a refutation of reports circulated in the last few days that the war savings section of the treasury department is to be abandoned. Some of the speakers, who included J. B. McDougal, governor of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago; Martin A. Ryerson, state director of war savings in Illinois, and Shailer Mathews, vice director of the Illinois organization, reported recent long distance telephone conversations with Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Leffingwell to the effect that the war savings work is to be made a permanent government activity.

Instead of being abandoned, the savings division of the treasury department will broaden in scope. War savings stamps of $100 denomination already have been printed and will be distributed in a few days, and $1,000 stamps or certificates are being printed.

Yesterday's conference was called to make plans for the balance of the year. The following program was outlined:

1. Agency week, June 2 to 7.
2. Thrift week, week of June 23.
3. Vacation savings. Taking of pledges for the saving by pupils of 10 per cent or more of their earnings or allowances during the vacation period for investment in thrift or war savings stamps weekly, monthly, or upon the pupil's return to school in the fall.
4. War savings societies. Organization of war savings societies wherever five or more persons are employed.

LEROY A. GODDARD DONATES CHAPEL TO MARION, ILL.

Chicago Banker Shows Interest in City of Birth.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Love for the place of his birth and in recognition of the honor of having been elected mayor of the little city when he was 23 years of age and again reëlected prompted Leroy A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago to present to Marion, Ill., a cemetery chapel.

The dedication of the chapel will take place on Memorial day, May 30, and will be an event of wide interest in Williamson county as well as in the city of Marion.

The chapel is of Bedford stone, with art glass windows and will seat 200. Mr. Goddard said he was prompted to make his gift in the form of a chapel in the cemetery because the cemetery was laid out when he was mayor and also because it could be in a manner a memorial to the soldier dead of Marion.

Mr. Goddard will present the chapel to Mayor Elijah Lewis, who will make the acceptance speech in behalf of the city. Dr. H. W. Shryrock, president of the Southern State Normal, Carbondale, will make the dedicatory address; James Goddard, a grand opera singer, a cousin of the donor, will sing and David E. Gibson of Chicago will read the Scripture lesson and offer prayer.

TOBIN DECLARES PUBLIC SCHOOLS FACE A CRISIS

Washerwomen Paid More than Teachers, He Says.

County Superintendent of Schools Edward J. Tobin in an address delivered yesterday before the country life directors of Cook county declared that the public schools faced a crisis because of lack of teachers.

They have abandoned the profession for more lucrative employment as clerks, stenographers, bakery wagon drivers, pie salesmen, milkmen, he said. He made a plea for higher salaries.

Statistics Are Cited.

Citing statistics he said:

"Every year from 1910 to 1915 more than 500 graduates of the high schools of Chicago and Cook county took the examination for cadet teachers. This year just twenty-seven appeared. A few years ago hundreds of bright, clever young men and women were constantly applying for information leading to their becoming teachers. Now, the few that do apply do not compare in personality, energy, or vivacity. The type of young men and women who were entering previous to 1914 have gone on a strike, as far as school teaching is concerned. In dealing with this question it is important to keep in mind that the morale and personnel of our teachers are closely related to the remuneration they receive.

Washwoman Better Off.

"Teaching is a profession and not a calling; at least that is the opinion of the high school graduates of today. Teachers to be effective must be contented. Today they are discontented. Teachers tell me daily that washwomen, track workers, teamsters, dressmakers, housemaids, and workers in every other occupation are now receiving higher remuneration than our teachers. Can they be blamed for being discontented? It is unreasonable to expect our young men and women who give evidence of special aptitude for teaching, which requires long and exacting preparation, to remain in the service unless the compensation is equivalent to what is offered by business and industrial institutions.

"This condition has been accentuated since the war. We must look to the schools as the agency for Americanizing the children of foreigners coming to our country. The public rightfully demands good schools and everything possible should be done to keep their efficiency from being imperiled in any way. But this efficiency can never be maintained unless the remuneration is increased so that the work of the teachers can be placed on a par at least with pie, bread, and milk drivers, housemaids, stenographers, and washwomen."

DIES IN FAVORITE CHAIR.

Mrs. Katherine Hanschild, 85, was found dead from gas asphyxiation yesterday in her home, 1406 Mohawk street. She was sitting in a rocking chair when discovered by her mother, Mrs. Anna Jancar. A gas hose attached to a jet was nearby. She had been ill for some time.

13,520 Miles from this MASON Cord Tire

Concerning the great mileage record of the Mason Cord Tire illustrated here, Mr. C. J. Miller of the J. E. Miller general express and hauling firm of Wheeling, West Virginia, writes under the date of April 15th as follows:

Gentlemen:

We are very much pleased with the mileage received from Mason Cord Tires. This photograph being the first tire purchased on the 14th day of August 1918, and has covered on an average of 65 miles a day, or a total of 13,520 miles. The tire has no blisters and shows no sign of tread separation.

Up to date we have purchased eleven Mason Cord Tires 34 x 4½, 35 x 5, and 37 x 5.

(Signed) C. J. MILLER

Mileage Records—
the Best Evidence

SOME of the best Tire Builders of America are associated in the Mason Organization. They pooled their knowledge and experience to produce tires that, regardless of cost, would give greater mileage. Their achievement is the Mason line of Cord, Fabric and Solid tires.

Mason tires are scientifically designed, strong, tough and resilient. Users invariably average a large mileage margin above our liberal adjustment basis and get more mileage in proportion to cost than with most other tires.

An extraordinary mileage record from a single set of tires might "just happen"; but when hundreds of Mason Cord Tire users keep reporting unusually high mileage records it proves conclusively that

A HOT SPOT Chalmers Responds Like a Spirited Horse

Quality First.

THE huge, road rolling type of motor car with gigantic engine has less friends than once it did. For everyone nowadays likes "life," get-up-and-go, in a car just as he or she does in a human being, or an animal.

That's why the Hot Spot Chalmers has won friends in ever increasing numbers.

It has the ginger of a spirited horse.

Ask for a little and you get more than you ask.

All because its great, magnificent engine "chews up" gas and delivers power results in uncanny fashion.

Hot Spot "breaks up" the gas so that when Ram's-horn dispatches the "powdered" gas to the cylinders you get every particle of power nature put into gas.

Hence a brute type of an engine is not found in a present day Chalmers, but a medium sized engine that delivers a wallop with a silky smoothness almost beyond belief.

Ride once with your foot on the little button of a Hot Spot Chalmers and your conception of a motor car is changed; thereafter you too will say Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

TRYING TO MAKE FOREST CHIEF'S JOB DECORATIVE

Reinberg May Soon Have Nothing to Do but Smile or Cuss.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Peter Reinberg was elected president of the county board. Thereby he became president of the forest preserve trustees. So, he would like to be its real head, and not its figurehead. But some persons want him only as an ornament. He is a solid looking citizen. He has poise. He appears as prosperous as he is. He has the atmosphere of a substantial business man and as chairman lends dignity to the board's sessions, gives a favorable impression to strangers, and adds to the reputation of the board. But that is the limit to which he is desirable in certain quarters.

When the present trustees came into power the first of the year the board had purchased 12,353 acres at a cost of $4,646,664. The trustees have the power to spend upwards of $11,000,000 for property under present conditions, therefore there is much more to be spent for land than has been expended. President Reinberg would like the opportunity to vote either yes or no on the purchases as they are made.

Cannot Hire Any One.

The rules of the trustees provide that the "president shall be the chief executive officer" of the district. But he cannot hire any one. All of the employés and officers of the district are selected by a majority of the board under the new rules. He is minus the first power that is ordinarily given an executive.

He will not, even as a trustee, have the power to vote for or against the employment of a woodchopper, if a bill pending in Springfield becomes the law, nor have the power to veto what the other trustees do. Of course, he might talk and talk, in committee meetings—if he were given notice of those meetings, which he said yesterday he has not been receiving.

In fact, it was the plan of the majority of the trustees not to have him a member of any committee, and they framed a committee slate of that kind. Later they appear to have thought that too rough. Then, too, he might have an indirect word on appointments, if he were permitted to select the committees, but the rules have been changed so that he does not now have even that privilege.

Has Wide Veto Power.

Under the present law he does have unusual powers of veto of ordinances. When he vetoes an ordinance all of the other fourteen trustees must vote to pass the ordinance over his veto in order to nullify his wishes. That was brought to the attention of a state senator and he presented a bill reducing this veto power. It provides that only ten votes are necessary to pass an ordinance over the president's veto. It appears like good legislation. Reinberg makes no objection to it. The bill passed the senate and got to second or third reading in the house.

Then Reinberg asked that it be amended, giving him the power to vote and also to veto all ordinances, orders, resolutions, the purchase of land, and the expenditure of any money. That has passed the house and is scheduled for consideration by the senate this week. Some of the trustees will attempt to have it killed. One said frankly yesterday that he "will get busy."

A hasty glance through the proceedings of the present trustees since Jan. 1 discloses that they have only passed two ordinances, one the annual budget and the other regulations for the district's police. All of the other business has been transacted by the adoption of resolutions and orders. These the president cannot veto.

When the trustees appointed seven committees on Jan. 20, it was by resolution. When the trustees on Feb. 14 appointed fifty-three employés of the district, it was by resolution. When they wanted to buy several tracts of land on Feb. 24 it was by adoption of a committee report. On March 3, when the board wanted to condemn property it was done by resolution. When ten more employés were appointed March 10, it was by resolution.

When the secretary was given power to open a box in a safety deposit vault, it was by order. When the depositories were named to receive the district's funds, it was by order. The pay rolls are passed by the adoption of a committee report. Supplies are purchased and other expenditures made in the same manner.

In a word, little opportunity is given the president to exercise the power of veto of ordinances because the board does nearly all of its business by means other than ordinances. The board can direct the president to buy a piece of property to which he may be unalterably opposed—and all he can do is cuss.

ENJOINS BAKERS FROM PICKETING OR LOITERING

ior court yesterday issued an injunction against the members of the Bakers and Confectioners International Workers of America, forbidding picketing of any kind.

The suit was brought by the Ward Baking company and 745 other companies.

According to the terms of order members of the bakers' union may not even walk back and forth in front of bake shops, or remain in the neighborhood of bakeries, if their purpose is to inform the public that a strike is in progress.

The Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau

The growing interest in the shipment of goods by motor truck has reached a point where a clearing house for information on this new industry should be of great value to all classes of shippers and truck operators.

As an aid toward bringing "Ship by Truck" to its greatest usefulness to all we have established a department to gather, compile and circulate information.

It will pay you to send us at once the information called for below

Shippers: Manufacturers, merchants and farmers are invited to get in touch with The Firesone Ship by Truck Bureau for information regarding motor express routes and lines covering their requirements. Let us know what you have to ship, in what volume, with what frequency, to what destination, etc.

Motor Express Operators: Send to The Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau all information of interest to shippers, such as the route or routes you cover, tonnage capacity of trucks, schedules under which you operate, rates, etc.

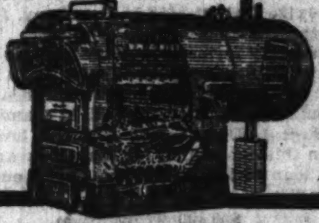
How to Rent a Flat

Listen Lester! If you are looking for an apartment this Spring, remember that "all is not gold that glitters." A stylish entrance, sepia brown walls and cosy sun-parlors won't keep your frame warm when Winter gets busy. Go into the basement first and find out what kind of a heating boiler is there. That's your flat-hunting-religion.



Kewanee Smokeless Boiler, Portable, for Heating

If you find a Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler there, rent the apartment on the spot. If you don't find it, Lester, you are flirting with "Flu" and all the ills that human flesh is heir to, if you sign your name to that lease. The boiler is the very heart of your happiness in whatever apartment you rent.

There are lots of boilers that work bully in the summer time when they are not used, but as soon as Winter pokes his nose in the door, they go on a strike and refuse to warm things up. That's why we warn you to settle this boiler question first. You don't want to eat breakfast with your furs on or sit on the radiator when you read your magazine. And you run those chances if you ignore the boiler question.

If you are sure of heat, you are sure of comfort. If you are not sure of heat, better get a doctor to live with you. The Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler assures you of constant and ample heat. It is a splendidly constructed, all-steel boiler and not one of those accordion-pleated affairs moulded of cast-iron. We've given you your warning, Lester. See to it that you heed it.

Write to the Old Man Behind the Boiler, or send for a representative, and get all the details

HEAVYWEIGHT SALES MANAGERS AND SALESMEN:

Attention!

This advertisement is only meant for the man who is determined to make big money, who has the money making germ in his blood, and who realizes that big money making requires a combination of brains, courage, work, and the right proposition. To begin with, when you have earned a dollar with us, you get it and it is yours for keeps, and you can look every man you sell in the eye for the rest of your life.

We are just organizing an adjacent state where we will give exclusive territory to sales managers. The most territory any sales manager can handle is three to six counties. This enables you to live at a central point. We have previously organized several other states and have paid sales managers in similar territories in excess of $15,000 in the last year. Several are making at the rate of far more than this at the present time. No salesman who makes good with us earns less than $10,000 per year.

This business is soundly financed, and our salesmen carry scores of indorsements from banks, bankers, and representative men. We have by far the strongest and biggest organization of its kind and a proposition that will stand up under the most rigid investigation that any one can possibly make. Twenty per cent of our sales are made to bankers. Our proposition is so good that many orders are doubled, tripled, quadrupled, and sometimes increased to more than twenty times their original size. It can only be presented to men of considerable means, and our salesmen and sales managers must necessarily be the class of men who can sell people of this type.

This is probably the most interesting thing you have ever heard of any one selling. Nine people out of ten whom you meet are interested the minute you mention this business, and any one of them will talk to you for hours about it. It has no relation to insurance, stocks, or bonds, and in every community your prospects are invariably the best, biggest, and most progressive men. We already have many inquiries in the territory just being opened up, and will back up the sales managers who can deliver with the strongest advertising campaign ever carried on by this or any other sales proposition.

Both our salesmen and sales managers work on a strictly commission basis. The type of men necessary to success in this business would not work on any other basis, and we spend far more money in handling a territory than they do. Only men with every necessary qualification will be considered for positions as sales managers, as they work on a very attractive basis and must be able to organize their territory properly and give their salesmen the necessary cooperation. This is high pressure work, and, among other qualifications, a sales manager must be a real closer.

We have a few openings for salesmen in Chicago territory, and others locating in outside territory can locate permanently or for months at a time in one town. The longer they are located there the easier and more profitable the work becomes. In territories already worked we have cases where the wealthiest and most influential man in the county, whose only interest is that of a satisfied purchaser, will call prospects over the phone and tell them that he will stand behind every statement our representative makes. This is a permanent business, and, if you can make good, you will never need another job, and you can make all the money you have the ability and the desire to work for.

We will call for the replies to this advertisement twice daily, and will be glad to answer wires or letters with regard to territory, but we will not promise to hold territory any longer than when the right man to handle it applies. If you can qualify we suggest that you come to Chicago immediately, advising us by wire or letter where we can reach you, and we will promptly make an appointment. We will pay no attention whatever to simple requests that we explain our proposition. Tell us fully about yourself and we will reply promptly with complete information, if your application meets with our approval. In any event, your reply will be held in the strictest confidence. We have turned down hundreds of unsolicited applications for this territory within the last few months, because we were not ready to open the state we are now starting to work on until the territory we had started was thoroughly organized. Address X O 493, Tribune.

HIGH BUILDING COSTS CHECK REAL ESTATE MARKET

MANY PROPERTY OWNERS BOOST ASKING PRICE

Scarcity of Space for Business and Homes One of Causes.

Despite two fairly important transactions in the latter part of the week, the week's market as a whole was of a somewhat disappointing character. There was the same large movement of cheap vacant as has been the case for the last several weeks, but there was a falling off in the number of transactions of any magnitude in improved property.

One of the reasons for this apparent slowing up, in the opinion of many brokers, is the more independent attitude of owners, and the general disposition on their part to mark up their asking prices, as the result of the great scarcity of building space for both business and living needs, and the widespread belief that there is likely to be comparatively little building, because of the evident disposition of those contemplating making important improvements to await cheaper building cost.

Situation Due to Building Cost.

The statement made in this column a week ago that many architects report being fairly overrun with tentative projects contingent upon a cheaper building cost, is a suggestive feature of the situation, and with prospective dullness in a building way, together with steadily increasing returns from their improved properties, it not surprising that owners should mark up their asking prices to a greater or less extent, as compared with a few months ago.

It also is quite natural that prospective purchasers who at that time were not disposed to consider owners' figures, should be disposed to hold off now, when they are faced with a sharp increase over the former asking prices.

However, brokers generally are optimistic regarding the outlook, and while there is a difference of opinion as to the probability of cheaper building costs, which generally is recognized as the key to the situation, it also is generally admitted that independent of any cheapening there must come eventually a return of building activity in order to meet the living and business needs of the city.

New Factor in Situation.

A new factor was injected into the local building situation in the exposure in THE TRIBUNE of the combination by mill men, contractors, and unions to enhance building cost. Just what effect this exposure will have on the building situation is problematical, but the announced purpose of Gov. Lowden, as well as the federal authorities, to thoroughly investigate the situation carries with it the hope that some remedy may be found for this unhealthy condition.

In the meantime there continues to be much building of bungalows and two flat buildings in the outlying parts of the city and of lofty fireproof apartment buildings of one, two, and three rooms, with kitchenettes. In fact, one of the features of the week's market had to do with large loans in connection with buildings of this character.

It also is to be borne in mind that while these small sales find but little space in the news columns, in the aggregate they mean a great deal, clearly constituting the most encouraging feature of the market.

Recorder's Office Figures.

It will be no surprise to those who have followed the weekly transfer figures of the recorder's office that the April figures show an exceedingly large increase over those for April a year ago. Thus, there were recorded 5,909 deeds, with total considerations of $9,896,645 for April, 1919, as compared with 4,491 and $5,793,429 for April a year ago. This is an increase of 1,408 in number and $4,103,216 in consideration.

Under the Torrens system there were 627 deeds, with total considerations of $804,665, as against 386 and $329,264 a year ago, an increase of 241 in number and $475,401 in consideration. There were 4,225 trust deeds and mortgages, amounting to $16,744,646, as compared with 3,233 and $10,200,281 a year ago.

Saloon Property Leased.

Another interesting development of the week was a small lease of store space in the outlying part of the city negotiated by H. G. Howard & Co. It covered a store at the southeast corner of Twenty-sixth street and Clifton Park avenue, which was leased to the North American corporation, operating a federal system of bakeries, at an annual rental of $1,500. The interesting and suggestive feature of the transaction is the fact that the store was formerly occupied by a saloon at $115 a month, a smaller rental than is to be paid by the present lessee.

While it undoubtedly is true that this cannot be cited as a criterion in connection with the leasing of other stores in the outlying districts, or elsewhere, occupied by saloons, it certainly is exceedingly suggestive, and goes to confirm the opinion of many brokers that eventually these saloon stores will be rented at a much better figure than now seems probable, and that the improved character of this new occupancy will result in better rentals in the remaining parts of these blocks, so that in the aggregate there will come better rentals, as well as more wholesome general surroundings.

James Kirk & Company Buys New $24,000 Site

Record was made of the purchase by James S. Kirk & Co. of three parcels from different owners on North avenue adjoining and near the present plant of the Kirk company for a total consideration of about $24,000. The property was acquired several years ago by the Kirk company with a view to future possible requirements. It is said no plans are had looking to its immediate improvement.

$1,500,000 LOAN UNDERWRITTEN FOR NEW HOTEL

Greenebaum Sons Also Arrange $750,000 Bond Issue.

The features of the week's market were the two big loans underwritten by Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company in connection with large building projects.

The largest was for $1,500,000 in connection with the erection of the proposed Webster hotel at the southwest corner of Lincoln Park West and Webster avenue, which, together with the land, will, it is stated, represent an investment of about $2,500,000. The loan will mature in two to ten years, with interest at 6 per cent.

Plan Sixteen Story Building.

The building, which is in course of construction, will occupy a lot 120½x128 feet, and will be sixteen stories and basement high. It will be of the highest type of fireproof construction and will contain 475 guest rooms arranged in single and two, three, and four room suites, each with kitchenette and breakfast room. It will be of attractive design in the Venetian style of architecture and will front on Lincoln park.

The first floor will be devoted to the hotel office, parlors, reception rooms and lounging rooms, etc., all elaborately furnished. The Webster Hotel company is the owner and will operate the hotel, which is expected to be completed and ready for occupancy about April 1, 1920.

$750,000 Loan.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company has also underwritten a serial bond issue of $750,000, maturing in two to ten years, at 6 per cent, secured by Philipsborn's new building, and the land, comprising an entire block, bounded by Harrison, Congress, and Palmer streets and Marshfield boulevard. The improvements comprise a new fireproof, steel and concrete building, eight stories and basement, the first unit of which is now in course of construction, size 267x122 feet, to contain approximately 268,000 square feet.

The new building was made necessary by the demand for more space. Philipsborn's is a growing mail order house. Louis M. Stumer is president, Charles Rubens vice president, Martin Philipsborn general manager and vice president, Louis J. Friedman treasurer, B. J. Rosenthal secretary, and M. J. Stein assistant treasurer.

In connection with the construction by Barrett Bros., builders, of the seven story fireproof apartment building at 6303-10 Kenwood avenue, to be known as the Kenwood apartments, James J. Barrett has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company, securing a loan of $185,000, ten years, at 6 per cent.

HOME BUYING MARKET SHOWS A SLOWING UP

Residence property failed to show the activity which has characterized it for several weeks. There were, however, a few noteworthy transactions, including both improved and vacant.

S. H. Greeley sold to John B. Burdett his residence property at Bryant avenue and Lloyd place, on the bluff overlooking the lake, at Winnetka. The lot fronts 100 feet, with a depth of 190 feet, and is improved with an attractive stucco residence, with large, roomy porches and containing nine rooms. The house is a new one, never having been occupied, and is one of three others adjoining, erected by Mr. Greeley, none of which has been occupied. The revenue stamps on the deed indicate a cash consideration of $28,000.

Herman Mack Gets Control of the Lexington Hotel

A deal was completed during the week by which Herman Mack secured sole control of the Lexington hotel, Michigan avenue and Twenty-second street.

This property is operated by the Interstate Hotel company a $600,000 corporation, which bought the hotel building and equipment just a year ago. It has been under the management of Mr. Mack during this period.

In the new deal Mr. Mack takes over the entire issue of common stock, which included the large holdings of Seymour Levy and Isaac Miller Hamilton.

The Lexington is a ten story fireproof structure, which originally cost $1,160,000 to build and equip. During the last year $90,000 has been expended on improvements and plans have been made to spend $100,000 additional in new equipment. The Interstate Hotel company will still operate the hotel under Mr. Mack's personal direction.

MAJ. JOHN E. MILLER DEAD.

Fort Wayne, Ind., May 17.—Maj. John E. Miller, one of Fort Wayne's most widely known citizens and prominent figures in military circles in the state for thirty-five years, died last night at the family residence following a stroke of paralysis.

$95,000 TRADE LEADS WEEK IN FLAT PROPERTY

Apartments Show Fair Activity; North Side in the Lead.

The week's market developed a fair degree of activity in apartment property, being much the same as during the previous week as regards both the volume of business and the properties involved.

The north side made the best showing, with several good sized transactions, in one of which Caroline D. Ordway sold to Oscar C. Hagen the twenty-four apartment building of four and five rooms on 140x125 feet of ground at 806-16 Montrose avenue, with gross annual rental of about $13,500, for an indicated consideration of $95,000, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000, cash being given for the equity. The Hool Realty company, P. T. Johnston associated, represented Mr. Hagen, and J. M. Hammer represented Mrs. Ordway.

The twenty apartment building at 651-53 Melrose street has been sold by Walter G. Young to Thomas Stevens and wife, Ida L., at a reported consideration of $65,000, subject to an incumbrance of $36,000. In exchange for the equity the purchasers conveyed the two story brick store and garage, lot 50x125 feet, at 3952-54 Broadway, for a reported consideration of $30,000. This property formerly was the Stevens theater at Broadway and Irving Park boulevard, which recently had been rebuilt by Mr. Stevens. W. E. Gamet of Emil J. Dirks' office was the broker. In this connection Mr. Gamet arranged a loan of $15,000 for Mr. Young on the Stevens property.

$90,000 Transaction.

Another large deal was the sale by Alice W. Sexsmith of Morton Grove, Ill., to Frederick H. Herhold of the Herhold Chair company of the thirty apartment building of two, four, and five rooms at 724-32 Roscoe street, near Elaine place, lot 120x150 feet.

While a nominal consideration is given, the actual price is said to have been about $90,000, subject to an incumbrance of $75,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment a lot 60x150 feet at the northeast corner of Lexington street and Washtenaw avenue. The flat property was recently purchased by Mrs. Sexsmith, who is said to have made a neat profit in the transaction. Lamont & Clasen represented the seller in the transaction.

South Side Deal.

The high grade eighteen apartment building at 848-58 East Sixty-fifth street, on a lot 136x125 feet, with a reported gross annual rental of over $8,000, the building being between Drexel and Maryland avenues, has been sold by Murray Wolbach to Frank G. and Helen Spreyne for an indicated consideration of $59,500, subject to an incumbrance of $32,500. The apartments contain four rooms, and in part payment the purchaser conveyed the property at the southwest corner of State street, improved with a building containing six flats, two stores, and a lodge hall, with a gross annual rental of about $4,000, for a reported consideration of $22,500 clear. S. S. Berry represented both parties.

Margaret H. Evans has acquired from Herman Smith the property at 1118 Lake street, Oak Park, lot 60x180 feet, south front, between Marion street and Seventy-second avenue, improved with a four story building containing four stores, six offices, four apartments, and two halls, with garages in the rear.

The building is said to have a gross annual rental of about $5,000 and the sale was subject to an incumbrance of $17,500. In exchange for the equity the seller took the property at 1837 Fremont street, 25x125 feet, with two story frame building renting for $600. W. P. Knapp of Kerfoot & Co.'s office represented both parties.

RAILWAY SUPPLY COMPANY BUYS FACTORY SITE

An important transaction in manufacturing property in the Calumet district involving the construction of a new plant with an ultimate cost of about $250,000 was made a matter of record. It was the purchase by the Iron Mountain company, a new concern in the railroad supply business, from the Pullman Land association of a tract of 13.93 acres on East Ninety-fifth street, 700 feet east of Cottage Grove avenue, adjoining the large plant of the American Shoe and Foundry company.

The property has a north frontage of 400 feet, with a depth of 1,200 feet on the north line and 1,178 feet on the east line, the south width being 630 feet. A stated consideration of $41,802 was given.

It was announced that the company within thirty days will begin the construction of the first unit of the plant, a one story structure to cost about $150,000. The ultimate improvements will represent a cost of about $250,000. A. J. Montague & Son represented both parties.

Roger Sullivan Quitclaims Big Property to His Son

There was filed for record a quitclaim by Roger C. Sullivan and wife, Helen M., to Boetius H. Sullivan, as trustee, under a trust agreement dated March 16, 1919, of the property at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Carpenter street, with garage improvements, 125x269 feet, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $214,000. It will be recalled that early in the week Roger Sullivan gave a trust deed to the Peoples Trust and Savings bank to secure a loan of $214,000 on 180x125 feet of the property at this corner.

Takes Lease on 30 Feet on North Michigan Ave.

An important transaction in North Michigan avenue business property was reported late in the week in the long term ground lease by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, from Mrs. Anna Boal Wickes of the property at No. 215, between South Water and Lake streets, 30x69½ feet. It runs for 99 years and provides for a straight net annual rental of $5,000, which, capitalized on a 5 per cent basis, gives a leasing value of $100,000. The leasee has the privilege of buying the property after five years and before ten years for $100,000. Perkins B. Bass & Co. represented the lessor and Winston & Co. the lessee. The trust company holds the adjoining fifty feet on the south and on the eighty feet will erect a six story and basement building to cost $85,000. It will conform to the adjoining building at the northeast corner of Lake street.

Motor Company Seeking $800,000 Land Lease

It is said that negotiations are in progress by which the Peacock estate will lease to the Packard Motor Car company a tract of 228,000 square feet at Thirty-seventh street and Princeton avenue, and a two story service station and factory to be erected, for a term of twenty years at an aggregate rental, said to be in excess of $800,000. The building, the plans for which are being prepared by Mundie & Jensen, is expected to cost about $600,000, and will contain about 80,000 square feet to the floor. This involves a change in the company's plans, as a little over a year ago it purchased the Manierre property at the northwest corner of Prairie avenue and Twenty-fourth street, 100x316 feet, also 99x188 feet in Indiana avenue, which it planned to improve with a service station to cost around $700,000.

Business Property Outside the Loop Shows Activity.

There was a fair amount of activity in outside business property, one transaction involving the erection of one of the largest theaters outside the loop district. This was the purchase by Edward M. Bertha from Thomas Gaynor and Frank Nacher of the property in Cottage Grove avenue between Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth streets. The lot is 175x125 feet, and was acquired by Mr. Bertha for a stated consideration of $87,500, which is at the rate of $500 a front foot.

While all of the details in connection with the proposed building have not been worked out, it is announced the theater will have a seating capacity of 3,200 and that the building, which it is expected will have stores on the first floor and offices in the upper stories, will cost in the neighborhood of $350,000.

It is expected to have it completed and ready for occupancy by Jan. 1 next. In connection with the acquirement of the land, Mr. Bertha has given a trust deed to the Chicago City Trust and Savings bank to secure a loan of $50,000, one year, at 6 per cent.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Open Air Amusements Can Insure Against Loss from Rain.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

The Excess Insurance Company of London has revived a project which was dropped because of the war, and will issue insurance policies against loss by rain during the summer months. The protection is intended for the benefit of managers of open-air fêtes and sports and for the proprietors of country and seaside resorts, whose receipts are largely dependent upon the weather.

Applications must be made at least seven days before the insurance is to take effect. For a premium of 15 shillings a week, $50 will be paid a week for each separate week in which there occur more than two days of rain amounting each day to two-tenths of an inch or over. Another form is issued providing compensation for the second and every additional rainy day in every separate week in which the rainfall amounts to .15 of an inch or over. The premium is one-fifth of the amount of compensation per day, and the policies can be effected for single days, specified days in each week, or for any number of consecutive days.

LIFE INSURANCE STATISTICS.

The premium income of the legal reserve life insurance companies of the United States passed the billion dollar mark last year for the first time in their history. The premium receipts were $1,018,402,533, an increase of $90,000,000 over the previous year. The assets of the companies at the beginning of this year were $6,427,805,355, an increase of $514,000,000. The ordinary insurance in force was $24,287,845,010, with $5,582,290,701 of industrial insurance. The net surplus, which has shown a normal increase of $40,000,000, fell off $37,000,000 because of the abnormal losses in the influenza epidemic during the closing months of the year.

INSURANCE NOTES.

The companies writing hail insurance continue to report a phenomenal demand for that class of protection, and with many of them it will make up for the loss of premiums due to the subsidence of the demand for explosion and war risk insurance. The price of wheat has been much higher than the government guarantee, the acreage is record breaking, and the prospects for the crop are unusually good, and the farmers are desirous of protecting their profits against the hail hazard.

The alien property custodian has sold 1,584 shares of the Guardian Life, formerly the Germania Life, which had been owned by German citizens. The only bidder was Hubert Cillis, president of the Guardian Life, who bought the stock at $137 a share for a syndicate made up of twenty officers and employes of the company.

The annual meeting of the National Board of Fire Underwriters will be held Thursday in New York City.

Rail Officials Report Gain in Eastern Tonnage

Officials of railroads operating eastward from Chicago and St. Louis report a moderate betterment in general tonnage over recent weeks, although much smaller than during the war period.

Business conditions indicate expanding tendencies. The large industries, however, are still operating at greatly reduced capacity.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Plans that have been under way in the east to extend credit to several European countries have been temporarily suspended by bankers, after careful consideration. It is stated that these plans are merely held in abeyance until peace has been signed. It is not likely that anything will be done until bankers are satisfied with the political outlook in Europe.

The world's ocean tonnage is still short, but this situation is gradually being overcome. The United States and Great Britain are building on a large scale. The Canadian government has contracted for forty-five ships, totaling 2??,000 tons, and most of these ships will be finished this year. France is constructing wooden ships in Canada. The financial interest in the situation is shown by the report that the strongest pool in New York is working in shipping stocks.

The demand from the orient for American cigarets is said to be almost insatiable. During the twelve months just ended the number of cigarets exported to the orient will exceed 8,000,000,000, as compared with less than ,000,000,000 in 1915.

The Iron Mountain company, a new concern in the railway supply business, has purchased 13.93 acres in East Ninety-fifth street, Pullman. The company is to put up a plant that will cost more than $250,000.

Small lots of copper have just been sold at 16⅝ cents a pound; large lots have sold at 16¼. It is thought likely that the price will be advanced to 16½ tomorrow.

The amount of the loan which bankers of the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan are to make to China will probably be about $100,000,000, to be paid in installments of $25,000,000 over a period of years.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in local unlisted securities continues steady, with Butler Bros. the prominent feature for the week; stock advanced to 226 on a small volume of trade and closed at 222@224. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was quite active between 215 and 220, but closed easier at 211 to 214. Automatic Electric was unchanged at 89 to 91. Linderman Steel was extremely active, advancing to sales at 19¾, closing at 19 to 19½. This advance was due to rumors the company could liquidate between 20 and 25. Great Lakes was moderately active between 76 and 78.

Pay for Your Liberty Bonds.

The Liberty loan campaigns were a prodigious success. They increased the number of bond owners in the United States from about 500,000 to more than 20,000,000. These millions of people bought all the bonds the government offered and were ready to take more. There is, however, one important detail which they have not yet disposed of fully. That is the matter of paying for the bonds.

Enormous amounts of bonds of the fourth loan are held by banks, which are waiting for investors to complete payments for them. Probably substantial amounts of the third loan are still so held, and, of course, much of the last one.

The "four-minute" orators told their audiences that a bond was practically equivalent to cash and really better, because it was earning interest. Many investors accepted that statement too literally, and have failed to see the necessity of paying in full.

The fact is that it is just as necessary to pay for the bonds as it was to buy them. As long as billions of dollars' worth of bonds are held in banks as collateral, the country cannot get down from its financial stilts. Until the bonds have been paid for out of savings and not by loans against future savings, the same kind of inflation will exist as if the war had been financed by issuing paper currency—the method that was followed in Germany.

It is the duty of every investor to curtail his expenditures and pay for his bonds. The sooner this is done, the better for everybody concerned.

Milwaukee Electric Railway.

I. W. D., Oregon, Wis.—The Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company, like other electric railways, has been affected severely by rising costs. Although gross earnings increased, net after taxes, in 1918, was only $1,807,768, compared with $2,129,454 in 1917. Interest increased and the surplus after charges was $717,802. Charges evidently were covered a little more than one and one-half times. The recent issue of $3,800,000 of five year notes presumably will increase interest charges further and decrease the margin of safety. They are entitled to rank as a business man's investment.

Washington-Idaho Water & Light.

J. H. R.—The Washington-Idaho Water, Light, and Power company serves a population of 15,000 with electric light and power and part of it with water. Interest on the $728,000 of first mortgage bonds is earned more than twice. The bonded debt is moderate in proportion to gross earnings. Net earnings have been increasing steadily for five years. The bonds are well secured. Their market is narrow.

Brief Answers.

C. H. H.—United Alloy Steel earned $5.01 a share on its 525,000 shares of no par value in 1918, compared with $8.34 in 1917. Sales were larger, but profit was less, and a much larger allowance was made for depreciation.

O. J. R.—The Kentucky River Oil company has reputable backing. Its bonds were issued to raise money for development purposes. They are necessarily somewhat speculative.

M. F. F.—Martin and Salter say they are offering no shares for sale and decline to furnish any data about their oil proposition.

traders were disturbed for a y the request of Julius Barnes e limit be put on trading in corn s, destricting open interests to bushels.

ffect, however, was not as marked nerally expected, because the open t was not generally large or great- xtended. Prices made their highest after the opening following a dip, weakened on liquidating sales and d well toward the inside, with May off 3⅝c, July 2¼c, and September . Oats lost ⅛@⅝c in Chicago. Rye s 4½@5½c lower, and barley 2@2¼c wer in Chicago. Corn in the southwest t ⅝@4¼c, the latter on May in St. uis. Oats there were 1@1¼c lower, hile in Minneapolis the losses were 1⅛ 1¼c, and in Winnipeg ¾@1¼c. Rye tures in Minneapolis lost 4⅝@5c and arley ⅝@⅝c.

Corn futures, compared with a week go, are 1⅛c lower on May, 3¼c off on uly, and ¾c off on September. Losses n oats are 1⅛@1¼c, the latter on July. uly pork is $2.05 lower and distant utures of lard 80@82½c lower, while May is [illegible]. July ribs are 75c lower nd May 5c lower than a week ago.

Liquidation On in Corn.

Liquidation was on in corn as the re- ult of the suggestion made by Julius H. Barnes to the board of trade officials that rading in that grain be curtailed. At he opening prices were down 2c, with a omplete recovery later on short covering ut the buying soon ran its course, and drop of 4⅝@6¼c lower with stop loss rders uncovered on the way down. Short overing in evening up for the week nade a rally of 1c from the inside figure t the last, and the close was at $1.71¼ or May, $1.59⅝ for July, and $1.53⅝ for eptember.

Reports of increased country offerings rom Iowa with around 30,000 bu bought o arrive were also a factor, as were the avorable weather reports. The weekly orecast was for showers the first part f the week, and again around Friday, ith normal temperatures. Planting is rogressing very rapidly over the belt, nd the increase in offerings from Iowa as regarded as a forerunner of wheat ould be witnessed within a few days. Sample values were unchanged to 3c ower, the market closing easy. Receipts 9 cars, and shipping sales 30,000 bu. Lo- al receipts for the week of 627,000 bu ere 20,000 bu in excess of the shipments. ast year receipts were 1,530,000 bu, and hipments 643,000 bu.

Oats Decline with Corn.

Sentiment in oats was bearish due to the favorable crop reports and the break [illegible], and while Mr. Barnes' sugges- tion as to limiting trading applied only to corn, longs became uneasy and sold freely, the close being within ¼@½c of the bottom, with May at 67c, July at 65¾c, and September at 62⅝c. May showed the most strength, due to the removal of hedges against sales of 100,000 bu to the seaboard, and 35,000 bu domestic. The oats sold to exporters will be shipped to Rotterdam.

News generally was of a depressing character. Receipts were 69 cars, and sample values ½@1½c lower. Country offerings are small as yet. For the week arrivals were 1,437,000 bu, and shipments 1,511,000 bu. Last year receipts were 1,877,000 bu, and shipments 1,474,000 bu. The trade look for a fair reduction in the visible. Elevator interests sold oat futures at Minneapolis.

Rye in Sharp Break.

Rye futures dropped sharply here and at Minneapolis in sympathy with other grain, closing with net losses of 4⅜@5½c. There were no sales of spot, which were nominally 1@1½c over July for No. 2. Receipts 2 cars. Minneapolis cash was 4½c lower, and Milwaukee 7@8c lower. The northwest received 97 cars.

Barley offerings were moderate and sold fairly at unchanged prices. Maltsters were fair buyers. Spot sales were at $1.15@1.21. Receipts 27 cars. Milwaukee was unchanged, and Minneapolis 1c lower. The northwest received 106 cars.

Flax seed at Duluth closed 4½@5c lower; May, $4.12½; July, $4.07½. Winnipeg, 2½c higher to 2½c lower; May, $4.04; July, $3.89. The three markets had 23 cars.

Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, $8.00@12.00, per 100 lbs. Toledo, 2½@5c lower; September, $6.07½; July, $5.70, per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed unchanged. Country lots, $35.00@40.00, per 100 lbs. Toledo, 5c lower; October, $19.85, per bu of 60 lbs.

Hogs Up; Product Down.

Hogs were up to the highest price of the week, but the break in corn and selling by speculators in a poorly supported market carried hog products off and prices declined and closed around the bottom figures, with liberal losses on lard and ribs. Trading was mostly in July delivery. Foreign demand was said to be fair. Shipments of lard and ribs for the week aggregated 25,535,000 lbs, against 35,177,000 lbs the previous week, and 21,610,000 lbs last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Grain traders were surprised at the action of Julius Barnes in asking the Board of Trade to put on the lid limiting individual open interests in corn to 200,000 bu. It is not likely to be on long, because the indications are that the peace treaty will be signed by July 1 and possibly sooner. The Board of Trade directors are not expected to take any action until their meeting on Tuesday unless they have a special meeting on Monday.

That the open interest in corn was not as extended as many expected was shown by the action of the market yesterday. A feature of the trading on Saturday was the evening up of lines by spreaders who were short September and long July, the former being bought and the latter sold, which strengthened the September so that the net losses of the day were only 1⅛c, or 1c less than the decline in July. Many traders reduced their lines to the 200,000 bu limit, although it was said that others were disposed to wait for a better market. The July-September spread at one time was 7⅛c, and at the close was 5⅝c.

Traders generally are looking for lower prices Monday, unless the unexpected happens. Sunshine is making them bearish and there is a disposition to make them work more on the short side and the bulls are not as hopeful as they were, although they say that the short sellers will wind themselves up within a few days. The traders in oats on the main are bearish, but there was a good class of buying yesterday by several of the big houses and cash premiums remained at 2¼c over July for standards and 1½c to 1¾c over for No. 3 whites.

Seeding in the Canadian northwest is well advanced and practically completed in some sections. Expectations are that the acreage in spring wheat will be less than last year.

J. Carroll Fahey of John T. Fahey & Co., Baltimore, has been in Chicago most of the last week trying to place Argentine corn with little success. He believes, however, that a considerable business will be done later in the season and expects that special rates will be put in from the seaboard.

Receipts of all grains at Chicago last week were only 2,973,000 bu, compared with 3,014,000 bu the previous week and 3,853,000 bu last year. The aggregate was the smallest at this time in over five years. Receipts of corn and oats were decidedly small for this time of year and the lightest in over five years, corn receipts being only 627,000 bu and were only 20,000 bu more than the shipments. Receipts of oats of 1,437,000 bu were 74,000 bu less than the shipments. Wheat shipments were about three times the receipts.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 420,965,000 bu, corn 111,761,000 bu, and oats 247,675,000 bu. Last year receipts of wheat were 166,947,000 bu, corn 187,297,000 bu, and oats 299,925,000 bu.

It is understood the buying of cash oats in the west of late has all been by one eastern interest, who are believed to be securing a line of grain in order to fill an order from Rotterdam. Sales reports in all positions to the seaboard during the week aggregated about 1,250,000 bu.

Spain may export wheat this year, although normally it imports around 10,000,000 bu, annually. J. Ralph Pickell, editor of the Rosenbaum Review, cabled from Madrid that on the basis of present acreage and prospective yield, Spain will export 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 bu wheat this season.

Broomhall cables that sellers of new Argentine corn are having difficulty in filling their contracts owing to light movement from the interior.

Apparently the Australian "Take All" disease in winter wheat is spreading. It has been reported in Henderson county, Ill., and Saline county, Mo. In Madison county, Ill., where it was first recognized, about 3,000 acres out of about 60,000 acres in the county are reported as affected.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Cash wheat prices at Chicago and at Minneapolis showed little change, but at St. Louis the call was slow, and red winter there dropped 1½c and hard winter 5c. Local receipts, 12 cars.

Industries were the best buyers of cash corn at Chicago and St. Louis, but prices weakened and closed 1@3c lower here, while St. Louis was 1@4c lower. Kansas City advanced 1@2c, while Omaha was 3@4c lower, Milwaukee 2c lower, and Peoria unchanged.

Demand for cash oats was fair, but with futures weak prices declined ½@1½c here, with No. 3 white 1@1½c over and standards 2c over July. St. Louis was off 1½@2c, Kansas City ½@1c, Omaha 1½c, Peoria ½c, and Milwaukee 1c. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

*Highest week on record.

The expected happened in yesterday's hog market prices advancing 20@30c to the high point of the week, with both light and best heavy weights selling at $21.10, the top of the market. Receipts at 4,000, including 1,000 to Armour, were below expectations, the smallness of the supply keeping practically half the regular packers out of the trade. About 1,000 were held off the market on orders from the country.

Smallest hog receipts of the year and a general narrowing of the price range were features in the week's trade. Closing values were 40@50c above low point of the week with the selling fraternity confidently counting on a higher range of prices the fore part of the coming week, some predicting a higher range than early in the month when the record top of $21.55 was reached.

Average Price High.

Average price of hogs Saturday at $20.92 was highest since Wednesday, May 7, when the record average of $21.21 was made. Besides being 24c higher than Friday the average stood 36c above previous Saturday and $3.43 higher than a year ago. Estimated average weight last week was 232 pounds, being one pound lighter than previous week and five pounds lighter than a year ago.

Combined receipts of hogs at the eleven markets Saturday totaled 32,000, being a third smaller than a week ago and 3,000 smaller than a year ago. For the week eleven points received 572,000, or 74,000 less than previous week, 42,000 more than a year ago, and 68,000 more than the ten year average for corresponding week since 1909.

Few Cattle on Sale.

Cattle receipts at 1,000 included only a few loads offered for sale. Receipts of cattle for the week totaled only 41,900, or over 22,000 less than previous week. Demand improved greatly, causing advances of 50c@$1.00. Cows and heifers averaged $11.45 for the week, while canners and cutters averaged $6.90, each being only 10c higher, due to the poorer grade offered. Calves averaged $13.55, or 45c lower, while stockers and feeders at $12.45 were same as previous week.

While bulk of steers advanced 50c@$1.00 during the week, the average price at $15.10 was 30c lower than the previous week, being the result of the poor quality. Best steers during the week sold at $18.85, being 90c lower than previous week and lowest for any week since last July. Only a few sales were recorded during the week above the $18.00 line, while a comparatively small number reached the $17.00 mark.

Sheep Came Direct.

Packers had most of the sheep direct from other markets; a few lots of sale stock were not shown, going over for Monday. Trade was very slow and lower during the week, the scarcity of wooled lambs cutting the average price for the week to $16.65, or $1.15 below previous week. Sheep averaged $11.85, or $1.65 below the previous week and $2.65 lower than a year ago.

At the convention of the National Live Stock Exchange held at Pittsburgh, Everett C. Brown of Chicago was unanimously elected president, C. B. Heineman, also of Chicago, was named secretary, and W. A. Moody of St. Louis was elected treasurer.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 33,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep. Estimated arrivals for next week, 48,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep.

COFFEE PRICES.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The market for coffee futures showed continued firmness today, not only recovering the balance of its recent reaction, but making new high records. The market closed 34 to 55 points net higher.

Closing bids: May, 18.54c; July, 18.85c; September, 18.44c; October, 18.24c; December, 17.84c; January, 17.74c; March, 17.65c.

Spot coffee was firm; Rio 7s, 19c; Santos 4s, 23@23¼c. The official cables reported no change in Brazil except Santos 4s, which were 50@75 reis higher. Brazilian port receipts, 30,000 bags; Jundiahy receipts, 17,000 bags. Rio cleared 23,000 bags for New York. Fine weather was reported in Sao Paulo, with temperatures ranging from 53 to 88 degrees.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Swift International stock showed full recovery to the prices obtaining before the publication of the company's balance sheet last Friday morning. The shares were again well bought. They opened up 1 point at 59½ and closed 1 point better, with the market in good tone. The belief obtained that the figures of the balance sheet could not be construed as a guide to the value of the subsidiary properties controlled by the holding company. If the insiders familiar with these values were willing to buy of the stock the outsiders concluded the lead furnished was more satisfactory than the balance sheet.

Booth Fisheries common was again in fair demand and Sears-Roebuck was up 3 points to 200½. Union Carbide and the street railroad issues were steady. Shipbuilding common on a moderate amount of buying advanced 4 points to 126.

Mitchell Motor stock sold off 1 point to 43 a price which compares with 50 a short time ago. There is no special explanation for the decline except that the stock was bought up too fast and there may have been some disappointment over the figures for the latter part of 1918. However, the statement for that period does not reflect the present condition of the company.

COTTON PRICE UP; HIGHEST OF WEEK

New York, May 17.—Cotton advanced to the highest price of the week and closed at nearly the top, with gains of 20@43 points, the latter on October.

Buying was instigated by reports of rains in northern Texas and activity in the dry goods trade, with strong prices and buying by manufacturers with the trade demand being the main bullish factor, combined with reports that with the actual signing of the peace treaty the demand from abroad will be greatly enlarged. Prospects are for an increased movement in Spain and other countries.

Crop prospects on the whole are somewhat better than recently, but many regard them as bullish. Prices follow:

FINANCIAL houses like to refer to specially fine stock certificates, bonds, notes, etc., as "looking like real money." Such instruments command a respect among them and from their customers that cannot be accorded ready-print forms or to those of cheap workmanship.

Only those who, like bankers, regard their affairs as of more than commonplace dignity and importance, could be interested in the extraordinarily fine and impressive engraving, lithography and printing that we do. May we quote on your next job?

WE WILL BUY YOUR LIBERTY BONDS AT PAR
On the following conditions:
1. The entire proceeds are to be deposited in our Department for Savings at 3% per annum, payable semi-annually.
2. The deposit is to remain intact for one year, at any time after which 25% is subject to withdrawal; the remaining 75% is to remain a second year, after which it is subject to withdrawal.
3. The purchase from any one seller will be limited to $5,000.00.

We Make This Proposition Because—
1. We believe that some people are selling their bonds at ruinously low prices because they fear a further decrease in price and the eventual loss of part of their savings;
2. We believe that these bonds are intrinsically worth par and are prepared to back up our opinion in this way;
3. We wish a larger number of people to know the advantages of our Department for Savings.

The net result of the above operation will be that you will be absolutely sure of receiving par for your bonds and will be in the same position as if you sold the bonds on the market today and redeposited your savings in a savings bank, with the additional advantage that you will receive for your bonds the full price paid for them and avoid a loss of from $5.00 to $6.00 on every $100.00.

Your income of 3% per annum continues payable January and July.

We welcome the opportunity to serve you.

Large Industrial, Going Corporation

Capital $500,000

To right party will give ½ interest and may serve in official capacity or presidency, if desired, and go 50-50 for a little bid furnishing development money, which will be earned back in 3 or 4 months. Company sound, unlimited possibilities for expansion and quick returns, and safe, as we own this property outright—no debts. We need $25,000 to $50,000 for development purposes; this will then return half a million from land sales, besides crop earnings. If only 1,000 acres are planted to beans now, crop will net us $50,000 this fall; nothing safer as an investment than rich land and farming. Alfalfa here runs $200 per acre. When crops are in and actively shown on ground, we will take buyer down, sell land—this rich land, with all its advantages, sells readily. The property joins the city of Santa Fe, the capital; perfect climate, rich soil, plenty water; will raise anything; transportation best; ready market, fine schools, etc. Money to be used for farming, buying tractors, beans and alfalfa seed, clearing and plowing; none wasted on promotion. No brokers need reply; will deal only with principals who have cash to get in crops quickly.

Figures of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week just ended showed an increase of $4,462,729 in bills discounted for member institutions.

This is relatively a small sum to represent the requirements of Victory loan subscriptions. Offsetting this expansion there was a decrease of $3,191,000 in bills rediscounted for federal reserve banks. Federal reserve bank notes decreased $1,627,740. The figures as a whole showed a net expansion of about $3,000,000 in total loans, investments, etc., held by the bank.

The treasury department drew out $18,-640,438, of its deposits, leaving that item at the negligible sum of $383,604.

Some explanation of the occasion, in part, for the advance in call money rates in New York last week may be found in the withdrawals of cash by the treasury department. In two weeks the government withdrew $181,021,000. While this deposit requires no reserve against it, the funds are loanable and, carried in the call money market, their withdrawal means the exact equivalent in shrinkage in loaning power. There was some reason, therefore for the banks either calling loans, or raising rates in order to counteract this outgo.

CONGRESS HOTEL VOTES $1,000,000 STOCK DIVIDEND

Prosperity enjoyed by the hotel business in Chicago during the last year was reflected yesterday by action taken by the directors and stockholders of the Congress Hotel and Annex company at their meetings.

At the stockholders' meeting it was voted to increase the capital stock of the company from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000. Half of the new stock, or $1,000,000 was voted as a 50 per cent stock dividend to the holders of the old stock. The other $1,000,000 in new stock was placed in the treasury of the company, which already held $100,000 of the old stock. With the dividend on this $100,000 included, $1,150,000 in stock is left in the treasury. At the directors' meeting, following that of the stockholders, a dividend of 3 per cent was declared, payable on both the old and the new stock on July 1 to stockholders of record June 30.

"The company has enjoyed a most prosperous year," said S. R. Kaufman, its president. "We have been paying large dividends right along and the new stock dividend is authorized by our financial condition. The outlook for continued prosperity of the company is encouraging."

STOCK MARKET EASILY ABSORBS REALIZING SALES

Approach of Special Session Brings Rail Issues to the Fore.

The New York Times.

New York, May 17.—[Special.]—A heavy output of realizing sales was absorbed with sufficient ease in today's stock dealings to permit a somewhat irregular but generally strong list of prices to be quoted at the close of business.

The selling in major part was the natural product of an active week which had produced a decided expansion of speculation in the railroad issues and had been accomplished by further advances of industrial stocks. Study of the day's business failed to disclose any weakening of the underlying structure of the long series of million share days.

Special Session Factor.

Sentiment revealed in brokerage offices comment showed that the influence of the special congress session was favorable, especially upon partisans of the railroad shares, who trust that early action will be taken to permanently settle the transportation situation.

The day's business indicated more clearly than on Friday that the railroad stocks were coming to the fore of speculative attention. In the first hour, when these issues were being bid upward, rather quickly in case of several, the steel, copper, and specialty groups were inclined to move slowly.

As offerings increased later the rails gave ground with more stubbornness than the others. There was greater activity among standard dividend payers than in the lower priced stocks, a development which was not peculiar to yesterday's session and has been causing conjecture since the Victory loan campaign closed as to whether or not a round amount of investment purchases was not mingled with speculative buying.

A sharp advance of the Mercantile Marine shares enlivened the market in late trading, reflecting fresh attention to the possibility of the famous "deal" being renewed over the company's British tonnage.

Foreign Exchange Heavy.

Offerings of French and Italian exchange were heavy again and in consequence an extension of the declining movement of quotations occurred to new low levels for the year. In case of francs, the minimum quotation of 6.42½ for cables established a low record for all time. Hereafter transactions in Italian exchange will be handled freely by the banks without being supervised by the Italian institute, which had controlled operations in lire for more than a year.

The future of these markets is as obscure as ever despite the protracted decline of rates and the source of selling in great volume has not been clearly defined.

BRYAN PRAISES LEAGUE AS STEP TOWARD PEACE

Presbyterian General Assembly Praises Wilson and Daniels.

St. Louis, Mo., May 17.—Declaring that the league of nations is the "greatest step toward peace ever taken in 1,000 years," William J. Bryan, addressing the one hundred and thirty-first general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America here today, said he was hopeful "that we are going to see peace unbroken from now on." Mr. Bryan, who is a commissioner to the assembly from Nebraska, was given an ovation when he appeared before the churchmen.

The educational influence of the league of nations, Mr. Bryan asserted, "is beyond what any of us can calculate."

Praise for Wilson.

A demonstration was started by the commissioners at the sessions today when the name of President Wilson was mentioned, and a cablegram was sent felicitating the president upon his work and assuring him of "continued interest and prayer from all Presbyterians." Secretary of Navy Daniels was praised for reforms in the navy.

Resolutions presented to the assembly included provisions for proper observance of the Sabbath and strong condemnation of Sunday baseball, motion pictures, and other Sunday sports and amusements.

Terms upon which the Presbyterian church will participate in the interchurch world movement, as approved by the executive council, include elimination of the Y. M. C. A. from the movement and a refusal to enter into a united campaign with other Protestant churches for raising a centralized fund. The recommendations of the executive council are expected to be adopted by the assembly.

Reason for Y. M. C. A. Bar.

The resolutions of the council declared that "the nature of the Y. M. C. A. organization is not similar enough to that of the church so that the two can coöperate to the best advantage."

The fundamental objects of the federated movement were approved by the committee, but creation of a "superboard" to direct the plan with powers transcending those of the boards of member churches was condemned.

PRINT MAKERS EXHIBIT OPENS AT INSTITUTE

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

A fascinating exhibition is that of the Print Makers of Los Angeles, which opened yesterday in the print room of the Art institute. Scheduled for early in May, various incidents connected with railroads and express combined to cause delay.

There are in the exhibit etchings, lithographs, and colored prints. They dwell upon an infinite variety of subjects, placed for the most part in California and Mexico. There are buildings, stately avenues, country roads where friendly trees meet overhead, fields black under the plowshare, water ruffled in the wind, sheep grazing upon barren hillsides, quaint conceits of children's stories, and a few prints designed with decorative purpose.

Among the most charming are "Eucalyptus Grove" and "The Avenue," by J. Cotton; "After the Rain" and "Dusk," by F. H. Gearhart; "Western Moonlight" and "Plowing Time," by F. B. Lemos; "The Old Pier," by W. S. Rice; "Mary Pickford as Butterfly," by Clare Cronenwell; "The Pied Piper," by Ted Swift, and several excellent lithographs of lions and tigers and eagles by Elsie Henderson.

No Other Truck Has It

Look under the hood of any other truck on the market and you won't find it. Yet it is the biggest improvement which has been put on motor trucks within recent years.

The Clydesdale Automatic Controller, commonly called "The Driver Under the Hood."

Many trucks have good motors. Many have high grade transmissions, axles and other parts. But every experienced truck operator knows that the source of most truck operating difficulties comes from the carelessness and inexperience of drivers.

The finest assembly of parts ever put together can be utterly ruined within a few weeks' time by careless, ignorant drivers.

The Clydesdale has, we believe, the highest grade, best made parts of any truck on the market.

But the important point is that every moving part—motor, transmission, axle, etc., are thoroughly protected against straining, breaking, and unnecessary wear by this remarkable little device.

It automatically controls the motor at all speeds. The driver has nothing to do with the motor. He can't abuse it. He can't let it race. He can't shoot in the gas suddenly by jamming down the accelerator pedal and strain and shock every moving part.

All he does is to set the hand throttle lever—then steer, and work the brake and clutch pedals.

The controller opens and closes the throttle automatically, depending upon the changing conditions of road and load—keeping the truck moving at the fixed speed determined by the position of the throttle lever, just as the most expert driver would do it if he had nothing to do but watch the motor. You can see for yourself what a big saving this means.

Clydesdale owners say that the saving in gas alone amounts to 10% of their investment.

It saves every moving part of the truck—motor, transmission and axles—doubles their life, makes breakage almost impossible and overhauling a rarity.

Yet this is only one of a number of money-saving features which have made the Clydesdale famous thruout the world.

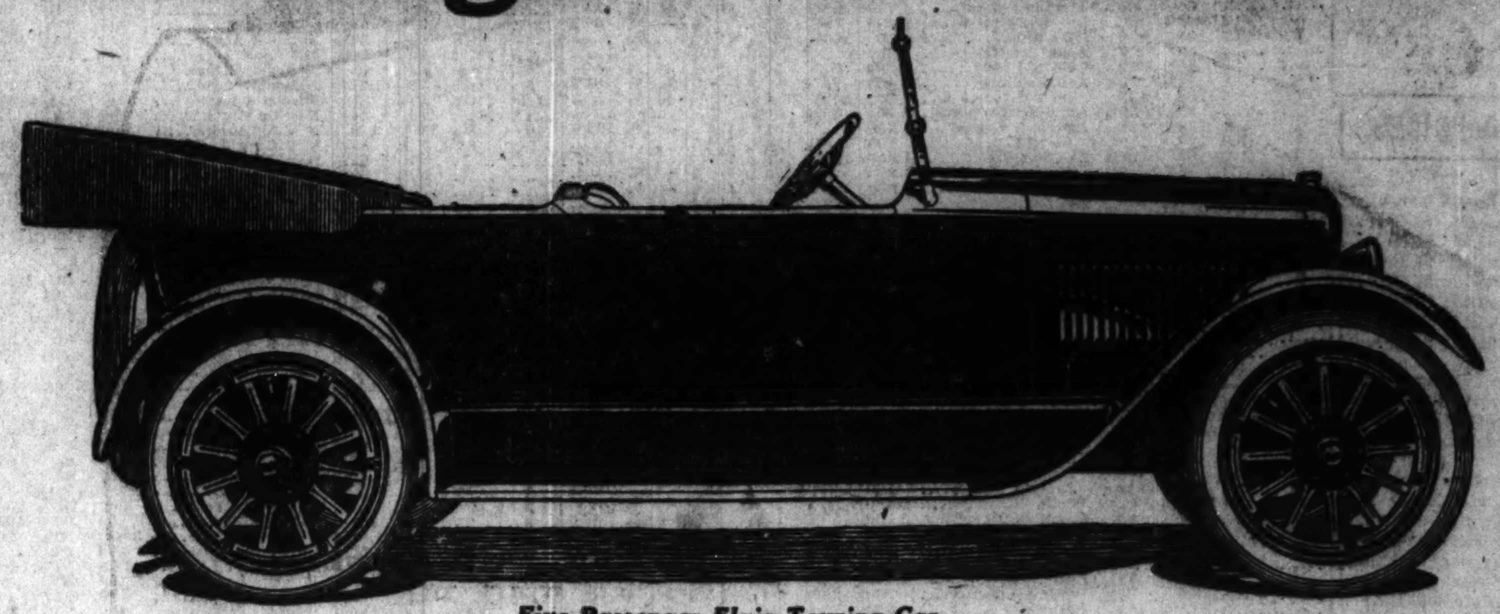
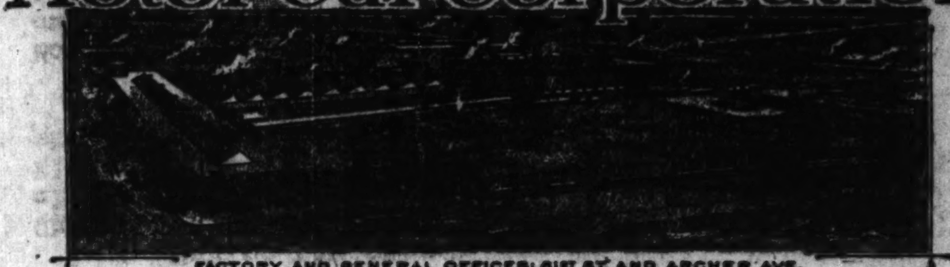
Chicago's Own Car



Five Passenger Elgin Touring Car

Elgin
Motor Car Corporation



FACTORY AND GENERAL OFFICES: 51ST ST. AND ARCHER AVE.

May 15, 1919.

To Chicago Motorists:

Chicago's Own Car, the beautiful Elgin Six, will hereafter be sold in this locality by the Elgin Motor Car Sales Company, 2427 Michigan Avenue.

They offer you in the Elgin Six, built in Chicago, the biggest and best car on the market today at the price.

This quiet, smooth-running, easy-riding Motor Thoroughbred, by winning perfect scores and highest economy honors in all of the many contests it has entered during the past three years, has fairly won the title of "World's Champion Light Six".

The story of Elgin winnings is an impressive one. Ask an Elgin salesman to tell you about it.

The Elgin Six is the only car sold in Chicago upon which the buyer does not have to pay freight in addition to the purchase price.

Having the only passenger car factory in Chicago, with a surplus stock of parts and accessories always on hand valued at more than One Million Dollars, Elgin owners do not have to wait for spare parts to be shipped from some other city.

And our factory has transferred to the Elgin Motor Car Sales Company, for the convenience of Elgin owners, a complete organization of courteous and highly trained service experts.

These men will continue to keep Elgin owners happy by the speed with which they carry out our GOLDEN RULE SERVICE POLICY, rendering unto Elgin owners the same kind of generous, cheerful service they themselves would like to receive.

But Elgin Sixes seldom go to the Service station. We build them to stay on the road.

Any Elgin Owner will tell you a story of performance, comfort and low cost of gas, tires and up-keep, that will be the most convincing reason why you too should own an Elgin Six.

Prospective car buyers, to avoid long delays in deliveries, must place their orders promptly, for the car shortage is daily growing more acute.

Respectfully yours,
C. S. Rieman
President & General Manager.

Accessories before the Fact

by

Antoinette Donnelly

III

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE fact being the bride and groom. The accessories being what fills the feminine heart after due deduction has been made for the room taken up by the groom. Which seems to be a pretty big space when one thinks of the flowers, the veil, the linens, the lingerie, and all the other lovely details that make the day the Great Adventure. Their choosing being a matter of personal choice, which suggests a resemblance to the groom in that respect, these accessories provide opportunity for quite individual taste.

However, a few suggestions as to bride's and bridesmaid's bouquets and trousseau linens and so on may be just what you were looking for, or these I offer may inspire suggestions to your mind that you may carry out on a more individual scale if it is to be a season of wedding bells for you.

In illustration No. 1 is a colonial corsage bouquet for the tailored bride made of sweet peas, marguerites, forget-me-nots, violets, and maidenhair fern in a fringed paper holder, tied with old fashioned brocaded ribbon.

In illustration No. 2 we have field daisies showered with daisies and narrow ribbon.

In illustration No. 3 is a dream of a bride's bouquet made up of lilies of the valley, dendrobium, and orchids, and the large lacy maidenhair fern.

Other bridal bouquet combinations are white roses (bud size preferably) and asparagus tied with a streamer of rare old lace.

Or a bridal bouquet of white sweet peas and maidenhair fern with ribbon and sweet pea shower. Add orchids if you choose.

Or lilies of the valley, white orchids, maidenhair fern, and the larger leafed lacy fern known as Adiantum Farleyense.

White freesia in a shower bouquet is a thing of joy.

An arm shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and maidenhair fern, with shower of both narrow and wide ribbon, the narrow ending in lilies of the valley.

White carnations, lilies of the valley, and asparagus are effective.

For bridesmaids' bouquets:

Pink roses and Adiantum Farleyense.

Or white marguerites, mignonette, and maidehair fern.

Or Du President Carnot roses and maidenhair fern.

Pink and white sweet peas, or white and lavender sweet peas, with shower.

For the tailored bride there are corsages of lovely combinations: Tiny fireflame roses with blue flowers and ribbon and fern; or sweet peas of any one color or mixed harmonious colors and fern; or lilac and lilies of the valley; or sweet peas and lilies of the valley and fern; or an old fashioned corsage of roses, lilies of the valley, pansies, and hyacinths, with lace paper back; or orchids, lilies of the valley, and maidenhair fern.

Of cousse, all flower combinations with colors in them must be studied out in harmony with the gowns.

As for lingerie, the family purse must be the barometer of its lavishness, for one may buy nightgowns of brocaded satin and real lace and chiffon cloth ones, trimmed with waxen orange blossoms and georgette crêpe trimmed with real filet and orange blossoms, and one may buy a chemise to match the gown in elegance, and then to make things quite all right with the beautiful saleslady you must buy a large envelope made of exquisite lace and embroidery, and choice sachet for the aforesaid gowns.

There are envelopes, diamond shape and square and long, with sliding ribbons and most exquisite sachet into which the robes de nuit are tucked before putting them into the honeymoon trunk.

Perhaps you will want a half dozen vest chemises, one-half dozen envelope chemises, one-half dozen night gowns, and four skirts, two lacy ones for summer dresses and negligees and two street ones. If you wear knickerbockers of crepe de Chine, you will want four pairs of them at least, and corset covers to match. But most women nowadays wear the chemise vest under the corset and the envelope chemise to serve as corset cover and petticoat over. Or you may want a dozen of these. But that's easily settled if you have the money to settle it. You will want two good corsets at least, a half dozen pairs of dark silk stockings and a couple of pairs of white, besides the lace pair for the wedding day, and shoes for the street and for the house; a bath robe and kimono or two.

The selection of linens for the dower chest has to be carefully planned, but the list below will fill a normal requirement.

Three 2x2 yard table cloths.
One 2x3 yard table cloth.
One dozen napkins [breakfast size].
One dozen napkins [dinner size].
One dozen napkins [dinner size].
One table pad.
Two hemstitched tray or carving cloths.
One dozen bathroom towels.
One dozen bedroom towels.
One-half dozen bath towels.
Six pairs hemstitched cotton sheets, double bed size.
Six pairs hemstitched linen pillow cases.
Three bedspreads with bolster covers.
Two pairs blankets, double bed size.
One dozen dish towels.
One dozen glass towels.
Two comforters.

SWEET WILLIAMS.

"HURRY up, you'll git left!" shouted the porter. "Hurry!" called an anxious woman from the rear platform and a little girl at her side echoed, "Hurry!" The 11 year old boy to whom these warnings were addressed ran pell mell toward the train. He grasped a bouquet of wild sweet williams and called to the little girl, "I got them for you." She clapped her hands joyously and then she said, "O, dear," in a frightened voice, for the boy had fallen and had bruised his head in the sharp gravel. He scrambled up and delivered the flowers with as brave a smile as he could muster up, for an ugly cinder had lodged in his eye.

I was the young miss who received the flowers and the boy was my first sweetheart. Our mothers happened to be traveling west in the same car and during all of the journey Walter had been my devoted knight, sharing his childish treasures with me and risking his very life, so it seemed to me, by going into the field near where the train had stopped to pick me a bouquet of sweet williams.

It was his farewell gift, for Walter and his mother were leaving at the next station. With childish lack of foresight we did not bother about addresses and when I said good-by to my hero (his right eye hurt so that he could only give me a half smile)

I did not hear from him again for years, though I cherished his little gifts and often thought of him.

When I was a big girl in high school I heard of him again in a strange way. A young woman violinist came to our town with a concert company. Her surname was the same as Walter's—a most unusual one. I kept thinking about it and the next day I called at the hotel where the company had stopped. She had gone, but they gave me her address and I inquired if she were related to Walter, and if so to send me his address. To my joy a note came giving me his address in a western city.

I wrote to him and by return mail had a letter which proved that Walter was as glad to find me as I to find him. It was the beginning of a correspondence that lasted for four years. He was a magazine and newspaper writer and his letters were delightful evidences of his literary talents. There was a peculiar lack of anything personal in them, however. He told me the details of his work, but never anything about his amusements. For some reason I could never persuade him to send me his picture and the only personal touch that ever came was the signature affixed to his typewritten letters. He could well afford a trip east to see me, yet he had gently declined to come and although he vowed that my letters meant more to him than anything else he never was enthusiastic when I wrote of a possible trip west.

At last I resolved that if my prince would not come to me I would go to him and I packed my trunk to spend the summer in the west.

"You have pictures of me and you can easily identify me at the train," I wrote. But he replied that pictures were deceiving. He would wear a buttonhole bouquet of sweet william, he said, and I would recognize him. I was in a great flutter when I got off the train a couple of weeks later. And there, a little apart from the crowd, was a handsome young man with a sprig of sweet william fastened to his coat lapel. He wore dark glasses and carried a cane. There was something quiet and resigned in his attitude as he waited for me to come up and then I knew. He was blind. I knew instantly, too, what had been the cause of that blindness and that I was to devote myself to making his misfortune more endurable.

We walked away together and Walter explained that the injury done to his eye when he fell with the sweet williams so many years ago brought on a disorder which eventually destroyed his sight. He was sensitive about it, he said, and never could bring himself to tell me of it.

Then began a strange courtship, with all the wooing on my side. We loved each other the minute we touched hands, but Walter would not consent to what he regarded a sacrifice of my life for his. No anxious suitor ever worked to win fair lady as I worked during the next few weeks to overcome the scruples of my too conscientious lover. At last he agreed to look at life with all its variation of joy and sorrow and light and shadow through my eyes.

I have taken care that my dear shut-in man shall miss nothing and he often laughingly tells me that he believes he enjoys seeing the sights even more than I do.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde

CAMISOLE OF CREPE DE CHINE.

Flowers and leaves are worked in flat satin stitch. The centers of the flowers are worked in French knots.

Flat satin stitch: To do the French laid or solid embroidery, paid with stitches taken lengthwise of the space a little inside the stamping lines on the right side of the material, and then work over at right angles with stitches laid closely and evenly together.

French knots: Take a short stitch to cover the stamping, but before drawing the needle through wind thread three times around needle, then pull needle through the wound thread, pull down firmly into a knot, and stick needle down close to where it came up.

To make a camisole get twelve inches of crepe de chine a yard wide. Use the twelve inch length for the depth of the camisole. Make a narrow hem at the top edge and a wider hem at the bottom edge. Draw a rubber tape through the bottom hem and draw it up to fit the waist. Make a seam under the arm if a slip-over is desired. Ribbon straps of satin ribbon are used for the shoulders.

If necessary to draw the camisole in at the top make a wider hem, about one and one-half inches wide, so a ribbon can be run through.

A dainty lace edging is effective at the top edge of camisole.

Bright Sayings of the Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Mary was writing a letter to her Uncle Peter, who had almost lost the use of his legs by having rheumatism.

"Be sure to write a cheerful letter, Mary," admonished her mother; "you know Uncle Peter has been sick."

An hour later Mary showed this letter to her mother: "Deer Unckle: I am so sory that you have been sick. Why don't you go to heaven? They will give you a pair of wings there and you can rest your poor tired legs." B. R.

"Jimmy," I asked of my neighbor's little boy, "which would you rather be, a little boy or a little girl?" To which he rather indignantly replied, "I'd ruver be what I is than what I's not." M. O.

* *

Ethel was suffering agony on Easter night. Her mother, much frightened, said, "Now, Esther, I suppose you have eaten those three dozen eggs the rabbit laid for you today."

"Indeed not," said Ethel indignantly. "I only ate twenty-one."

It might be interesting to know she lived through the ordeal, but on less eggs in the future. C. Mc.

Margaret is fond of dogs, but does not enjoy having them bark and then jump up on her, as her playmate's puppy does. I asked her how she liked Cecil's dog and she answered, "I like him fine, when he just wags without hollering." J.

My little son after giving himself a thorough washing (as he supposed) was asked, "James, don't you ever look at yourself to see if you are clean or not?"

"No, mamma; there is no use, 'cause I can tell by the towel dess as well." E. W. R.

Little daughter came home with a "Mothers' day greeting." "I made my carnation pink," she explained, "'cause pink ones are for live ladies." F. R.

Robert had come over to spend the morning with me, and in the course of our visit I asked him if his mother was still knitting. Giving me a pitying glance, he replied: "I should say not. Did nobodies told you that the war was through fighted?" M. O.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Robert does a great many errands for his mother, but the other day when he was sent to the corner grocery for three different articles he came back with only two, saying he forgot what the other one was.

To humiliate him for the offense, mother said: "Why, your little sister can take a message better than that, so I'll send her this time."

This pleased Alice much, as the grocer told us she marched proudly into the store and said: "I came after what Robert forgot." R. P. W.

Joy had tripped and fallen while at play.

"Did you hurt your toe very badly, dear?" her mother asked, picking her up to comfort her.

"Yes," replied the small girl, between sobs. "I think I broked its hinge." J. F.

Harry often did things that brought exclamations of surprise from his mother. One day he remonstrated thusly: "When I gets home late you're s'prised an' when I gets home early you're s'prised. How old will I haf' to be, ma, before I quit doin' things that you're s'prised at?" L. T.

Daisy was anxious to get a nest that is built in our drain pipe. I told her that she must not take it, as the birdies would no longer have a home. Whereupon Daisy became thoughtful for a moment and then said, "Mamma, can I have the nest after the birdies move?" F. S.

* *

I am much interested in my garden and therefore was considerably annoyed when I saw a coop of chickens being carried into my next door neighbor's back yard. But as the days passed and no chickens showed up, I interviewed the neighbor's little boy in this way: "Buddy, I hear you folks have started to raise chickens on your place."

"They raised themselves," he answered. "They flew over the fence an' got away." M. M. L.

Delmer usually walked to school with Matie, his little neighbor next door, but nearly always had to wait for her. One morning he was obliged to wait an unusually long time for Matie to get her hair curled, and later he confided to his mother that he was not going to walk to school with her any more. His mother asked him why he had decided to go without waiting for Matie. "Well, he replied, "when I call for her I always find her so unready." Mrs. N. G.

My little nephew from out of town was visiting at our home and couldn't get over the fact that our flat was heated by radiators and needed no attention such as their stoves needed in his home. One day the steam had gone down and it became rather chilly, so little Jack came to me and said: "Auntie, ask the janitor to send up some hot weather, please." J. M. G.

Donald was usually mischievous and needed speaking to frequently. So his mother always cautioned him before company arrived to be on his good behavior. One evening one of the guests, observing the small boy was quiet, asked him if he was always so good. "O, no," replied Donald, frankly; "but I'll catch it if I don't behave while company's here." B. Camp Stories Contest.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. What They All Say.

My friend's company was on a hike and passing through a little village in France, when the company jester caught sight of a pretty French girl who was standing in a doorway. "O! la, la, sweet pa, pa," he cried out. "Yes," said the French girl in English, "every nut that goes through this town says that." F. E. T.

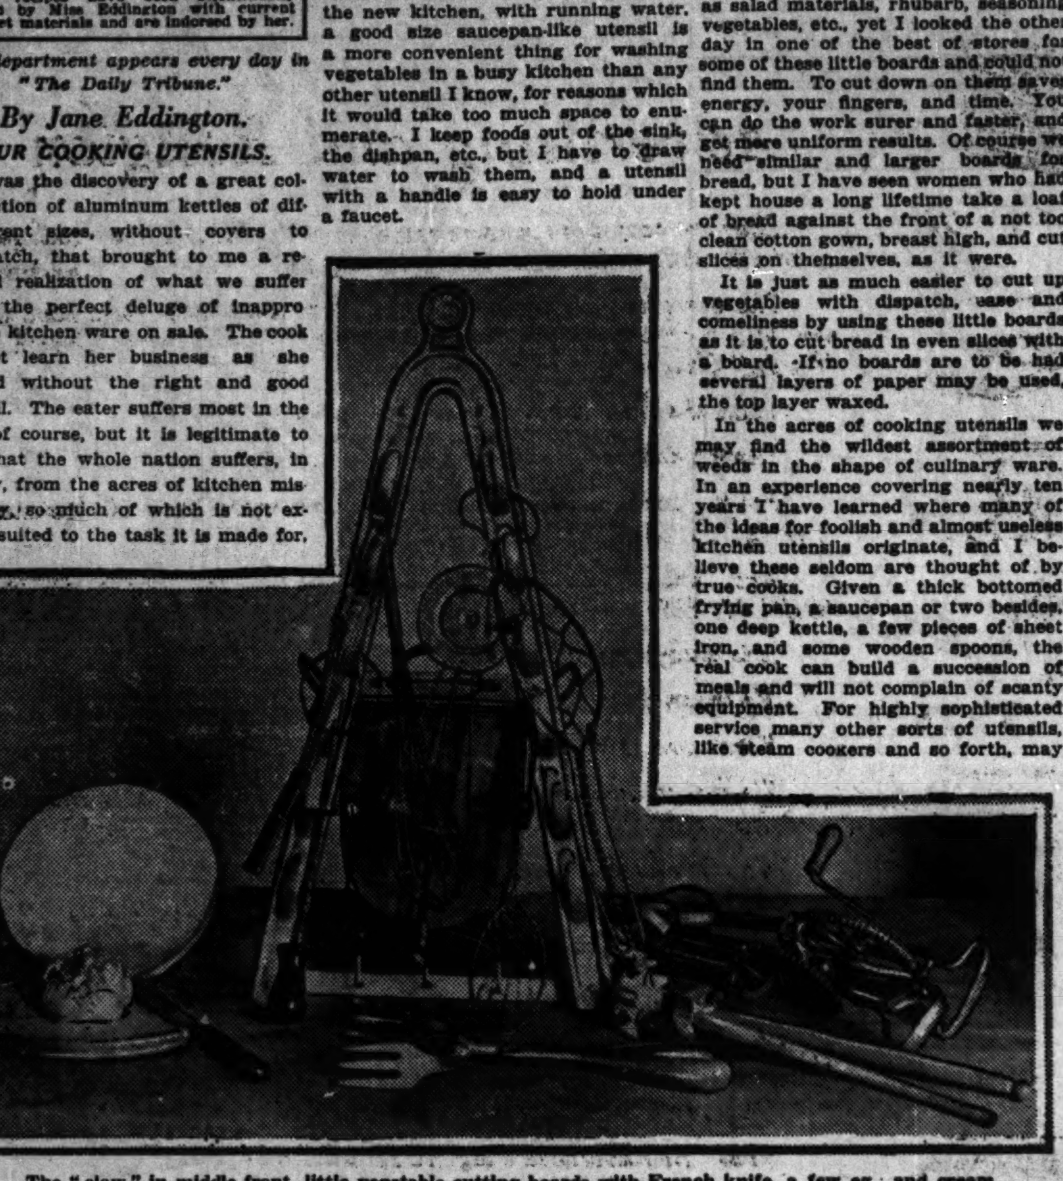
OUR COOKING UTENSILS.

IT was the discovery of a great collection of aluminum kettles of different sizes, without covers to match, that brought to me a renewed realization of what we suffer from the perfect deluge of inappropriate kitchen ware on sale. The cook cannot learn her business as she should without the right and good utensil. The eater suffers most in the end, of course, but it is legitimate to say that the whole nation suffers, in a way, from the acres of kitchen miscellany, so much of which is not exactly suited to the task it is made for, kitchen ware that is neither significant nor useful.



The "claw" in middle front, little vegetable cutting boards with French knife, a few eg_ and cream whips with two querls.

If more saucepans with handles and without the practically useless lip had perfectly fitting covers which could be clamped on to seal the pan hermetically we should require fewer kettles. The hotel and restaurant cook has such sancepans and expensive ones in cast aluminum are now to be had for small household use. One of these is worth several of some other sorts, but the trouble is that we have the others, usually. If one has none of the two quart fireless cooker kettles one of these heavy sauncepans with cover would be a good investment. They may be used for almost anything except griddle cakes, which we cook on top of the stove.

As to pans with real handles, not plain nor ones with mere ears, they are a more serviceable utensil than most people realize. Of course they are but a deeper form of skillet, or spider, or frying pan, or casserole (French for saucepan), whatever we call this most universal of cooking utensils.

The dipper or ladle form of this utensil was a necessity in the old fashioned kitchen of the water pail. In the new kitchen, with running water, a good size saucepan-like utensil is a more convenient thing for washing vegetables in a busy kitchen than any other utensil I know, for reasons which it would take too much space to enumerate. I keep foods out of the sink, the dishpan, etc., but I have to draw water to wash them, and a utensil with a handle is easy to hold under a faucet.

For first kettles I would say buy the small two quart aluminum fireless cooker kettles. There are enough reasons why to fill a book. If you want me to, I will give you a long list of the delicious things you can cook for two in this kettle. I have aforetime printed such a list, with recipes, but I am talking about something else today, and these would use up all my space.

It is necessary for you, if you are starting out in housekeeping, to realize that it is difficult to buy kitchen utensils. If an attractive lot is presented, even an old stager like myself may be beguiled and buy something not fundamentally necessary. Yet, if you have in mind something you have learned to use, perhaps you cannot find anything of the sort.

There is a certain kind of most worth while and energy saving and sanitary saucepan that I have hoped for six years to find. Without it I cannot properly make one of the notable dishes of a certain nation. If I want to make that, I shall either have to have this utensil made or go to Europe for it. Over there kitchen utensils are, in general, fitter and fewer. They have no such wealth of raw materials to waste as we.

Every day in my kitchen I use little round boards to cut up on such things as salad materials, rhubarb, seasoning vegetables, etc., yet I looked the other day in one of the best of stores for some of these little boards and could not find them. To cut down on them saves energy, your fingers, and time. You can do the work surer and faster, and get more uniform results. Of course we need similar and larger boards for bread, but I have seen women who had kept house a long lifetime take a loaf of bread against the front of a not too clean cotton gown, breast high, and cut slices on themselves, as it were.

It is just as much easier to cut up vegetables with dispatch, ease and comeliness by using these little boards as it is to cut bread in even slices with a board. If no boards are to be had several layers of paper may be used, the top layer waxed.

In the acres of cooking utensils we may find the wildest assortment of weeds in the shape of culinary ware. In an experience covering nearly ten years I have learned where many of the ideas for foolish and almost useless kitchen utensils originate, and I believe these seldom are thought of by true cooks. Given a thick bottomed frying pan, a saucepan or two besides, one deep kettle, a few pieces of sheet iron, and some wooden spoons, the real cook can build a succession of meals and will not complain of scanty equipment. For highly sophisticated service many other sorts of utensils, like steam cookers and so forth, may be required, but the accomplished cook understands what the basic equipment must be to which may be added frills and furbelows.

Of the several useful utensils developed by these manufacturers, I think there is hardly a one more generally useful than a sort of clawed tongs for lifting cans which one domestic science person calls the "claw." I find it almost indispensable for removing small individual baking dishes or baked potatoes from the oven, and for a great number of things where we might use the hand but for burning heat.

The subject of egg beaters, as of knives, to be treated adequately, would require at least 10,000 words. I commenced to collect egg beaters, after having found them in wood and porcelain, and the old fashioned spring with a handle at the top, of the sort our mothers used. But I soon gave up, since it would have required a museum to hold even the current specimens of whips, whisks, rotaries, turbines, and so forth, while I am sure that every cook would be delighted to use, could she get it, the whisk of bamboo which Dutch cooks have. It is a beautiful utensil.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Cream of Mushroom Soup.

Peel the caps, remove the stems, and chop one-half pound of fresh mushrooms. Add to four cups of white stock or chicken stock, with one medium sized onion thinly sliced. Cook slowly until tender (about twenty minutes). Rub through a purée strainer. Melt four tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, and four tablespoons of flour, stirring constantly until smooth. Add gradually enough of the hot stock to make the roux of the consistency to pour. Combine mixtures and add one cup of hot cream; season with salt and pepper. Add one-half cup of thinly sliced sauted mushrooms.

To saute mushrooms, peel the caps, remove the stems, and saute mushrooms with one slice of onion in one and one-half tablespoons of butter without browning. When tender drain and slice.

Skate Chowder.

Wash, wipe, and skin three pounds of skate, cut into small cubes. Cut one-quarter of a pound of salt pork into one-quarter inch cubes and fry in an iron frying pan until crisp and evenly browned. Remove dice (keep warm) and fry one-half cup of diced onion until delicately browned in the fat (do not allow onion to brown). Strain fat into a deep stew pan, arrange in alternate layers, fish, sliced potatoes (previousuly parboiled five minutes; there should be four cups), onion and pork cubes. Add four cups of hot water, cover, and simmer until potatoes are tender. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan, add four tablespoons of flour, and stir until smooth and well blended, then pour on slowly, stirring constantly, four cups of scalded milk, add to chowder, and season with salt, pepper, and a few grains of cayenne. Split five thick Boston crackers, spread with butter, and soak in cold milk. Skim from the milk and place in the bottom of a hot soup tureen. Pour in the hot chowder. Sprinkle with paprika and serve at once.

Cream of Celery Soup.

Cut the outer stalks and leaves of celery in one-half inch pieces; there should be three cups. Add one pint of boiling water and cook until tender. Turn water and celery into a strainer and rub the pulp through. Scald two and one-half cups of milk with one slice of onion. Remove onion and add milk to celery. Melt four tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan, add four tablespoons of flour and stir until smooth, then gradually pour on some of the hot mixture until of the consistency to pour. Combine mixtures and add one-half cup of hot cream. Season with salt and pepper. Serve in bouillon cups in which has been placed one tablespoon of whipped cream. Sprinkle with paprika and serve with crisp wafers or croutons.

Tomato Sauce.

Melt four tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan, add two tablespoons each of chopped onion, carrot, and celery and one tablespoon of parsley. Cook five minutes without browning, stirring constantly. Strain. To butter add four tablespoons of flour, stir until well blended, then add one cup each of brown stock and thick tomato puree. Season with one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of paprika and a few grains of cayenne. Let simmer twenty minutes. Serve as directed.

Cottage Pudding with Strawberry Sauce.

Cream one-fourth cup of butter, add gradually one cup of sugar, stirring constantly. Add two eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted. Sift together two cups of pastry flour, three teaspoons of baking powder, and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. Add alternately to first mixture with one cup of milk, beating constantly. Add one-half teaspoon of orange extract, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Turn into a well buttered baking dish and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven. Cut while hot in wedge shaped pieces (using a sharp knife dipped into hot water between each cutting), and pour over strawberry sauce.

Strawberry Sauce.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add slowly one cup of sifted confectioners' sugar, stirring constantly, fold in the stiffly beaten white of one egg and one cup of crushed fresh strawberries. Beat thoroughly and serve with hot baked or steamed puddings.

Popovers.

Sift together one cup of bread flour and one-fourth teaspoon of salt, add gradually seven-eighths cup of milk, stirring constantly until a smooth batter is formed. Add two eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted and one-half teaspoon of olive oil or melted butter. Beat with an egg beater at least two minutes. Turn into buttered custard cups or iron gem cups and bake thirty-five minutes in a hot oven.

The thick and heavier cups are much better for this purpose. The strongest heat must come evenly from the bottom of the oven and cups if you wish the mixture to puff well and popover. Serve hot.

Hot Waffles.

Sift together three cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, and one teaspoon of salt. Add gradually two cups of milk, stirring constantly until a smooth batter is formed; add the yolks of four eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted; add three tablespoons of melted shortening and beat mixture thoroughly; then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs. Cook in a well greased hot waffle iron and serve with lemon or maple sirup. The recipe will make twelve large waffles.

Hot waffles served with stewed chicken makes a most delectable dinner.

A FRIEND IN NEED

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be only too happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Rose Bead Formula.

For the information of Mrs. E. F. and others who are interested in the making of rose beads, I print the following formula:

[illegible] in quantities roses which are [illegible]ed, taking care to select those [illegible] full and delicious odor. A good [illegible] for plucking is in the morning, [illegible] the dew is fresh upon the blooms. [illegible] remember always that a [illegible] rose is preferable to a white one, [illegible] that a bloom fresh from the tree [illegible] vitality.

[illegible] sort these petals, clipping [illegible] "eye" at the base from the [illegible] and coarser ones. After the [illegible] has been thoroughly culled, [illegible] through a fine food cutting machine, repeating the process three times in succession. Have at hand a [illegible] baking pan, on which spread [illegible] pulp and leave until the [illegible] day. On the second, third, fourth, [illegible] days repeat the process of [illegible] three times in succession.

[illegible] the fifth day try the paste carefully with the fingers, testing its softness and pliability. If granulations [illegible] in the mixture, pass through the [illegible] once more or as many times as required for perfect smoothness. [illegible] will be found on the first grinding [illegible] nearly one-half cup of scented [illegible] has oozed from the pulp. Return this to the mass and set away [illegible] moist mixture in a cool place. Take [illegible] to choose a cool place or too much [illegible] juices of the rose will evaporate. [illegible] this paste stand an entire day to [illegible] and it will take the form of a [illegible] loaf — continually turning [illegible]. On the sixth day the paste [illegible] ready for the first rolling.

Throughout the entire process a [illegible] iron baking pan must be used [illegible] pulp will turn an ugly brown or [illegible] white. During the rolling a [illegible] iron baking pan should be [illegible] the corners being cut to make a [illegible] surface. A paper of heavy texture, however, may be used for the rolling if [illegible]. The finished balls should [illegible] placed in rows in a large box to dry. The forming process is simple. Pinch [illegible] into small bits as nearly of [illegible] as possible and roll into balls. The paste shrinks fully one-half, so [illegible] the beads must be rolled at least [illegible] the desired size. Repeat the rolling two or three times, taking two, [illegible] four days for the formation. Up to a certain stage rolling improves the ball by smoothing and compacting [illegible]. If at the first the paste will [illegible] it is too dry and must be wet [illegible] with water, as baking mixture requires. If it is not too dry and still breaks in the attempt to roll, it has [illegible] ground fine enough. Put it once more through the machine.

When these balls have been hardened sufficiently — not too much — pierce each one with a hatpin. Run the beads one after another on a hatpin or other sharpened wire, pressing each as it meets its mate with a heavy bit of paper; this is to round perfectly and prevent misshaping.

After piercing mark with some figure. A hairpin bent at the apex may be manipulated by skillful fingers to bring out many graceful and unique designs. Set figures or other ornaments may also be used by pressing the design into the slightly yielding pulp. After the hatpins are filled insert in cushions or other soft substances, and let the beads dry thoroughly. When dry, polish by rubbing with velvet or with the palm moist with vaseline. In removing from the pins use much care, as the balls at this stage are easily split. After removing from standards let the beads lie several days before stringing.

In stringing use double waxed linen thread, No. 36 being preferable. Between the rose beads string two, three, or more gold, silver, or iridescent beads of small size. For mourning purposes the rose beads should be strung alone.

Asks Loan of Wheel Chair.

"My grandmother is 86 and cannot go out because she is so weak. If any one has an old wheel chair it will be much appreciated, or if we could borrow one for a while this summer. She is so anxious to get out, but we cannot afford to buy one. PATRICIA L."

Making Scrap Book History.

"I am a girl of 13 and I am making a history scrap book. The pictures do not have to be of the present time, but of any age in the history of the world. Pictures from magazines and newspapers are just what I want. Do you suppose any one will send me some? L. L."

Your request is not a hard one to fill if a few of my readers will only keep you in mind and let me know when they come across historical pictures and photographs. Keep up your scrap book. It is a worth while idea.

Help Him Help Mother.

"I'm a little boy 12 years old and I want to ask if you know of any one who has an old bicycle that they have no more use for. It would help me to go on errands for my mother and earn some extra money. I hope I'm not asking for too much, but I would be so glad to have one and would be glad to pay the express charges if it is sent to me from out of the city. J. M."

I am sure that some one who reads this will have a bicycle that has been out of use for some time. John certainly ought to have one if it is going to help him help his mother.

Needs a Dress Skirt.

"I am greatly in need of a dress skirt. I want to canvass, as this kind of work will take me out in the air. I take a skirt 41 inches in length, or even larger, and I shall be glad to pay the express charges. M. A."

This is the time of year when people are discarding their half worn clothes and buying new ones, and I hope that some one will write in and tell me they have just the skirt this woman can use in her canvassing.

Making Braided Rugs.

"I wonder if you will ask through your column for good, strong pieces of cotton cloth for me? I am making braided rugs and would like more material to go on with. Black stockings are acceptable also. MRS. N. W."

May I ask readers who have old stockings and cotton pieces that may be utilized in this way to write to me for Mrs. W.'s address?

Has Time to Read.

"I am going to ask you for some books. I have been so busy knitting during the war that I have not had time to read, but now that it is over I want to start reading again. I like books about out of doors and the travels of great men, and I like novels, too. I want to thank you for the help you gave me in getting my war quilt for the hospital. M. E. B."

Some of our readers have just the books you want. When they write me about them I will give them your address and see that you receive them as soon as possible.

Large Family to Look After.

"I have never asked you for anything before, but my husband died a week ago and I have a large family now to look after. I had to borrow mourning for the funeral and I have no black clothes of any kind. I would go so thankful to any one who would send me some black garments. I wear size 38. MRS. H. R. T."

This is an opportunity to do a real work of kindness and I hope I can write this widow and tell her I have some black clothes for her in the near future.

Not Many Stamps.

"I have a stamp album, but I have not many stamps. I wish I could get some foreign and old United States ones. HELEN F."

Which?

-A Substance that eats the clothes away from the dirt or FELS-NAPTHA Soap that dissolves the dirt away from the clothes

It means longer wear for your clothes if you have them washed the Fels-Naptha way. If the wash is done away from home, give the woman plenty of Fels-Naptha Soap.

Then you will KNOW that no hurtful substances are used to get the dirt out—that the garments will not rot, that the seams will not come apart, and that the stitching and the colors will not fade.

Fels-Naptha makes you sure. The naptha in it dissolves the dirt. IT does the same work as hard rubbing, only without hurt to your clothes.

Nor do you have to boil the clothes to make them sweet, white and clean when you use Fels-Naptha. Boil 'em, if you like, but it isn't necessary.

See directions on the wrapper.

Ask for it by its full name.

Advertising and Religion

They are both alike in some respects. For example, they both get a lot of attention on Sundays. It's their big day.

The Merchant advertises on Sundays because most folks have that day off; everybody reads the paper before Church, after Church, or "during" Church, if they stay at home.

Then they are alike in another respect.

There's different kinds of both.

People don't all worship the same any more than all Merchants advertise the same.

And now, if we may please, let us tell you something about JOHN M. SMYTH Advertising.

It is always the same.

We mean as to METHOD.

Here's one thing about our advertising:

We aim to be able to supply the article advertised for a reasonable time after publication; we aim to have at least a week's supply.

Here's another thing.

You Will Find a Special Tag on Every Advertised Article.

That tag reads "AS ADVERTISED."

If we advertise an article that attracts you to our Store, WE MAKE IT EASY FOR YOU TO FIND THAT ARTICLE WHEN YOU GET HERE.

You won't need a lantern.

That "As Advertised" tag MUST BE THERE.

That tag is a RELIGION with us.

And it wasn't the fact that we advertise on Sundays that made us talk about "Advertising and Religion."

It was that tag THAT IS OUR RELIGION.

That tag that reads "AS ADVERTISED."

IT IS ALWAYS THERE.

On a Stump.

It was in Mariposa county, California, a locality noted for trees of enormous growth. The top of a redwood stump, smooth and level as the woodsman's saw had left it, and over twenty feet in diameter, was the place chosen for this marriage ceremony. Decorated with the wonderful wild flowers of the region, and surrounded by giant trees, no place chosen could be more beautiful or impressive.

The bride and bridegroom, the minister and fifty guests, ascended a few flights of steps about six feet to the top of the stump, and found seats provided and ample room for all.

After the ceremony seats were removed and dancing took place, the musicians occupying a place on the stump as well as the dancers.

Around the Kitchen Range.

There was an epidemic of mumps in the village, and my young brother, Dick, who was visiting me, had fallen a victim. One cold rainy evening the furnace fire refused to draw and we closed the rest of the house and sat by the fire in the kitchen range. Soon to the parsonage because her mother wouldn't hear to my seeing her while she had the mumps. I expect to go across any time, you know."

"Yes," said I. "If you want to get married in this kitchen and the minister will come here, I'm willing."

He was gone before the words were fairly out of my mouth. His car chugged over to the minister's and almost immediately chugged back again.

We lined up before the kitchen stove after 11 o'clock I answered a knocking at the kitchen door to find an excited young man in a soldier's uniform who asked without other preamble: "Have you had the mumps?"

"Yes," said I, "and my brother has them now."

"You are just the people that I'm looking for," said he. "My girl has the mumps, too. She is out in front in my car, and we want you to go with us to the minister's house next door and act as witnesses while we get married."

The request took my breath away, but my brother answered for me: "I can't go out in that cold rain—my face aches enough now. Besides, I don't look fit to go anywhere with my face all swollen and bandaged."

"Well, would you be willing that I bring the minister over and get married here, then?" asked the soldier. "My pass expires at reveille tomorrow morning, and I've got to leave for camp at midnight. I surely want to get married now after I've smuggled my girl out of the house and got her to come—the mumpy bride, the excited soldier bridegroom, swollen, disheveled Dick, and myself, wearing a boudoir cap and bedroom slippers, facing a ruffled parson. In the midst of the brief ceremony the appearance of the party overcame my courtesy, and I was seized with a spasm of laughter which Dick echoed. The minister bit his lips to keep back the smiles, and the bride tittered audibly. But the soldier groom maintained a solemn dignity to the end.

Once Was Enough.

The couple were marching into the parlor, and when they came to the door the bridegroom hid behind it. The bride did not notice that he was not with her until she had walked across the room. A search was started. The bridegroom escaped through the window and hid in the barn. He did not come up to the house till the next day. The minister was called and they had a quiet wedding. The bridegroom said he would never marry again.

G. N.

Losing Their Loved Ones.

The strangest wedding I can remember was just like a funeral. Everybody was crying. The bride was an only child, the bridegroom an only son. Both mothers were widows. Each wanted the young couple to live with her, so they finally consented to live six months each year with each one. All you could hear between sobs, first one mother, then the other, would say, "O, my, what a great loss; how can I live without her!" until no one present had the heart to congratulate the young couple, and were more than glad when it was time to go home.

Crisly Joke on Bridegroom.

"If any man can show just cause why they may not be joined together let him now speak or hereafter forever hold his peace." These words, spoken by the pastor, fell on a hushed audience. The already blushing bride turned a shade pinker. The embarrassed bridegroom fidgeted nervously.

There was no response to the minister's words and the ceremony was about to proceed when the outer door slowly opened and a black veiled figure entered carrying a bundle wrapped in soft clothes, and haltingly approached the pair.

The bride glanced nervously about. Curious glances were seen to pass between the invited guests. The bridegroom thrust his hands in and out of his pockets excitedly. His eyes bulged, his mouth dropped open as if in denial.

The black figure thrust the wee bundle into the unwilling arms of the bridegroom, while the bride swooned away.

All would have been chaos, but for the best man. He had been studying the black figure and suddenly seized the veiled hat and off came vail, hat, and hair, and there stood one of the bridegroom's club friends. The baby proved to be only a doll when unwrapped.

In the meantime the bride recovered and the ceremony was resumed amid much laughter and the newly wedded pair were doubly glad to escape.

Although five years have passed since that wedding day, to that couple that day is still vivid, and they are impatiently waiting and hoping that some day they may even up accounts with their tormentors.

Cash or Divorce.

A young miner, who was notoriously bad pay, was married by the justice of the peace in the presence of a crowd of friends and acquaintances.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the bridegroom coolly said: "Judge, you'll have to wait until next pay day for your fee, as I'm a little shy on change just now."

Quick as a flash the justice locked the door, placed his back against it, and drawled out: "Young feller, dig up that $2 and four bits, or I'll divorce ye in three minutes by the clock."

The fee was hurriedly dug up."

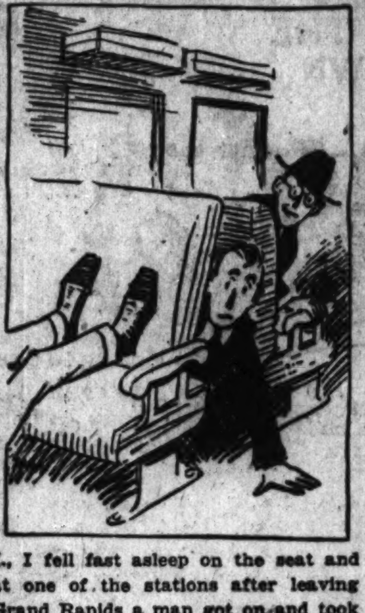
A Seat for His Feet.



The other day while coming from Grand Rapids, Mich., on the G. R. and I., I fell fast asleep on the seat and at one of the stations after leaving Grand Rapids a man got on and took the seat just behind me, and he, thinking there was no one in the seat ahead of him, took his feet and pushed the back of my seat forward, pushing me off between the seats. Coming out from between the seats, the other passengers had a good laugh on me.

Two Yards of Sundae.

One day while shopping downtown I decided to buy two yards of ribbon for my younger sister. The counter being crowded, I decided to go to the soda fountain across the aisle. When asked there what I wanted I said, "Two yards."

It Must Have Been.

One night while visiting a friend of mine, I walked in my sleep and went in to my friend's room where she and her husband were sleeping. I went over to the bed and kissed my friend's husband. That was about the most embarrassing moment I ever had.

Deceiving the Dean.

The dean of women of the college that I attend disapproves most strenuously of rouge. While waiting for the interurban on a little unlighted platform along the country road, after a picnic that she had chaperoned, she talked on her pet subject, rouge.

Since it is necessary to be in good standing with our dean in order to enjoy peace and happiness, we agreed with all her statements by wickedly lying. I spoke in loud tones, condemning the "horrid, disgraceful stuff," despite the fact that I had some of it on my own face and more on a puff in my vanity case.

She approves of powder, so just before boarding the car I hurriedly opened my vanity case and dabbed a puff over my shining nose. When I entered the lighted car I learned (and most embarrassing and tragic of all, the dean learned, too) that I had a most unbecoming, brilliantly rouged nose. I had used the wrong puff.

The Watch Was Off.

When my aunt was a young girl she and her friend were invited out to a dance by a young man and his friend. During the evening my aunt asked her friend the time. He would not tell her, so she playfully grabbed his watch chain, but at the other end, instead of a watch, was a safety pin. Needless to say, the young man did not invite her out again.

Gets a Shoeful.

It was during the rush hour and raining about as hard as I had ever seen it. The street car was crowded and there were few smiling faces. We had gone but a short way when the man standing next to me said, "What in the heck is in my shoe." He had on low shoes and instead of resting my wet umbrella on the floor I had accidentally stuck it in his shoe.

For Constipation! Physic Purge or Laxative?

Everyone now and then becomes constipated, and millions are chronically in that condition. The perplexing question arises—what to use.

Purgatives and cathartics are drastic and usually cause a reaction. Saline waters are rapid in action but do no more than empty the bowels.

Just as certain an effect, and certainly a much more pleasant one, can be obtained by the use of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin sold by druggists under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It acts gently, without griping. It is an especially ideal medicine for children, women, old people and others who find purges too powerful.

Only a teaspoonful is required, and by morning the movement is free and complete. A bottle in the house is insurance for the whole family against constipation, indigestion, headaches, flatulency and other digestive ills.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 25 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN The Perfect Laxative

FREE SAMPLES—If you have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin send for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 468 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. If there are babies at home ask for a copy of Dr. Caldwell's book, "The Care of Baby."

It's the Hidden Dirt that ruins your skin
Use Lettuce Cream—one of the "seven"

Soap and water cannot remove the coarsening dirt and grime which get ground into the tiny pores of your skin. Prove this to yourself. Wash your face with soap and water. Then rub on Marinello Lettuce Cream. In a few moments wipe it off with a soft cloth. See the dark streaks of soil. You thought you had washed your face clean. But there on the cloth is the dirt that soap and water could not remove, but which Lettuce Cream coaxed out of the pores.

Whitening Cream for a sallow skin. Gives your skin that "pink and white" rose-leaf quality. 60c and $1.20.

Acne Cream for blemishes and blackheads. This disagreeable condition may be overcome in a short while if you are faithful to the use of cream. 60c and $1.20.

Motor Cream for skin protection. Neither wind nor weather can harm your skin if you fortify it with Motor Cream first. 60c and $1.20.

Foundation Cream before using powder. It makes the powder go on so much more smoothly and stay longer. 75c

To supplement the action of the Creams, always apply Marinello Powder before venturing out.

Why Lettuce Cream is better than soap and water

Water and any soap make a caustic lather which washes off only the surface dirt and leaves the thousands of tiny pores clogged; it removes the skin's natural oil and the delicate tissues become dry and lifeless. Your skin has that tight, dry, uncomfortable feeling you have so often experienced.

Lettuce Cream is so prepared that it penetrates deep into the pores and literally cleans your skin "inside and out." Moreover, it leaves the proper amount of oil in your skin to protect it from exposure. A Lettuce Cream cleansing is such a refreshing, soothing experience. Your complexion feels fresh and glowing.

For every different skin condition a Special Cream!

To achieve the full measure of its beauty, almost every skin needs more than merely being properly cleaned. Some skins are too dry, some too oily, others are sallow, still others marred by ugly blackheads and blemishes.

No one cream could bring beauty to all these different kinds of skin. Each one requires a special cream.

There are seven Marinello Creams, each prepared by specialists to remedy just one skin condition. Study the Chart of Marinello Seven Creams and select the one your skin needs.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

"The Tribune" will pay $5 for every letter published on your kissing experience. Tell what promiscuous kissing cost you, or if you regretted after you met the one man that you had not been able to give him the first kiss; or, if your experiences were different, tell that. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IN AFTER YEARS.

The question seems to narrow down to "kiss and be popular or refuse and be a wallflower?" Perhaps my experience will help girls to decide. I was a high school girl in a small village town, when I first began attending parties and thinking of "beaux." Not being blessed with a superfluity of beauty and carrying the handicap of having attained an unusual height for my age, I realized I would not be favored in my crowd of pretty companions.

But my chum and I commenced to allow the boys to kiss us when bidding us good night; then began evening walks and buggy rides, which were mostly endurance matches in kissing and hugging. We were very popular, all the boys vied with each other for a "date" or to take us home from dances and parties.

Gradually we awoke to the fact that all our old chums had one steady admirer—some indeed were happily married. Too late we realized that although we had plenty of beaux, they did not "wear" well; we were always changing and soon found when we spoke of being out with or entertaining certain young men they would deny it.

Imagine our feelings when we found that though of good family, pure and innocent, we had the reputation of being "fast."

Fortunately my family moved from that city to Chicago, where I met and married an honorable man, who never offered to caress me until he asked me to be his wife. We were engaged a year and had plenty of time for sweethearting and kissing.

Now I can hear some one say, "All's well that ends well." Wait!

After fifteen years of absence from my home town I returned with my daughter on a visit to relatives. Do you think any one had forgotten my girlhood, which after all, was only foolish. Indeed not, the heart aches and embarrassment I suffered that summer I shall never forget. My reception by old chums and sweethearts ranged from polite indifference to attempted dates.

There is nothing I can do or say now, to prove that I was not the girl I seemed to be to them.

My husband wonders that I do not care to visit them again. Never! I have had my bitter lesson, and am bringing up my daughter to realize that she cannot expect any happiness or respect if she does not respect herself enough to keep "unspotted from the world" even by indiscriminate kisses.

E. W.

Mother's to Blame.

"Dear Miss Blake: My mother has always taught me to hold myself above my companions, which has always cost dearly. Only the other day I overheard one of my friends say, 'Betty is the best looking girl I ever saw, but she will never get anywhere with those airs of hers.'

"Now I am sure I try my best to be natural and I do have very warm spots in my heart for all my friends. However, it seems to me that both boys and girls do not desire my companionship for any length of time. I wonder if you could give me some simple way of being more friendly appearing? It seems to me that the boys I know respect me, but they act so very differently to me as compared with other young ladies.

"I am 17 years old and I have never enjoyed one moment's confidence with my mother. Do you think that could account for my being so strange?

"ELIZABETH."

What a pity, Elizabeth, that you have been brought up that way! I am so sorry to hear you say that you have never enjoyed a moment's confidence with your mother. I wonder if mothers ever will realize the starvation that is going on in a daughter's soul for this companionship and confidence. If mothers only could realize this they'd spare themselves many a heartache in their later days when the children are grown and the fear of making a confidante of her mother has grown to be a habit that excludes the mother from an intimate family relationship which is never more precious than when the children are grown and the mother is aging. However, I see that you have good sense enough in you to realize the folly of appearing superior to your friends, and having that good sense, I can see plainly where you will work out your own redemption in the eyes of your friends. I will not need to tell you to go about it now that you have discovered the cause. If you make up your mind that you are going to have these young people like you you will win. I am sure of that.

How to Become an Actor.

"Dear Miss Blake: Could you give me any information as to how I could become an actor? I know this is not in your line of business, but thought you could give me some information or tell me where to get it. I am only a boy of 15 years old, but would like to get started early. Will you give this some consideration?

"WILLARD."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

Advice on how to become an actor, Willard, is out of my line, but I know this much, that to become one of any distinction the foundation must be a good education, so why not make up your mind to go through high school and carry off as many honors as possible there, with particular attention to English and literature? Then when you have finished your high school course you probably will have changed your mind on your present idea of your vocation, and you will still be fitted for any other branch of work to go ahead and build success on.

When He Brings Candy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am coming to you for advice for the first time, and I hope you will help me. I am just starting to receive callers, and when one brings me a box of candy I don't know just the proper thing to do, whether to open it right away and offer some to him or wait until later in the evening. What time should a young man go home?

H."

It is courteous to open the candy box a short time after the young man has been seated and pass it around. Tenthirty is the right hour for young men callers to depart.

The Stamp Language.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls of 14 years and have been going out with two boys of 15. We have received some letters from them and the stamps have been turned different ways. We think that as they know the stamp language there might be something that they are telling us in the stamp language. Would you please print it in the paper?

T. AND E."

Unless you are sure that the boys are acquainted with the stamp language you would better not try to read any romance into it. It's a silly little game, is the stamp language, and only should be played in a spirit of fun without any importance whatever being attached to messages that they might be intended to carry.

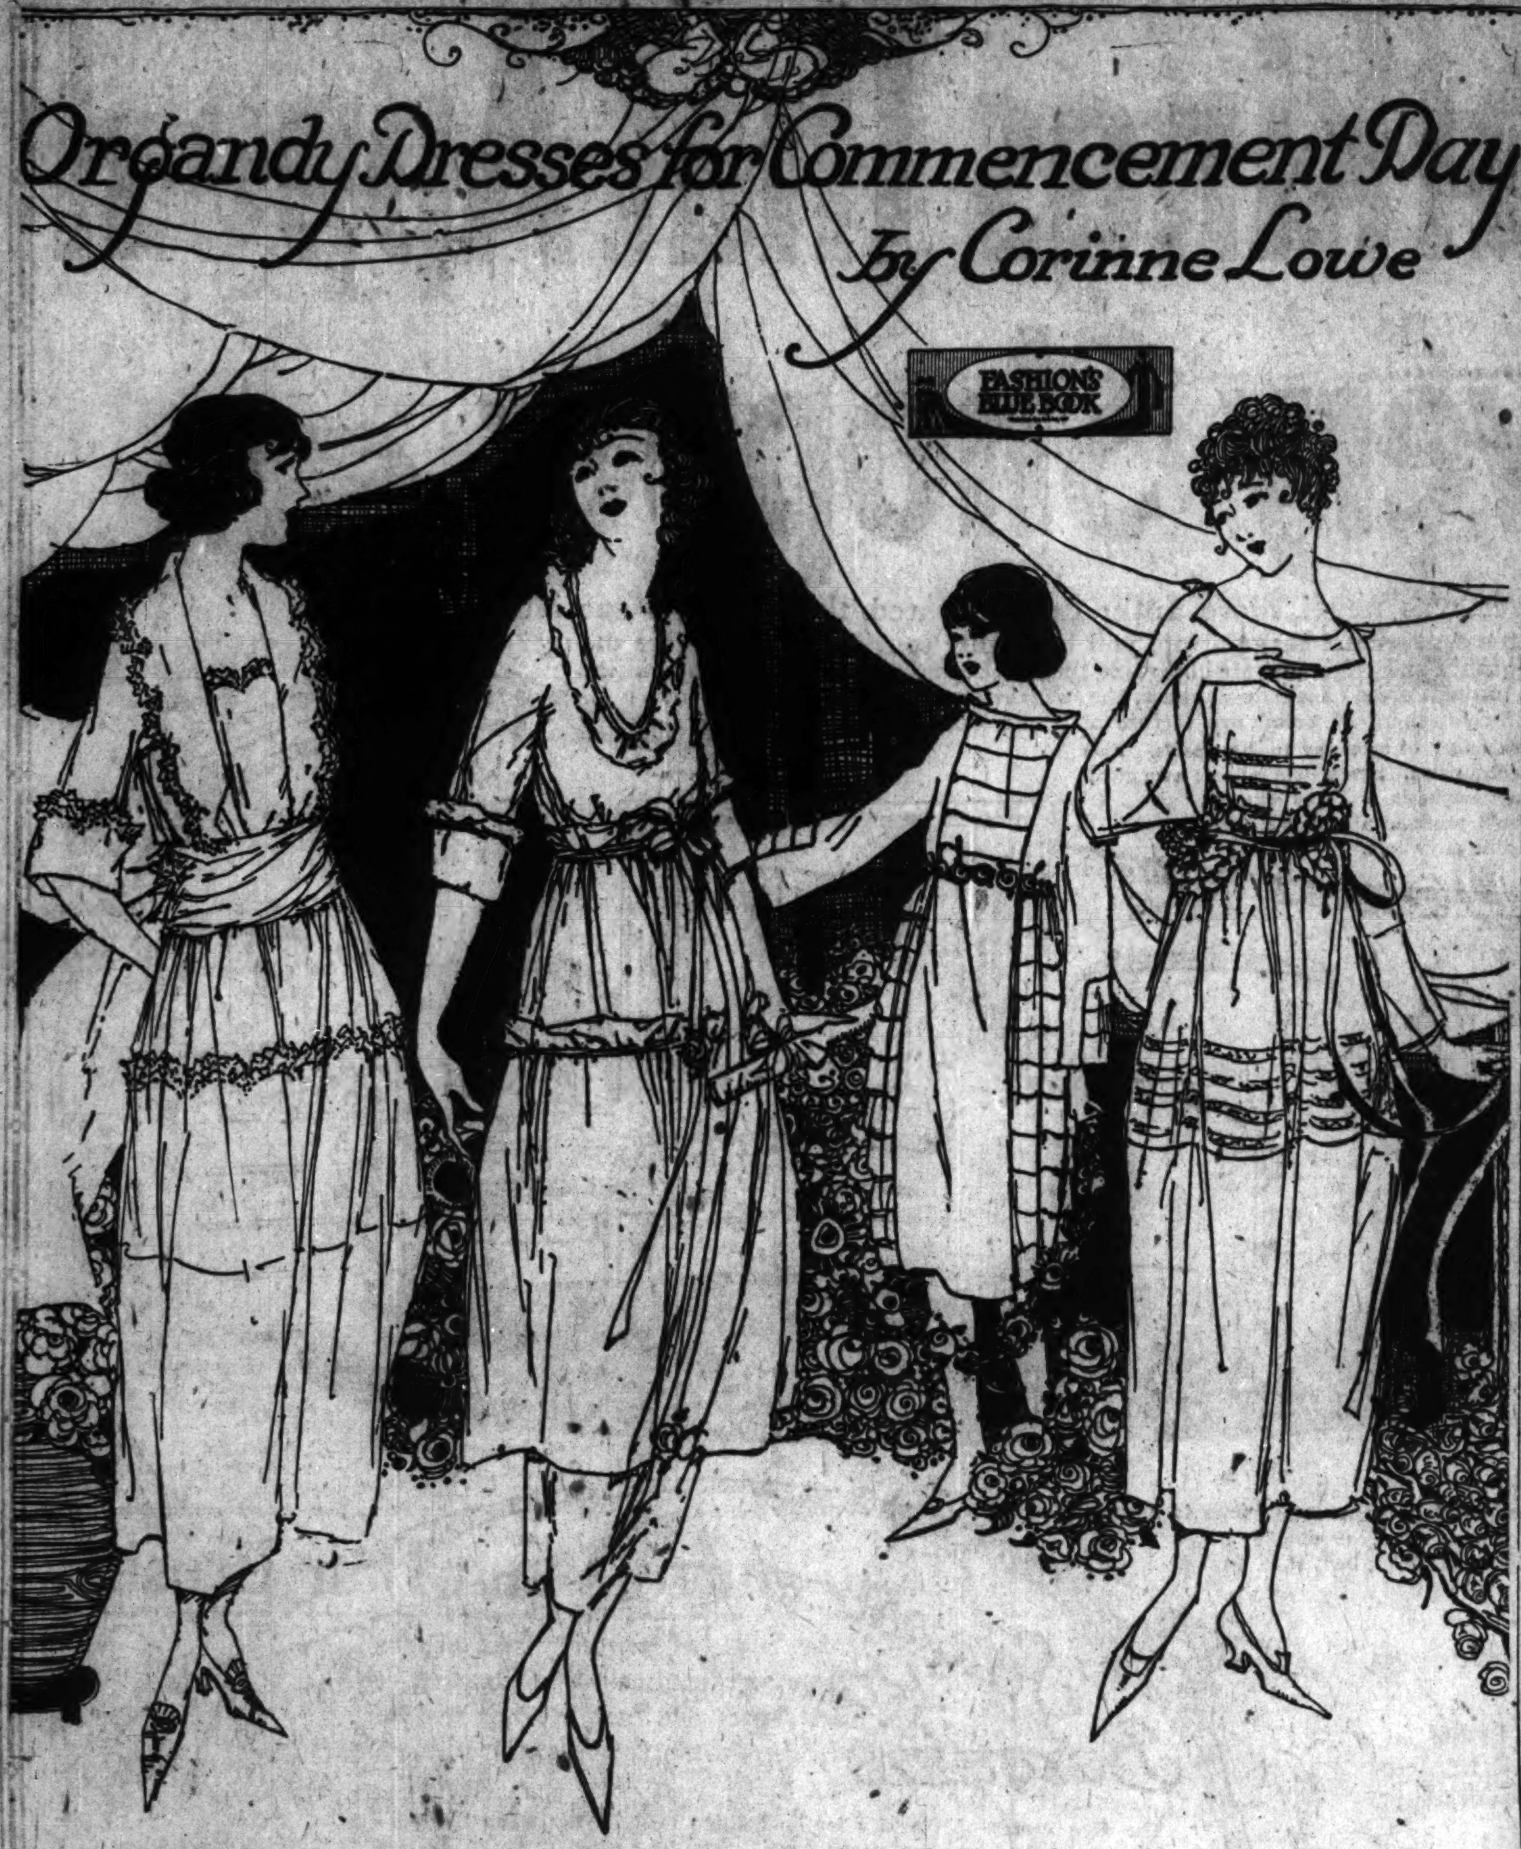
Organdy Dresses for Commencement Day

by Corinne Lowe



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—"We can make our own fate. Just as Diogenes overcame every obstacle in his path, just as Mirabeau beat down early defects——" Yes, yes, we are about to hear once more this note of relentless optimism from the starry eyed young valedictorian. Another graduation month is near at hand and again we older folk are going to be touched by the semicircle of youthful figures waiting so eagerly for the test of life.

This year the graduation ceremonies are free from the shadow of war, and for this reason the simplicity which guided the selection of the graduate's frock has been somewhat abated. Many schools which for the last two seasons reduced their commencements to the severest and most practical form have returned to the old way of doing things. In addition to this, the proms and dances of the boys' schools and colleges have again swung into being, and this calls out all sorts of frivolous dancing frocks. So, from 12 to 22, every girl is dressing Juneward.

By far the most popular material for the commencement frock, and, indeed, for all commencement festivities, is organdy. The high school or grammar school graduate selects either this or voile. And, although the college girl and the finishing school graduate may turn to either georgette or crepe de chine, the class yell of "organdy, organdy," is again heard above everything else offered by the cheer leader.

At the left we are showing an organdy trimmed with valenciennes and sashed voluminously in self material. A sash of this sort, by the way, is now preferred to the old time ribbon one, and various are the ways in which it is treated.

Right next to this is another organdy which shows just how self-sufficient this material really is. For here there is no lace—only folds of the material applied to collar, short sleeves, to hip line and waist line. A narrow girdle of white ribbon is tied in a rosette, from which hang long streamers punctuated with rosebuds.

The small girl right next is wearing just the proper kind of thing in which to say good-by to the simple mental processes of the grammar school. Dressed in white French voile with front and side panels plaited horizontally and with a whole girdle of silk roses, Miss Twelve Year Old is just in the mood for Latin and algebra and the important undertakings of her next school year.

Last of all, the page shows a white georgette, long sleeved, inset with narrow bands of lace, and finished with huge rosettes of self material through which passes a girdle of narrow white ribbon ending in long streamers. This simple yet charming little frock illustrates the almost tailored form taken by the graduation frock when it is made of crepe de chine or georgette. Organdy is allowed more bouffancy and for this reason is really more becoming to the average slender girl than any other graduation fabric. Indeed, the commencement frock of this year is only following the logical course of fashion when it adopts the wider skirt. As to the length, this for the girl of from 17 to 23 is now properly about six or seven inches above the ground—dimension observed in summer frocks of all characters.

This brings us to the general topic of the silhouette. Dear, O dear—why, it's the trilloette! We have chemise frocks. We have draped frocks in which the fulness is made variously to appear at the hips or at the knees. This latter whim of draping provides us with the pear shaped silhouette which, launched by one of our most famous American designers, is now being extensively copied by other manufacturers. And last of all, there is the wide full skirt with the tight fitting bodice and the narrow underskirt. This last is a Callot tune and from various correspondents we hear that it has fairly broken the dress-bank at Monte Carlo.

It's all true, sisters mine. The chemise frock may linger in the lap of spring, but its days are numbered. The real surprise of the year is the Camargo or the Louis XV. styles. These say, please page the waist line. So the bodice nips in and the skirt flares out. And, though as yet we see little of this new silhouette in New York, the fact that skirts are becoming constantly wider and fuller indicates the trend of fashion. By next fall we shan't look like a pencil any longer. We'll look like a whole drawing.

An important feature of the new silhouette which the old switchboard of Paris will soon transmit to us is the panier. Underfed little paniers, to be sure, just a mere hint of the voluminous ones of the Louis XV. days, but nevertheless of definite form. The popular way to produce a panier now is by the way of a sash. You tie a wide girdle of ribbon or of tulle tightly into the waist and then loop it over either hip. Indeed, the sash is a kind of Carnegie benefactor. It just up and contributes the silhouette. And in this connection let us say that the wide sash of tulle which the smart Parisienne wore at Monte Carlo is already found in the smartest shops in New York. This tulle sash is generally a contrasting tint. For instance, Victory blue tulle appears on a frock of black satin.

This looped panel effect over the hips is not, however, confined to the charity of the sash. Often these appear made of the dress material and lined with contrasting color and material. Panels of a blue serge frock will, for example, show a cherry silk lining. Then, too, a real honest-to-Louis XV. panier is formed of fringe on a dress just brought over to this country. This is of crêpe satin and the fringe, appearing on either side, is brought down over the hips and then sewed under.

Although Cheruit and Callot have gone about plumping up the silhouette in different ways—Cheruit by a puffing of the skirt from waist line to below the hips and her various panier tricks, and Callot by her wide skirt posed over a narrow foundation—the trend of these two great French artistes is so plain that all who run may read. It says that the bodice fitted into the waist by a tight lining and the full skirt are bound to replace in time our sacklike, monotonous, and ever-so-comfortable chemise frocks. At the same time, the day is not yet. And the smart American continues to wear the beloved one piece frock. Yet she does know that 1830 curves are following closely on her heels.

Meanwhile in the last week or so we have been seeing quite a good deal of silk suits. Many of the smartest of these are of black moire, although here as in every other domain of dress, taffeta is ubiquitous. The Tuxedo collar seems to be the favored climax for these silk suits and the other day we noted at tea a society woman who was more of a ruffle-do-er than a Tuxedo-er. That is to say, the entire surface of the Tuxedo collar of her moire suit was covered by tiny ruffles to match those on cuffs and skirt.

As to sports clothes, we find just now two new colors — citron and mignonette green. Sometimes they are used alone and sometimes they are combined. It makes quite a stunning combination—if you were born with a talent for those colors. If not, far better stick to less spectacular tones. And, by the way, white with cherry is now a most popular alliance of colors in sports clothes.

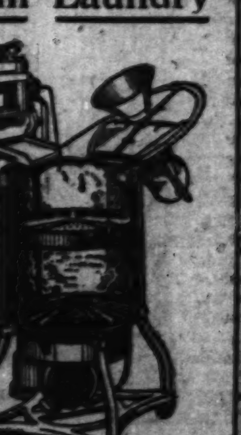
Almetal Household Steam Laundry



Not Just a Washing Machine

The "ALMETAL" does more than merely wash the clothes. It is a complete steam laundry condensed into a single, simple machine that occupies only the space of an ordinary chair. It heats the water, keeps it hot while washing, boils the clothes that need boiling, steams, bleaches and sterilizes them, washes them absolutely clean and then lifts them out of the water when washed.

Has electrically operated wringer which swings to any position. The "ALMETAL" does not injure the finest fabrics, as there is no friction applied at any time.

The machine is well worth the moderate price asked for it, as the saving on clothes will soon pay for it. $152

Our plan of extended payments makes buying easy.

THE HOME HARMONIOUS - - By Anita de Campi

THE BREAKFAST CORNER.

It looks as if the wise ones of us will accept the fact that the cookless era has arrived, and we may as well arrange our household plans and fortifications accordingly. Tillie, who kept the complexion of the white enameled kitchen range so spotless, found higher wages and a more brilliant social life in the locomotive works, and refuses, now that the war is over, to discard her chiffons and nutria for the honored gingham apron.

Plenty of houses and apartments are being remodeled for lighter, easier, simpler housekeeping. Formalities and services, heretofore considered so necessary to the contentment of the family, are dispensed with, and it is surprising how agreeable the changes are. And the servantless era isn't so bad when you stop to think that you always had to serve those who served you; you paid in coin other than cash.

We find now that the kitchen is the most important room in the house. Whether it is sunny or dark is a matter of grave importance, since the mistress herself must live in it. The kitchen cabinet, so much desired by Tillie but which she never got, is installed now that the missus mixes the biscuits and kneads the bread. It is a wonderful step saver, is the kitchen cabinet.

But the most interesting change is the arrival of the breakfast corner, which saves travelling back and forth to the dining room. If there is a window in the kitchen, the breakfast corner should be built there, where the sunlight can chase away the grouch mists of the early day. An excellent arrangement shows a stationary table, extending out from the window sill. On either side of the table is placed a wooden settle, made with high back and uncushioned seat, just such an arrangement as is frequently found in the cafés of Paris and which separates one gay little party from another. It provides seating space for four. If the family is larger than that an extra chair can be placed at the table end that extends out into the room.

A woman of my acquaintance who has buckled down to the housekeeping job has transformed the back porch into breakfast and dining room. The results are most successful. With simple surroundings she dispenses with all manner of luxuries which call for additional labor. Silver pieces, for instance, are all tucked away. What woman does not dread the task of polishing silver? Knives, forks, and spoons can be thrown into the aluminum kettle with the soda bath, but the big pieces require special handling. It didn't matter about the silver polish grime on Tillie's hand, but missus doesn't like it!

The first step in the new arrangement was to have built a compartment at one end for the garbage can and waste paper basket, a compartment that separated itself completely from the main area, so that the janitor can open a door from the outside, and so not step into the porch at all, and the grocer's boy can leave his parcels there. The expense of this was trifling. The real cost and investment came in the glass inclosing arrangements, a succession of windows opening inward, so that the porch could be properly screened.

Floor and walls were painted a sage green, and over the floor were laid fiber rugs, bordered with Argonne red and umbrian blue, which combination of colors makes for cheerfulness and charm.

The lighting arrangements were not difficult. The wiring extended from the kitchen circuit, and for the sake of convenience a portable table lamp was used. In this case it was a wrought iron frame with parchment shade, decorated with simple and conventional design, in which green, red, and blue intermingled.

A drop leaf table of painted wood was purchased, and conformed in color plot with the general scenario. With two drop leaves ready for service, the extra guest or two or three could be accommodated with a bit of crowding. Also the painted surface dispensed with tablecloths, so troublesome to launder, and the mistress used paper lace doilies in place of linen ones. Her one indulgence was napkins of white linen with border bands of blue and green. She has four chairs to match the table, and a reed settee which can be drawn up to the table or placed back against the porch wall.

But the real element of charm is yet to be described. It is supplied by the addition of growing plants. In this realm of sunlight and cheer, almost any ordinary plant will thrive and give forth of its green sprouts and sprigs. Two hanging baskets swing from the rafters, and two wrought iron flower stands repose before the windows.

But what, you ask, did the lady do with her dining room? That was the best reward of the whole scheme. Her living room was much too small, so her dining room was transformed into a library. She moved the china cabinet and the linen drawers into the kitchen for the sake of convenience. All extra lala stuff, such as table ornaments, large pieces of silver and candelabra, were packed away in the storeroom for such idealistic time as may come when the old order of housekeeping is restored, though of such a time she has her doubts.

There is even yet more to be said: the lady discovered that as the back porch was the pleasantest room in the house, the family practically lived there. The children gathered there to study. She took her callers there, and her sewing basket was always at hand.

FERTILIZING; CROP ROTATION.

MANURE suitable for soil fertilizing is becoming ever scarcer. The dearth is more severely felt in the vicinity of great industrial centers, where horses are fast disappearing and those which still remain are bedded more and more on wood shavings and sawdust, to replace high priced hay and straw. That these mill products actually destroy fertility was conclusively demonstrated here in Chicago.

It becomes vitally important, therefore, that the whole subject of the maintenance or restoring of soil fertility be seriously considered, as well by the gardener as by the farmer. The prosperity not merely of a nation, but of all the world, depends on the production of ample food supply within our means of payment, and without detriment to the next generation.

Briefly and simply, let us consider the fundamentals of soil fertility and depletion.

A soil that has, in available form, sufficient plant building material of the kind needed by a given family of plants is fertile for that family, while the temperature is suitable, and not necessarily for any other, because the requirements of all plant families differ. The proportions of plant building elements consumed by the different families of flowers, vegetables, and cereals are so various that the land may, to all intents and purposes, be considered as lying fallow or unusuel for all families except the one in actual growth. Being fallow or idle, the elements of fertility restore themselves with the aid of air, rain, and soil bacteria.

Obviously, therefore, it must be and is entirely practicable to devise a plan of crop rotation, both in gardening and in farming, that will maintain and even increase existing soil fertility without the addition of organic or chemical fertilizers. At the worst, manure need not be added more than once during each cycle of a correct rotation.

There are various elements of fertility required in varying proportions by different plants, and thirteen of them are common to all ordinary agricultural plants. The most important of these are nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium.

All these are abundantly contained in slowly decomposed manure—not if "fire fanged." Nitrifying bacteria and nitrogen fixing bacteria extract this element from soil and air and render it available for giving vitality to the tops and foliage of plants. Phosphorus and potassium are made available for plant use by the atmospheric action on the constituents of the soil (probably, too, with the aid of living organisms not yet discovered), the former for the substance of the plant, the latter for the fruit and roots for regeneration.

Each family of plants uses only that form of the soluble plant food adapted to its own peculiar requirements, leaving the rest intact as a heritage for another family to follow. Only the nitrogen disappears rapidly by leaching or by souring of the soil.

When, therefore, we add stable manure, year after year, to enable us to produce the same plant family uninterruptedly (except in excessively sandy or porous soils), we pile up a wasteful store of fertility entirely out of harmony with the tendency to efficiency and conservation of effort and material. It would be more rational to utilize what is there by the alternating culture of other families and to restore the nitrogen by occasionally planting peas, beans, lentils, peanuts, clovers, vetches, etc., known as legumes, which have the property of storing organic nitrogen in little nodules on their roots, for the use of subsequent plants. The plants should be turned under green, when fully developed, to furnish the necessary organic matter for humus in the topsoil. Without it the soil would become pasty, unfit to hold air and moisture, unfit for cultivation, and unfit for proper root action.

An example of proper rotation for the vegetable and flower garden and for the field would be:

First a legume—beans, including kidney beans, navy beans, Lima beans, green and yellow pod beans, yard long beans, scarlet runner beans, soy beans, etc.; the various garden and field peas, cow peas, the lentil (a highly nutritious ingredient of soups and stews, similar to split peas); peanut (entirely suitable to the more sandy soils of this region); the many clovers, including red clover, white clover, sweet clover, and alfalfa; the vetches, including horse bean, Carolina vetch, American vetch, and hairy vetch; babies' slippers (Lotus corniculatus); Hedysarum (various ornamental herbs, including French honeysuckle); goat's rue (an ornamental hardy hebaceous perennial, suitable for cut flowers); partiridge pea (an ornamental annual with sensitive leaves); and wild senna (a perennial shrubs).

Followed by one of the solanaceae or nightshades—potato, tomato, eggplant, red pepper, ground cherry, belladonna, mandrake, tobacco, petunia, cup flower, butterfly flower, thornapple or garden datura, apple of Peru (a strong spreading annual ornamental), and matrimony vine.

Followed by one of the crucifers—the various cabbages, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, kale, kohlrabi, turnip, pe-tsai (Chinese cabbage), rape, the several mustards, sea kale, radish, and rat-tailed radish (Raphanus sativus, caudatus), which has enormously long pods that are eaten pickled or raw; horse radish, water cress, upland or winter cress, garden cress, pepper root (Dentaria diphylla), a pretty spring flower with edible root; rock cress (an annual ornamental border plant); purple rock cress (Aubrietia), excellent for perennial edging; sweet alyssum, candytuft, wallflower, cuckoo flower, moonwort or honesty, ten weeks stock, Virginia stock.

Followed again by a legume, etc.

A three year rotation is usually the best, and other combinations can be made with the legumes to include different families. Always have the legume immediately preceding the "money crop," or that crop to which the greatest importance is attached, whether vegetables, grains, or flowers.

If a gardener has only limited quantities of stable or barnyard manure, and circumstances do not admit of rational rotation of crops, the available supply may be amplified by a so-called "complete" commercial fertilizer, containing what is known as a 4-8-10 mixture (4 per cent nitrogen, 8 per cent phosphoric acid, and 10 per cent potash). This would be adapted to early potatoes and garden crops in general. The ingredients are now prohibitive in price and the formula (according to Van Slyke) will be published at a more opportune time.

The home garden would better avoid all chemical fertilizers. If a universal concentrate is required, let it be sheep manure, poultry dung, or even bone meal; but stable manure or barnyard manure must be the one great reliance except in emergencies.

Only in highly specialized gardening is one warranted in restoring the one element most heavily drawn on by the particular genus or family grown, and even then the chemical can be applied only to amplify the organic matter turned under as manure, or the soil would soon be ruined for profitable plant growth.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—I have several wild pear trees and would like to have tame pears grafted on them. (1) Can it be done? (2) Is this the proper time of year to do it? (3) Whom would you recommend to do it?—J. A. J.

A.—(1) Yes. (2) It can still be done if dormant scions are available. The best time is in April, when the buds begin to swell, with scions prepared in fall. (3) Any trained nurseryman or landscape gardener. Probably the gardener or chief florist of the nearest of the large parks can advise locally.

Q.—(1) Where, among my perennial flowers or in my vegetable garden, could the residue of partly burned or charred meat bones be used to best advantage? (2) Several of my neighbors never save garbage for the collector; we bury it all in the garden, the year around, and it certainly does make the ground richer. (3) The greatest trial to back yad gardeners, in my opinion, is neighbors' trees set too closely to dividing fences. The shade of even a small tree or shrub will cut down the production of flowers or vegetables by 50 per cent.—Mrs. M. T. H.

A.—(1) Too slow in decomposing to be of any appreciable value. They would be excellent if finely ground instead and might then be used as a top dressing, raked in just before planting or wherever the soil is depleted, for all flowers and vegetables. (2) A good practice where manure is not available. (3) Yes, fully 50 per cent. The roots also steal the fertility of the soil. Dig a ditch annually, two and one-half feet deep, along the lot line, to cut the roots as far as the trees or shrubs spread.

How Caloric Cookery Saves Table Money

When the CALORIC was first put on the market the manufacturers expected it to accomplish two things, viz: save time for the housewife and save fuel. However, shortly after the introduction, letters began to come in from users stating that they found that on account of the thoroughness with which it cooked food, it permitted a material saving in expenditures for food, particularly meats. One enthusiastic user wrote: "My husband says the Caloric makes an old rooster taste like a spring chicken." This statement is quoted because it tells so plainly how Caloric Cookery makes the table allowance go farther.

Every housekeeper knows that some of the cheaper cuts of meat have a much better flavor than the more expensive cuts, but because they cannot be made tender by ordinary methods of cooking, she buys the more expensive cuts. With the Caloric you can use cheaper cuts, because it cooks so thoroughly that they invariably come out of the stove juicy and tender with two-thirds less shrinkage than when cooked in the ordinary way. The same principle holds true throughout the list of foods.

Breakfast cereals, baked beans, and all the different vegetables, including baked potatoes, invariably come out of the Caloric Cookstove cooked to a turn and deliciously flavored.

It is literally true that the Caloric will save enough money in a few months to pay for itself.

You can install a Caloric Fireless Cookstove in your home with full confidence that from the first time it is used it will operate satisfactorily, lessen your work, save you money in all the ways enumerated and enable you to serve better cooked and more delicious food.

How the Caloric Saves Fuel

Whether you use gas, gasoline, kerosene, electricity, coal or wood as fuel, by cooking with the Caloric Fireless Cookstove you can reduce your fuel bills at least one-half.

This is possible because the heating elements used in each Caloric Cookstove absorb enough heat in a few minutes to cook an entire meal from soup to dessert.

One Section Cooker, 7.95
Two Section Cooker, 10.75 up

Right now is your chance to save ½ the high cost of food and fuel.

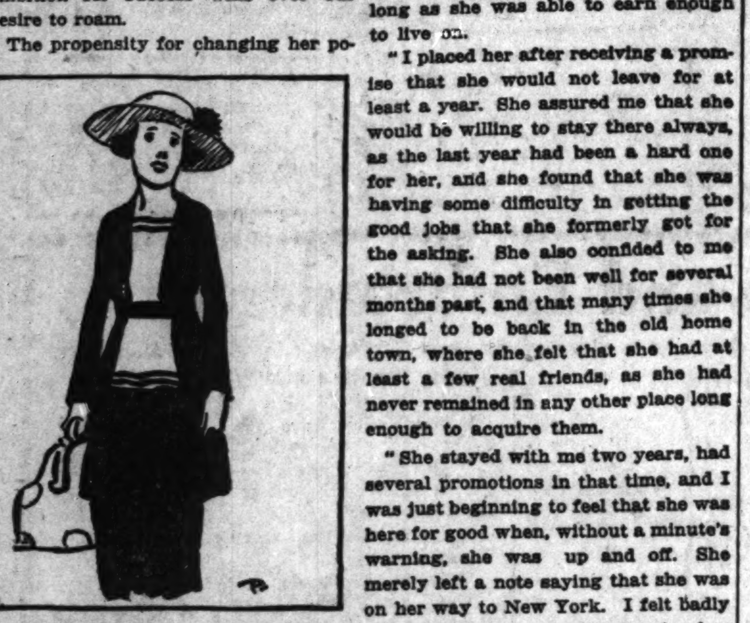
For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

THE WISH TO WANDER.

THE letter given below is written by a woman whose business experience and success warrant her voicing a bit of advice to other women in the business world. The experience of the woman she tells about is by no means rare, for the inclination to wander is strong in many of us, and it is only by the exercise of our will that our sense of discretion and ambition for success wins over our desire to roam.



The propensity for changing her position and for wandering from one part of the country to another is merely amusing in a young woman, but when she has reached middle age or passed it this restlessness becomes tragic.

"Dear Miss King: I have a friend who was so discontented that she was constantly changing her position, but it is only within the last few years that this inability of hers to stay in one place for any length of time has worried me.

"I have known Miss M. for a number of years. When we were both young women and I was working for the firm that employs me now I envied the spirit which prompted her to get away from her home town and to wander over the country, getting a job wherever she stopped, remaining in each town only long enough to enable her to pay her way to another.

"She was bright and capable and never had any serious difficulty in getting a job. Whenever she came home she would immediately get herself a position without asking any one's help, but one time when she came to town I noticed that she was beginning to appear old, had lost some of her good looks, and looked worried.

"Instead of going out with her old time vim and getting herself a job, she came to me and asked if I would place her with my firm. I told her that I did not have a position at my disposal that I thought would suit her, and to my astonishment she said that she would be satisfied with anything as long as she was able to earn enough to live on.

"I placed her after receiving a promise that she would not leave for at least a year. She assured me that she would be willing to stay there always, as the last year had been a hard one for her, and she found that she was having some difficulty in getting the good jobs that she formerly got for the asking. She also confided to me that she had not been well for several months past, and that many times she longed to be back in the old home town, where she felt that she had at least a few real friends, as she had never remained in any other place long enough to acquire them.

"She stayed with me two years, had several promotions in that time, and I was just beginning to feel that she was here for good when, without a minute's warning, she was up and off. She merely left a note saying that she was on her way to New York. I felt badly about her going, and wrote, urging her to return. I heard from her irregularly for the next six months, and every little while her letters were postmarked from a different town. Finally I heard that she was ill in San Francisco, that she was without friends, and her funds were low.

"Through the generosity of several old friends, she was brought back home, where she was properly cared for. When she finally recovered sufficiently to work again, I knew that her roaming days were over forever. Having been forced to accept the charity of her friends had broken her spirit. She appears to be an old woman now, and is capable of doing only the simplest work.

"Whenever I come in contact with or hear of a young woman who is not contented to stay in any job for more than a few weeks or months, or who likes to run about the country, getting a job here and there, the picture of my old friend comes to me, and I wish that the restless one could see her now.

Etiquette

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

D. M. C.: The knife and fork, when not in use, should be placed on the plate at what we were taught to call "twenty minutes past 4"; that means with them in the position of the hands of a clock at that hour.

V. B. L.: Although this is largely a matter of personal choice, it is customary for divorced women to use their own names on their visiting cards. For instance, "Mrs. John Brown" would have her cards engraved "Mrs. Mary Smith Brown."

* *

FRANK B.: Why not ask the girl if you may call? She doubtless will be glad to see you, since she has accepted your invitation, but prefers to have you take the initiative in the matter of calling.

* *

MRS. G. L. S.: A married woman uses her new name on her calling cards; for example, "Mrs. William Johnson Smith." She may or may not, as she prefers, have her street address engraved in the lower right hand corner.

* *

G. L. A.: "How do you do, Miss Smith?" is the proper thing for a young man to say when he is presented to a young woman. When introduced to a man the acknowledgment may be either "How do you do, Mr. Jones?" or simply, "Mr. Jones."

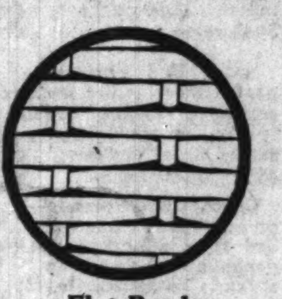
Marshall B. Lloyd
Inventor of the Celebrated Lloyd Loom

Woven on Looms
with Interwoven Colors—Flexible Fabric
10 ADDED REFINEMENTS

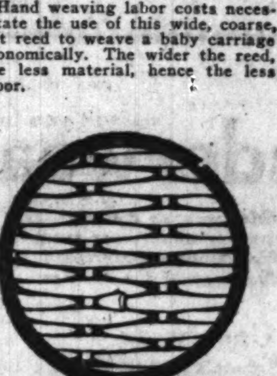
Marshall B. Lloyd, the famous inventor, has now made possible the weaving of Baby Carriages on Looms. With strands of such fineness that up to four times greater length of material is required for a Lloyd Baby Carriage than is used for ordinary Baby Carriages. Human hands could not profitably weave them. Nor produce the beautiful Interwoven Color effects—two-tones, three-tones and mist effects—woven into Lloyd Fabric on the Loom.

The Lloyd Loom weaves the entire Baby Carriage Body from a single continuous strand with mechanical uniformity and exactness. Hence it eliminates the loose, uneven, irregular weaving of hand methods. And the projecting ends of short strands that mar the surface, scratch the baby's hands and face and tear dainty clothing.



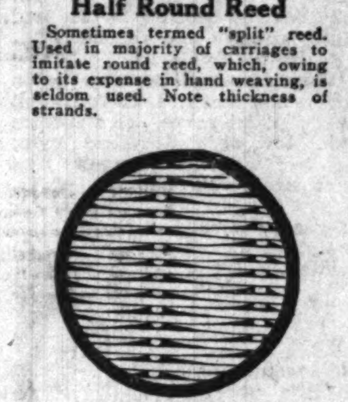
Flat Reed

Hand weaving labor costs necessitate the use of this wide, coarse, flat reed to weave a baby carriage economically. The wider the reed, the less material, hence the less labor.



Half Round Reed

Sometimes termed "split" reed. Used in majority of carriages to imitate round reed, which, owing to its expense in hand weaving, is seldom used. Note thickness of strands.



Lloyd Fabric

Lloyd Loom Woven Fabric woven on looms like finest silk, from a single, continuous, fine small strand—evenly, uniformly, mechanically exact—with no loose ends. Yet costs no more than old-fashioned hand weaving.

Lloyd Loom Woven Baby Carriages

You are now offered an improved Baby Carriage material—a wood base product of Nature, improved by science, and made by a waterproof process. Unlike ordinary material it does not warp when exposed to rain. Neither does it become brittle with age. Nor is it ruined when dented. Lloyd Loom Woven Fabric is flexible, elastic, springs back to original shape when dented.

Now Added Refinements

We now offer these extra features, possible through savings effected by the famous loom: Finer, more closely woven strands, requiring up to 1,500 more feet in length of material; Special Finishing Process, which "locks on" the finish, making it lasting, durable; Patented Reversible Safety Gear of improved Double Hoop construction, rigid, noiseless, extra safe; Special "Square and Round" Hydraulic Tube Pushers, which provide extra rigidity and added strength to running gear and make carriage unusually easy to handle; Oil Tempered Auto-like Springs of unequaled resiliency, which hold original balance of carriage, no matter how long or hard the usage; Special Wheels with double inner and outer rims through which spokes are re-enforced so they cannot come loose.

Style Book Free

Your name and address on a letter, postal, or the margin of this paper will bring you the latest Style Book showing the season's finest creations in Gondolas and Pullmans and illustrating the rich two-tone and three-tone effects. Also full description of Lloyd Loom Woven Baby Carriages and complete list of all dealers in your locality. Free, without cost or obligation.

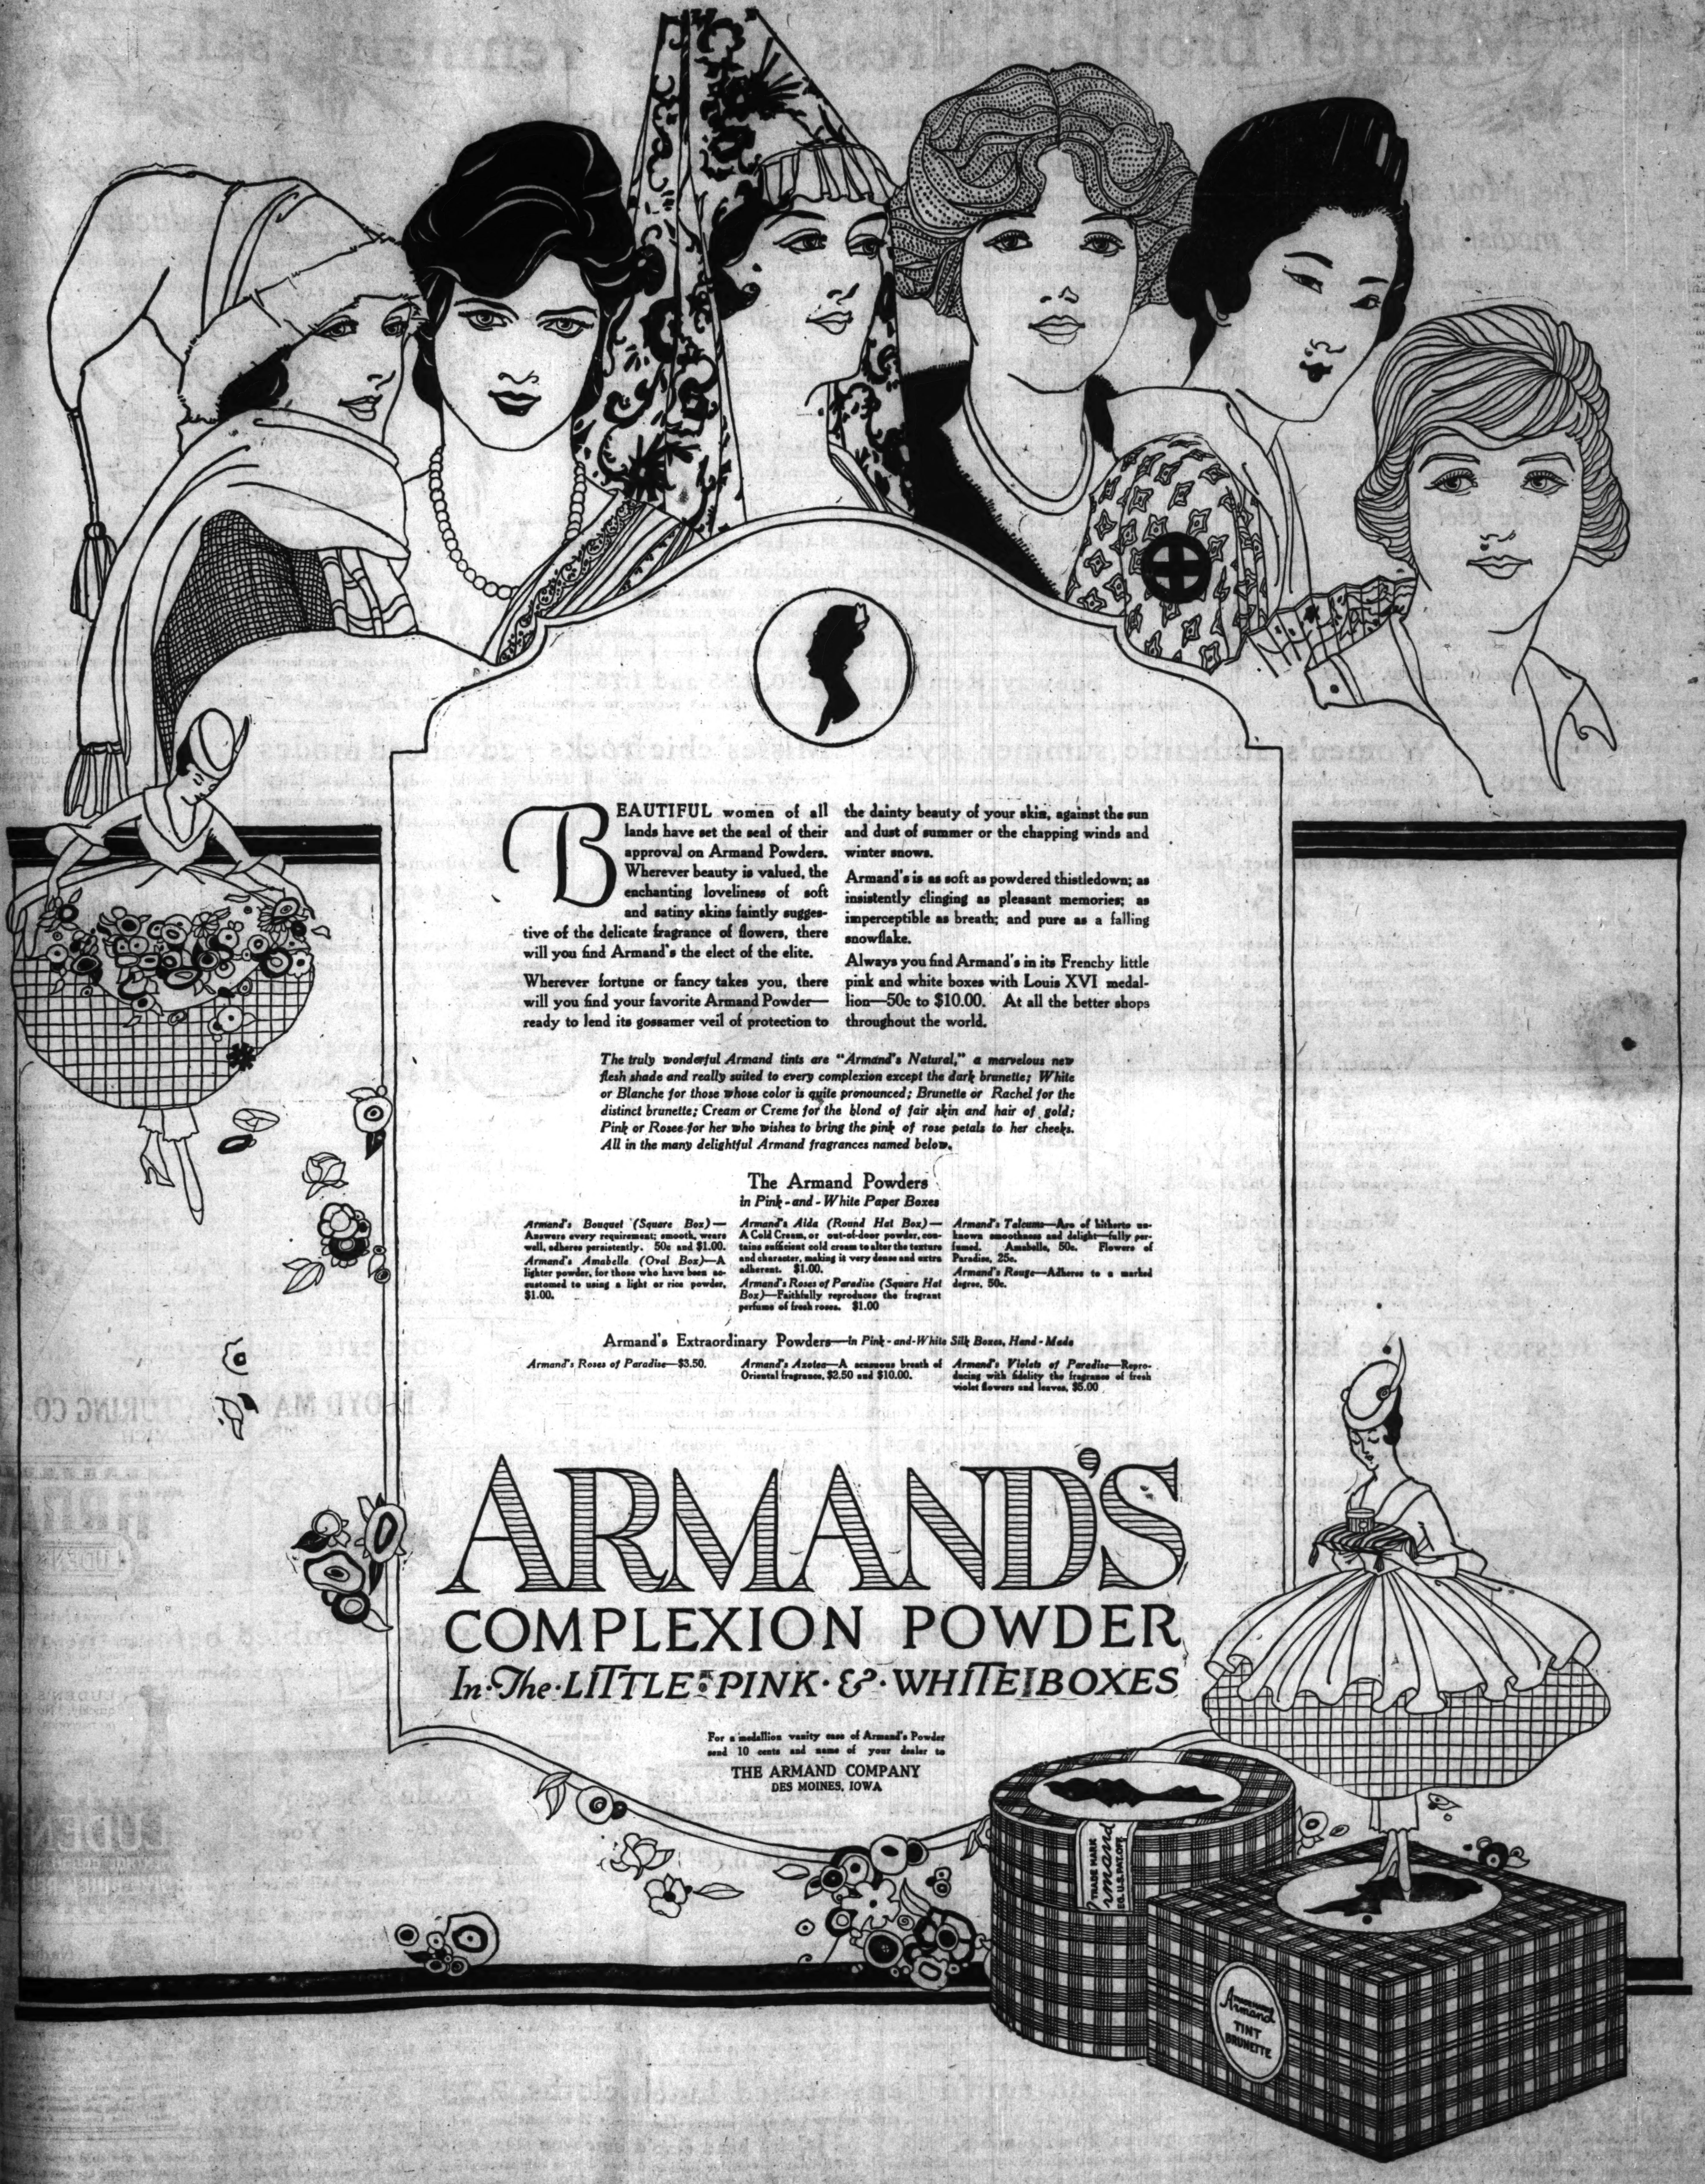
Back of the cold type of Tribune advertising are warm blooded enthusiastic merchants — men with whom you like to deal.



BEAUTIFUL women of all lands have set the seal of their approval on Armand Powders. Wherever beauty is valued, the enchanting loveliness of soft and satiny skins faintly suggestive of the delicate fragrance of flowers, there will you find Armand's the elect of the elite.

Wherever fortune or fancy takes you, there will you find your favorite Armand Powder—ready to lend its gossamer veil of protection to the dainty beauty of your skin, against the sun and dust of summer or the chapping winds and winter snows.

Armand's is as soft as powdered thistledown; as insistently clinging as pleasant memories; as imperceptible as breath; and pure as a falling snowflake.

Always you find Armand's in its Frenchy little pink and white boxes with Louis XVI medallion—50c to $10.00. At all the better shops throughout the world.

The truly wonderful Armand tints are "Armand's Natural," a marvelous new flesh shade and really suited to every complexion except the dark brunette; White or Blanche for those whose color is quite pronounced; Brunette or Rachel for the distinct brunette; Cream or Creme for the blond of fair skin and hair of gold; Pink or Rosee for her who wishes to bring the pink of rose petals to her cheeks. ADVERTISING SALESMEN.

Our best man came with us eight years ago and is still on the job, doing better than $250 per week right now. We have a number of others who are satisfied with half as much, but we want to make room for a few more in the class with this master salesman—specialty men of the highest type, resourceful, go-getters who have proven to themselves how much better it is to work on a big commission and get it than to limit themselves with a salary and carry a lot of weak men on their business. Position requires traveling in smaller towns; territory assigned exclusively and can be covered frequently. Excellent chance for advancement to district sales manager with interest in all business from extended field. 1004 Marquette Bldg.

ARE YOU ONE IN A HUNDRED?

We're looking for an EXCEPTIONAL salesman—a man who has confidence enough in himself to KNOW that he is an exceptional man and who can produce the record to prove it. We do not expect and do not want many replies to this advertisement. We want to hear only from men who know they are equal to a big business proposition.

We are marketing a substantial agricultural specialty which is now being used on farms throughout the country and the demand for which is steadily increasing, not only because of the shortage of farm labor but also because of the general advantages which this specialty brings. We have been building up our sales organization only since the armistice was declared. We still have a truly exceptional opening for the right man; an opening which we can conservatively say has all the opportunities which the Ford proposition had in its early days.

There will be six or seven men who will eventually be the big money makers of our organization. When we have found them the really big opportunities will be filled. All these men have not yet been found. The man we want must, first of all, be a man who has a successful sales record behind him. He must be a good organizer. He must know how to pick and train other men. He must be accustomed to thinking in terms of big business and must know how to develop such business in a solid, substantial way. He must be a man who can be given a valuable territory and be depended upon to discover and develop its opportunities for big business.

Such a man has an opportunity with us to earn a really unusual sum of money a year, to build up a line of business that will bring him a continuous return on his original effort; in other words, to be one of the few big money makers that are developed during the early days of any large, successful firm. Unless he is able to make between $8,000 and $10,000 the first year and considerably more the second year we would not consider him the man we are looking for. It is hardly necessary to say to this man that ours is strictly a commission proposition, for he would consider no other basis of return for his ability.

If you are our man write us fully regarding yourself, stating the nature of the work you have done in the past, your earning capacity, the firms you have worked for, your age, etc. Replies will be held in strict confidence. If you live outside of Chicago and your application seems favorable we will arrange an interview at our expense. Address S P 543, Tribune.

While it may seem like an empty transaction to take money out of one pocket and place it in another, it will be a "grand and glorious feeling" to discover it in that other pocket.

The beginning must be made by securing the ground. This properly accomplished, the sailing will be comparatively easy.

Take this afternoon off and meet us at

HELP! HELP!

"The Tribune" of May 11th, 1919, says:

"Dealers say glorious peace means higher food prices. . . . Last and far from least of reasons, was the government's removing all restraints on prices. Hogs now are $21.85 as against $17.50 when the armistice was signed, and the world has tightened its hunger girdle. Flour was then $11 a barrel. It is now $14.80 with every indication of further advances. Lard, too, is higher in price than it was in January or November, 1918, when in greatest demand. Meat and staples are proportionately higher. . . ."

What does this mean to you? There is only one real answer for you and that is, if you can't afford to be a CONSUMER be a PRODUCER. Have some of these high prices coming in to you instead of going out from you. As all foodstuff comes from the soil, just get a piece of land and start raising your own food.

LAND that has grown hardwood trees and produces fine clover can raise most anything. We have just that kind of land for only $15 to $30 per acre on easy monthly terms. $100 STARTS YOU ON THE PURCHASE OF 40 ACRES, $50 ON 20 ACRES, AND $10 TO $25 ON 10 ACRES.

The following foodstuffs are raised in abundance: clover, alfalfa, potatoes, beans, wheat, rye, oats, fruit, vegetables, while stock and poultry do well.

This district is supplied with good schools, churches, hard roads, railroads, market towns, telephones, and R. F. D. The counties of Antrim and Kalkaska are enterprising and thrifty.

Start to eliminate the high cost of living by joining one of our excursions.

SALES PLANS.

No. 1—$500 starts you on a farm with buildings, stock, tools. No payments on principal or interest for 5 years.

No. 2—$10 to $15 monthly, or $120 yearly secures you benefits of Plan No. 1 when $500 is paid in.

As the land department of the Holt Lumber Co., the Oconto Co., and the Menominee Bay Shore Co. we are offering 100,000 acres of hardwood cutover land at prices from $20 to $30 per acre for agricultural land. Stony land and rough land is sold only for grazing purposes at reduced prices. Swamp land unfit for farming is not for sale.

The soil of this district is a Kennan silt loam, which the State Agricultural Department considers one of the best soils in the state. The soil contains the necessary plant food for crops, so that fertilizers are unnecessary and it warms up early in the spring and works easily because of its texture. The Kennan silt loam does not bake or crack, but has enough body to make a lasting soil.

WE FINANCE YOU FOR FIVE YEARS BECAUSE WE BELIEVE IN OUR SOIL.

DIAMONDS
SOLD FOR LESS MONEY!

When I pick up Diamonds for cash at auctions and from people who need the money, I ONLY PAY A FRACTION OF THE MARKET VALUE! I must buy cheap enough to resell to jewelers and Diamond Brokers at less than wholesale, otherwise why should they pay me cash when they can buy wholesale on time? I will sell to the individual customer who seeks a good investment AT THE SAME PRICE I make to those in the trade. Having no "overhead" expense to speak of, it pays me to take as little as $10 profit on a $500 deal. And I protect you with a written guarantee of the carat weight, color, quality, and value; and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied. [References 2 National Banks.]

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot, grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York.

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new kind of rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff as you need it. It goes on wonderfully well and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is put up in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last for months, yet the package is small enough to fit the purse. Because La-may Rouge is such a new invention, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. Tell him to order a package for you. When you use this new Rouge and see how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Out-of-town readers may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th Street, New York.

Girls! Beautify Your Hair With "Danderine"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

AN ACROBAT OF THE SKIES—Lieut. Ormer L. Locklear, whose daredevil stunt of dropping from one plane to another in midair was pictured in this section recently. Here he is again, standing on a wing of his machine, holding on to nothing and looking things over. Lieut. Locklear plans a non-stop flight from New York to San Francisco when he gets out of the army, taking on his gasoline supply through dangling tubes from other planes which are to fly above him when he needs 'em.

"GO TO HELL WHITTLESEY'S" MEN COME BACK—The famous "lost battalion" of the 308th Infantry lined up on the dock just after landing in New York. According to official records the outfit wasn't "lost" at all, but the Germans thought it was until they received the commander's uncompromising reply to their demand that he surrender his desperate position in the Argonne forest. That's all a matter of history now.

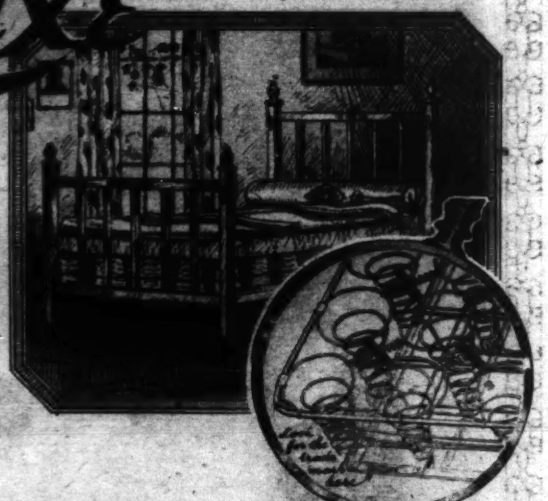
De Luxe

The Bedspring Luxurious



SLEEP and rest do not always go together. A person may sleep all through the night, yet not be rested in the morning.

Invariably the cause is a wrongly constructed bedspring.

The De Luxe Bedspring is designed and constructed not only to sleep on, but to rest on—to give that utter relaxation which means rest and renewed energy in the morning.

It is known as "The Bedspring Luxurious"—and it lives up to and beyond this descriptive title.

Ask your dealer to show you a De Luxe Bedspring—a comparison with all others will at once demonstrate its obviously superior, luxurious comfort.

ANOTHER AIRPLANE VIEW OF SMOKY CHICAGO—The "forest of smoke trees" is still much in evidence, but objects in the foreground are more easily identified than in the photograph published last Sunday. Immediately before you is the picturesque desolation of Grant Park. Behind it towers the Blackstone hotel, with the Victory forum and the heart of the loop district over to the right. A flock of diminutive automobiles may be seen scurrying busily about near the Blackstone. In the background, at the left of the picture, the sunlight manages to pick out a glimpse of the Chicago river.

PEARL WHITE calmly maintains her popularity while other stars bloom, are becalmed or disappear altogether. She's still with Pathe, where she started. She's still making serials—as she started—and the fans continue to write in, heaping encomiums on her devoted head and demanding to be told her life's history. Briefly, then, this is it:

Born in Missouri. First attracted attention of theatrical men by reciting "Hamlet's Soliloquy." Played Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Her first picture was the serial "Perils of Pauline."

Has green eyes and reddish brown hair; wouldn't mind dying if she doesn't have to depart this life in pieces—you know these serial artists do take chances sometimes; may be married, but doesn't say anything about it; rides, motors, swims and plays golf.—Mae Tinee.

HERBERT RAWLINSON has been in the pictures for a long time, but it is only within the last year or so that people have been doing much talking about him. He broke through their indifference in "Come Through," however, and since that time we fans have been keeping a canny and appreciative eye on him.

This young Mr. Rawlinson is an Englishman—born in Brighton, England, year 1885. Educated in France and England. Was on the stage for a while, both in stock and repertoire, but deserted the "legit" early for the screen. The companies he has played with have been Selig, Bosworth and now Universal—though now he is being advertised in big black letters in "The Carter Case," produced by Oliver Films. Lent to them, I suppose.

In private life Mr. Rawlinson is the husband of Roberta Arnold. He's six feet tall, weighs 165, has brown hair, blue eyes; indulges in all the manly sports and is, on the whole, quite a feller, they tell me.—Mae Tinee.

BESSIE LOVE is nearly always seen in the sort of pictures you heartily advise the lovers of pleasant things to see. You know that the nice little girl next door will come away from a Bessie Love picture with a mind clean as before she saw it.

Miss Love was born in Los Angeles and educated there. Her screen career has been the only kind of career she's had time to have, as she is still just a young girl. She started with Triangle-Fine Arts, was with Ince-Triangle, and now works under the Pathe banner.

The pictures in which I have liked her best were "Nina the Flower Girl," "A Sister of Six" and "Wee Lady Betty."—Mae Tinee.

GLORIA SWANSON is a girl for you to keep your eye on. Nobody paid much attention to her when she was with Essanay—nor did she set the world on fire with her work for Universal or Keystone. Paramount took her up, however, and now the cards tell a different tale. In "Don't Change Your Husband" she was a distinct sensation, and now in the Cecil de Mille super feature, "For Better or for Worse," she's making them sit up and take notice.

Miss Swanson is a Chicago girl, educated here and in Porto Rico. She's five feet three inches tall, weighs 112 pounds, has brown hair and a pair of devastating blue eyes.

What makes them the best gloves

The care it takes to make a perfect silk glove

EVERY Kayser Silk Glove is cut individually and cut to fit perfectly. The half sizes also all cut individually—not taken in deeper at the seams.

No skimping over the wrist. The gloves clasp without straining.

The fingers are exactly the right length.

The gloves are carefully shaped over the palm and back to prevent stretching and wrinkling.

Every glove passes four inspectors before it is sent to the stores. Only gloves perfect in strength and finish can get into the shops.

IT'S the pure silk in Kayser Silk Gloves that makes them wear longer and keep their shape better than ordinary silk gloves.

A silk thread so strong that the gloves do not wash thin or lose their perfect shape, their original chic. And yet so soft that the glove always feels pleasantly cool on the hand.

The proof is in the washing. Kayser Silk Gloves will wash and wash! Follow the directions enclosed with each pair. They will slip on just as comfortably, have the same trim, silky look as the first time you wore them.

Double tips—do you remember the first ones? Every silk glove improvement, from those original double tips to the latest style innovations, has been created and introduced by Julius Kayser & Co.

Today, after forty years, Kayser's still stands for the highest quality, the most fastidious workmanship in silk gloves. For absolute glove comfort, perfect shape and exquisite finish, Kayser is the only glove that women will consider.

Look for the name "Kayser" in the hem. JULIUS KAYSER & CO., New York.

Cretonnes, curtains, blankets laundered actually like new

HOW many times have you longed for filmier curtains and more colorful cretonnes without daring to buy them!

You were afraid they would be an endless source of worry and expense.

But now you know your fragile curtains, your dear cretonnes, your exquisite table linens, can be kept lovely and fresh with Lux.

There is nothing else like Lux. Lux comes in wonderful, delicate white flakes—pure and transparent. You whisk them into the richest, sudsiest lather, that loosens all the dirt—leaves the finest fabric clean and new—not a color dimmed, not a fibre broken, nor weakened in any way.

Light and fluffy blankets

What a joy to have your blankets light and fluffy after repeated tubbings! With Lux you can wash them over and over again and keep them soft and woolly.

Blankets should never be rubbed. Wool fibre is the most sensitive fibre there is. You don't dare trust it to ordinary soap.

With Lux there is not a tiny particle of solid soap to stick to the soft woolen and injure it. Not a bit of rubbing to mat and shrink it. Only gently squeezing the suds through the blanket again and again.

Use Lux on your finest blankets, your richest cretonnes! Tumble your daintiest things—embroidered pillow-slips, doilies—even lamp shades—into the Lux suds. You will get a new idea of how easily you can keep your loveliest things as fresh as when you bought them.

Lux won't hurt anything pure water alone won't injure.

HOW TO WASH BLANKETS

Whisk Lux into a lather in boiling or very hot water, allowing two tablespoonfuls to a gallon of water. Add cold water to make suds lukewarm. Work your blankets about in the suds, but do not rub. Squeeze the suds again and again through soiled spots. Rinse in three lukewarm waters, dissolving a little Lux in the last rinsing water. Run the blankets through a loose wringer; never twist. Hang in the shade to dry.

Use Lux for your daintiest things

Sheer lace curtains
Fine dimity curtains
Silk overhangings
Damasks
Table linens
Lingerie pillow cases
Dresser scarfs
Blankets
Embroidered counterpanes
Lamp shades
Cretonnes
Lace bedspreads

No suds so wonderful as Lux!

HOW TO WASH SILK AND COLORED CURTAINS

Dissolve Lux in boiling or very hot water, a tablespoon to a gallon. Whisk into a lather. Add cold water until lukewarm. Wash the curtains quickly. Do not rub. Rinse in three lukewarm waters. Roll silk curtains in a towel and iron before quite dry. Hang other curtains in the shade.

For white curtains—not silk—shake out the dust, then soak for an hour in cold water. Wash in hot suds. Rinse three times in hot water and dry in the sun.

SITTIN' PRETTY!—The twelfth century looks amiably down on the twentieth as Yanks and Tommies, on furlough, give Venice the conventional once-over from a gondola. And it wasn't so long ago that the city of the Doges was almost under the Austrian guns.

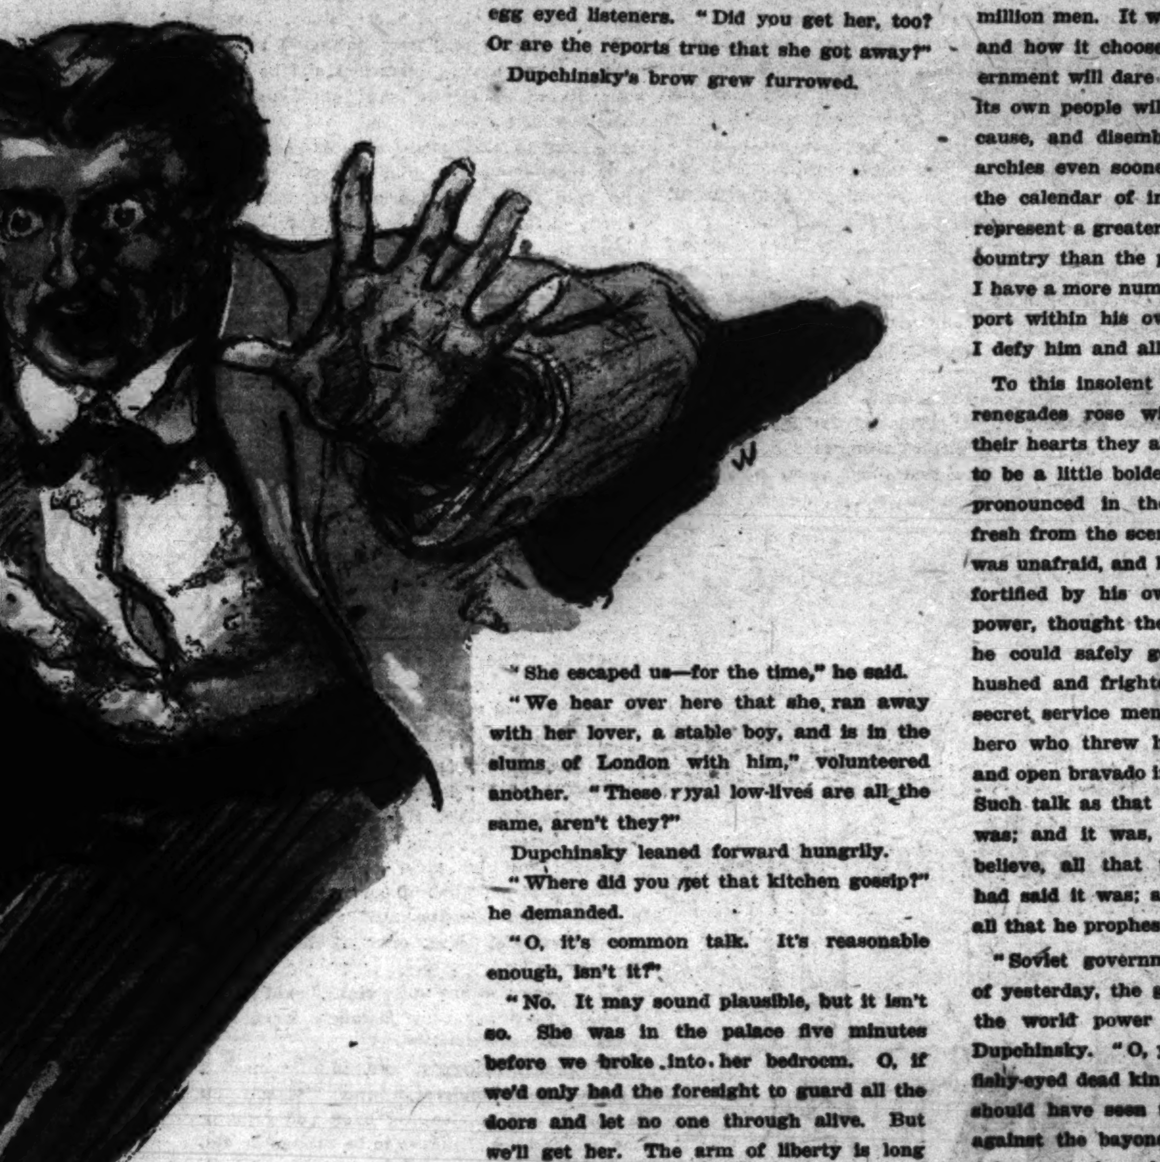
Here treason and nihilism breed in the warmth of the unventilated chambers and in the social filth of the habitués. Not alone kings are damned and the wealthy are excoriated, but republican rule, the gentle fabric of man's own weaving in his highest manifestations of civilized brotherhood, is spat upon with that contempt and bitter resentment which these wayward and willful dissenters spew against any and all forms of organized order. "The weapon of the rich," they call all government, these illiterate and dirty immigrants of low breed, who despise all wealth because they cannot grub or steal any for themselves.



In such society Naroush was a pet. Of higher mental quality than most of them, he was still one of them; it flatters a thief or an outlaw or an outcast to meet his own superior in his own degradation.

Fists thundered upon the tables in applause of Dupchinsky's recitals. Another king had been mauled to death by the holy will of the people—hurrah! Over another community the red flag, as crimson as the blood it cost and the blood it still demanded, was flying flippantly in sight of heaven itself—hurrah! Here was a banquet for the appetites of these scavengers, lusting for the jackal leavings of a lion's mutilated corpse and the fresh, young blood of the lambs now panic stricken and shepherdless in the fenced fields. With smacking lips and rubbing together of itchy palms these army followers, who had not themselves served the courage of their own carnal convictions, clattered their enthusiastic indorsements upon the deeds of those braver wreckers and despoilers and murderers who had bloodied their own talons for "the cause."

The landlord, harboring a drawing card, broke his house rule and for once "set up" the mucky mixture which passed for coffee. Dupchinsky acknowledged the distinction by detailing the death of the king, giving tidbit for tidbit.

"And the princess?" interposed one of the egg eyed listeners. "Did you get her, too? Or are the reports true that she got away?"

Dupchinsky's brow grew furrowed.

"She escaped us—for the time," he said.

"We hear over here that she ran away with her lover, a stable boy, and is in the slums of London with him," volunteered another. "These royal low-lives are all the same, aren't they?"

Dupchinsky leaned forward hungrily.

"Where did you get that kitchen gossip?" he demanded.

"O, it's common talk. It's reasonable enough, isn't it?"

"No. It may sound plausible, but it isn't so. She was in the palace five minutes before we broke into her bedroom. O, if we'd only had the foresight to guard all the doors and let no one through alive. But we'll get her. The arm of liberty is long and its eye is all-seeing. The world isn't big enough to cover her up. Grodnia—the people's Grodnia—cries aloud for her heart's blood and it shall be drained."

"Hear, hear," cried the rooters.

"Should any of you get any reliable hint as to where she might be, I want you to inform me forthwith. My business here is along other lines, but the soviet will plentifully reward any loyal brother who assists in the inspired work of killing off these royal rats who too long stole from the pantries and the granaries of the poor. It was decreed by popular acclamation that Sabina must die so that freedom may live. And above such verdict there is no higher law."

"She must die," chorused the worthies, raising their streaked cups.

"If she is in England, or, perchance, in America," ventured one of the more timid yet sympathizing comrades, "some difficulties may be encountered."

"Difficulties?" cried Naroush. "Silence, fool. What do we care for the childish laws of these countries? Do you think that the will of a people is going to halt or even hesitate because of the silly dictums of nations which are a hundred years behind the new order? England—faugh! America—bah! One is ruled by a sacred kinglet who knows the hours of his false power are counted. The other is run by a herd of rich thieves who are even now burying their loot because they realize that their tribute levying is reaching an end. When I say that the soviet of Grodnia has spoken, I say that the greatest power on earth has spoken, because it stands with and is part of the overwhelming force which is sweeping the globe, which will twist into scrap iron the supports of all the antedated political structures everywhere—bolshevism; long may it rule."

The walls quivered with the demonstration that backed up the swaggering pronunciamento of Dupchinsky. The landlord almost gave away another "round" of his vile coffee.

"If bolshevism has a duty to perform here," continued Dupchinsky, "bolshevism will ask the leave of no man or no hundred million men. It will strike where and when and how it chooses. No old-fashioned government will dare to oppose it, for if it does its own people will rise and get behind the cause, and disembowel republics and monarchies even sooner than is set down upon the calendar of inevitable fate already. I represent a greater power, right here in this country than the president of this country. I have a more numerous and more solid support within his own borders than he has. I defy him and all his laws."

To this insolent sentiment the assembled renegades rose with admiring gusto. In their hearts they all determined thenceforth to be a little bolder, a bit more public and pronounced in their bluster; this herald, fresh from the scenes of anarchist triumph, was unafraid, and he was right; he had been fortified by his own sight of the people's power, thought they, and he knew how far he could safely go. Here they had been hushed and frightened in fear of snooping secret service men. Came now this young hero who threw his convictions with loud and open bravado into the teeth of the world. Such talk as that made bolshevism what it was; and it was, they were beginning to believe, all that the raucous Dupchinsky had said it was; and it was destined to be all that he prophesied for it, they believed.

"Soviet government—the utopian dream of yesterday, the great movement of today, the world power of tomorrow," shrieked Dupchinsky. "O, you should have seen the fishy-eyed dead king—it was beautiful. You should have seen the rich scatter and run against the bayonets of the just, like pigs driven to the slaughter, squealing and crowding, but doomed. You should see the avenging fires of liberty destroying those who stand in the way of progress and brotherhood. You have been pent up here, where policemen club you into silence, where the rich bribe armies to fight you off from your natural rights, where the capitalist press takes the gold of the robber baron to stem the waves of the conquering seas of revolution.

"You have read garbled falsehoods, propaganda of slave owners, maligning the beneficent name of bolshevism. But I have seen with these eyes the destruction of all these flimsy, transitory barricades. I have with these hands helped to tear down the walls which these rascals had built to save themselves against the onrush of outraged humanity. Their slimy journals no longer barricaded them. Their hired assassins in uniform no longer defended them. Liberty, drunk with the blood of its time-old enemies, made a clean job of it.

"Today in Grodnia there is no man daring enough to claim 'This is mine,' not even his daughter or his wife, not to say inanimate things. Everything is free—free as it was in the Garden of Eden. What you want you take. Man was born with desires, appetites, needs. Placing restrictions between him and those elemental impulses is contrary to the dictates of nature. For centuries men had been able, through selfishness and base means, to keep other men from exercising these preordained, functional wants. At last bolshevism has fought through the artificial barb wire entanglements erected by thieves and hoarders and restored to mankind its primal privileges.

"Can you doubt that such a consummation must win the support of all—all except the minority, which wants to hold its dishonest booty? It needs but leadership and a few more examples such as Grodnia has set to flame the remainder of the globe into a realization that limitless freedom is at hand for the mere reaching. We forerunners have placed it there for you slackers, weak and fearful sisters who dare not climb and hazard a fall, but wait until the fruit hangs low enough, near enough to the earth where your clay feet cling, to be plucked without risking—without even stretching."

If the wavering scum had been timid theretofore, the ringing, alluring drivel which Dupchinsky so forcibly had shot into them had made of them political pirates with courage rising to a pitch where they were ready to cut throats or scuttle merchantmen for the glittering treasures which he had pictured to them.

Another criminal alien had been suffered to come into this decent, too hospitable and forgiving country, to corrupt men and to sow in the consecrated soil of a great republic the seeds of rabid revolution from the weeds of lower European morasses. Twenty anarchists left that foul coffee house in the late hours of that night, reinforced and armored in their hatred of law and constituted organization. Street corner shouters had been given courage and material for disseminating the fatal, false, felonious paradoxes of the vultures of Europe.

That which even these conspiring traitors had scarcely dared to think had been uttered, heard, lauded. Never again would the hearers fear to shout their prophecies and their philosophies. It was as though some brainsick fool had challenged God, and because he was not stricken down upon the spot all the insect-souled cowards who had witnessed had become convinced that there was no God.

Bolshevism fights with every weapon, fair or foul. It is a despotism which yields no quarter, spares no enemy, follows no mandates of Christian warfare. Dupchinsky lied. His dirty doctrines will never prevail. But before that lie can be driven back into the throats of Dupchinsky and his kind, decent society must fight back as mercilessly, if not as brutally, as its hydra-headed foe. The Dupchinskys must not be tolerated to enter peaceful lands to spout their poison.

The United States reeks today with bolshevik missionaries from all the scurvy holes of Europe. It is an insidious, infamous, cancerous growth. It must be rooted out—with the knife—with blood-letting if need be, before it takes too deep a hold upon the clean American body.

But this is a patient, amiable nation. It suffered German activities when Germany was as certain to be its antagonist in a struggle for life as bolshevism is now. It suffers now the spokesmen and agitators of foreign riffraff and native Cains in the same good natured, shrugging spirit.

Dupchinsky was brazen because he knew his history and his geography. As he strode from that festered den he felt, hovering over his impudent head, the shield of "free speech," that guardian of the fomenter as well as the preacher, of the ungrateful guest as well as the contributing citizen. As he breathed deeply of the free air of the United States, and, with a leer of satisfied triumph upon his lips, he started for his comfortable bed, knowing well that the law and power against which he and his fellow Neros had pointed thumbs down would guard him as he slept, guarantee him safe conduct when he awoke, refreshed for another day's plotting and knifing against God and man.

The Red Shawl

SYNOPSIS.

Revolution sweeps Grodnia. The king is killed by a mob and his daughter, Princess Sabina, escapes in the garb of a peasant. An aged priest, Father Pokoff, accompanies her in flight. The two meet an American newspaper correspondent, Bob Hallam, who bribes guards to permit them to cross the border. Naroush Dupchinsky, a bolshevist, is assigned to seek and kill the princess. He takes passage for America on the same boat with Princess Sabina, who is passing as a peasant girl, Sophia Gorov. Struck by the girl's beauty, Dupchinsky makes love to her, much to her distress. Chaos reigns in Grodnia, and Count Jan is sent by leaders of the old régime to find the princess that a marriage between the two may be arranged and the queen put upon her throne. He meets Hallam, en route home, confides his mission, and asks his aid.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

IN AMERICA.

AS Princess Sabina flew through the streets of New York, eying with the curiosity of a bewildered child the strange American ways and folks, she did not suspect that another machine was following. Naroush Dupchinsky, the love sick bolshevist, was hot behind her. He had cabled a friend to meet him at customs. In his car Dupchinsky was trailing Sabina, whose refusals he would not swallow and whom he still confidently planned to make his wife. It seemed extraordinary to him that this girl should make so stubborn a resistance to his suit—in Grodnia such behavior was out of all polite usage. However, he calculated, this maiden was affecting a superior attitude because she had left the habits of home behind her. He would cure her of that.

The taxi drew up at the door of a dwelling that had once been a residence of some front and fashion. Now, left between two murky, monster tenement buildings, it looked shabbier because of what it had been; it was out of date and looked out of place. The priest dismissed the driver and helped Sabina in with her portables. Dupchinsky, in the machine which had halted at the corner when the taxi slowed up, had his friend make note of the address, then sped on to his own lodgings. Sabina presented a note from the chance traveling companion who had referred her to the resident of the old house, and was received and welcomed.

Weary from the journey, she found the comfortable rooms comparatively pleasant. She squandered no sighs on the hard fortunes which had driven her from a royal palace to such a tawdry hospice, but sank upon the creaking bed in vast relief. If this was to be her retreat, her hiding place, it must be taken in good grace; it was far more tolerable than steerage; it might have been worse.

The day passed uneventfully. Toward evening the girl and Father Pokoff ventured a short walk, and returned to dine with reasonable appetite upon the unimposing fare. The hosts were Grodnians, and the dishes were familiar to the royal guest, if not entirely all that might have been desired. The two strangers, fresh from the source of news which so interested all children of Grodnia, were peppered with questions. They in return asked eagerly for news which had been published during their interim upon the water, and the gist of Hallam's cables was epitomized for them. In some papers which had been preserved Sabina read a few of her friend's reports. The tears spurted from her eyes.

"We wept, too," said the kindly woman of the house. "To think that our peaceful, verdant, Christian land should be overturned into a shambles and a battleground of brother against brother. Yet the bolsheviki were justified, don't you think so?"

"Murder is never justified," said Father Pokoff.

"Well, what were the executions under the orders of the king? Were they the less murder because he, in place of these others, willed and commanded them?"

The priest and the princess were silent.

"We are not rabid revolutionists," the hostess went on. "We have been on this side some years, and we have learned what freedom means. It does not mean the privilege of killing and robbing. But even the United States became free by bloodshed. When it grew necessary to free three million Negroes, that was accomplished, also, by bloodshed. The war against Germany, which turned into a world fighting for the freedom of the world, was the bloodiest lesson of all. May it not be that those who are now killing in Grodnia will be sanctified by history as saviors and not as butchers?"

"They might," said the priest, "were they sincere soldiers of liberty. But they are killing in the name of right when they know in their hearts that they are murderers for premeditated wrong. Have they called an election of the people in order to establish a government of the people? No. Those who had the strongest arms and the biggest guns and the organized gang are killing for slavery, with themselves as masters; these pseudo emancipators are slaying those who refuse to submit to peonage far more inhuman than any imposed within this century by kings. Bolshevism may be the symbol of freedom in its most advanced stage. But it is, in actuality, the dirty creed of self-interested bandits, martinets, usurpers of power over the lives and rights of the weaker, impostors who in the guise of patriots slash and seize like beasts. The bolsheviki now in power are the lowest traitors to Grodnia and the most despicable enemies our country has ever suffered."

"And God deliver Grodnia from the rule of such deliverers."

"Are you, then, royalists?"

"We are refugees. We take no active sides. We are humble folks who have been fortunate enough to escape from the reeking ruins of what was once our home. If we lean a little toward circumstances in which we were happy, safe, at peace and unmolested, as against conditions which drove us into strange lands—and lucky we were that we reached them at all—I hope you will forgive us if we are a trifle bitter against those who so suddenly rained panic and turmoil, death and destruction upon a little community which, no matter what its system of government, had been a calm, green spot where mothers raised their children and taught them to worship God.

"For my little ward, here, she is too young and inexperienced to pick among the brambles of politics. But to me, a servant of the Lord, no doubt can long survive as to the merits of a government which desecrates the church. Bolshevism is and must be the twin soul of atheism. They feed upon one another, these two infidel philosophies."

"Forgive me, father," said the woman, crossing herself fervently. "I did not think of it in that light. You, of course, must know. I must have been deceived by the high sounding mob cries of 'Liberty!' like my poor, blinded relatives at home."

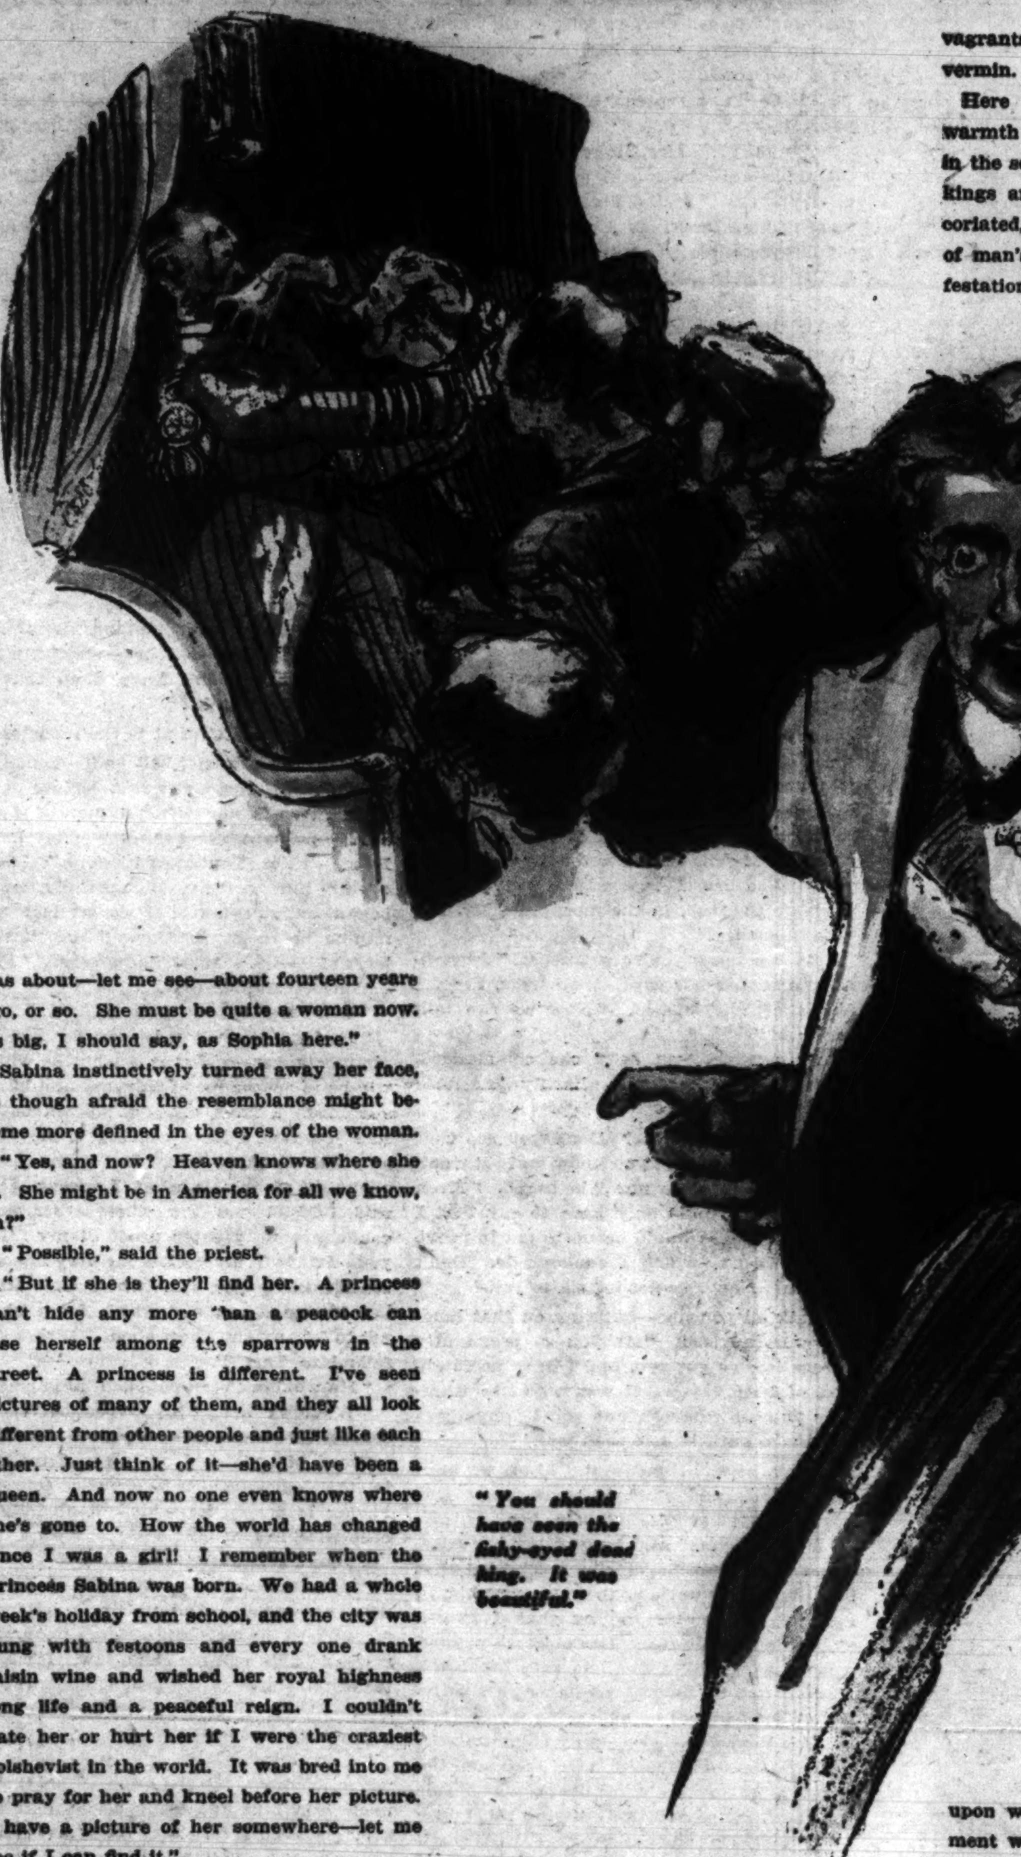
"God have mercy upon them!" whispered the priest.

"Amen," breathed Sabina.

"What do you suppose has become of Sabina, the royal princess?" asked the garrulous landlady.

Sabina straightened with a jolt.

"Too bad about her. I can't find it in my heart to hate her. I saw her once, when she was a little girl, at home. She was riding in the state carriage with the king and queen. It was on Easter Sunday, the day when the royal family always rode through the city after services, blessing babies and giving alms to the poor. The poor little one! She was so pretty, and she looked just like a princess should look—so aristocratic and different from plain people's children. That was about—let me see—about fourteen years ago, or so. She must be quite a woman now. As big, I should say, as Sophia here."



"You should have seen the fishy-eyed dead king. It was beautiful."

Sabina instinctively turned away her face, as though afraid the resemblance might become more defined in the eyes of the woman.

"Yes, and now? Heaven knows where she is. She might be in America for all we know, eh?"

"Possible," said the priest.

"But if she is they'll find her. A princess can't hide any more than a peacock can lose herself among the sparrows in the street. A princess is different. I've seen pictures of many of them, and they all look different from other people and just like each other. Just think of it—she'd have been a queen. And now no one even knows where she's gone to. How the world has changed since I was a girl! I remember when the Princess Sabina was born. We had a whole week's holiday from school, and the city was hung with festoons and every one drank raisin wine and wished her royal highness long life and a peaceful reign. I couldn't hate her or hurt her if I were the craziest bolshevist in the world. It was bred into me to pray for her and kneel before her picture. I have a picture of her somewhere—let me see if I can find it."

The woman left the room. Sabina and the father stared at one another. This was growing uncomfortable—close. The woman returned.

"There," she said, laying upon the table a chromo, tinted and gauded, which had as its basis a portrait of Sabina at the age of 10. "Isn't she royal? My! Don't you think she's beautiful?"

Sabina smiled.

"Now, ordinary children don't look like that. I had a daughter just about her age. She isn't here now—she's married to a grocer in Yonkers. I believe in early marriages. I was married when I was 14. No, I'd know Princess Sabina anywhere—pick her out of a crowd. Did you ever see her?"

The priest nodded that he had.

"You?" she asked of Sabina.

The princess shook her head.

"The dear God watch over her, wherever she may be, the poor orphan!" sighed the good woman.

"You are a true Christian," approved the priest.

Not a mile away, in a coffee house beneath a rickety rookery on one of the avenues made dark by the elevated railroad structure, sat Naroush Dupchinsky, the bolshevik agent. Though he had let no one into the grave secret behind his presence in America, his standing as an anarchist was well known to the little circle of Grodnians and other Slavs who greeted him with salvos, and who guzzled down the blood with which his narration of the big events at home was gravied.

It was a smelly dive of the kind where aliens foregather and gesticulatingly argue the political convolutions of their native lands. Many of them are exiles who put an ocean between official wrath and their own sweet bodies. Others are malcontents who, having deserted one country and bolted into another, refuse to become citizens and supporters of the flag which wraps them in security, but remain ever in heart and spirit partisans of the domain which has disowned them after maltreating them. Across the brown stained boards of such malodorous lagers international strategies are propounded, imaginary armies are decimated, vexing problems of sociology and integral ethics are tried and judged by the unkempt

LOVEY'S BOOTS By Robert Lee

There Was a Fascinating Charm in Them for an Elderly Bachelor.

ONE evening I was sitting in my bachelorish apartment applying the old soup spoon with rather more than my usual avidity when in bounced Philip Hyde all out of breath and with a peculiar gleam in his eye.

"Luculius," said he, "I am the happiest man in the world. I have seen her. I shall pursue her the world over. She must be mine."

"Just because you are overcome," said I, fixing him with a cool and penetrating eye, "suggests to me no reason why you should project soup all over my person. I have no doubt you are the happiest man in the world. I can readily believe you have seen something. Pursue her if you will, but I trust you do not fetch her a whack on the shoulder when you catch her. If you will pardon me I will try another spoon of soup."

"You must sing and dance with me," said Philip Hyde, and he suited the action to the word by capering about the apartment in a most reprehensible fashion.

"Is this," I said, "is this any way for an elderly bachelor to be comporting himself about a respectable apartment? Do you fancy that the neighbors will relish the idea of your acting like a hare brained Romeo at your time of life?"

"You don't understand me at all," he said, repeating the ancient formula with as much zest as if he had just invented it. "She must be wonderful."

"Must be!" said I. "Haven't you seen her? Are you going silly over something you haven't seen?"

"I saw her boots," he cried.

"Her boots?"

"Her boots," he said. "Her dainty, trim, angelic boots. I shall never give up until I have found her."

"Yesterday," said I, "I walked four blocks behind the daintiest footwear I have ever seen. Presently I came abreast of her and saw her face."

"An angel, eh?" said Philip eagerly.

"At least 65 years old," said I.

"She was wearing her daughter's boots," said Philip, "which is nothing at all to worry about. She was a beauty once, I'll warrant. I must write a verse to her boots."

"You'll be sorry when you see her."

"You will, you mean. She's just about the height of an angel, and her hair—well, matches her boots."

"Suede?"

"A delicious tan. I saw her downtown. I walked behind her for blocks. She wore a veil. But I shall know her."

Hyde continued his peacock struttings, which fetched him near the front window. Suddenly he gasped and seized the window drape with a violent hand.

"I warned you against overexcitement," said I. "Your age won't permit it. And don't faint on the drapes. They cost a great deal of money."

"I am not fainting," said he. "I am thrilled. Here, quick! It is the girl of the boots!"

Without any display of interest, but yet with a measure of alacrity, I gained his side at the window. A young woman was tripping along the walk. And she turned in at the door to our apartment.

"Lovey," said I.

"Lovely, you mean," said he.

"Lovey," said I firmly and with a yawn. "It is a nickname. She is called Lovey. Her last name is Lanston. She is the daughter of the persons who live on the floor above. I believe they are trying to marry her to some one of consequence."

"And am I of no consequence?" demanded Hyde.

"Youth will be served," said I. "Young men in dapper clothing and full heads of hair come hanging about her father's doorstep. She seems very desirable."

"Seems?" said Hyde, straightening his coat and adjusting his cravat and also running his hand lightly over his spare locks. He sniffed the air imperiously.

I saw that my evening was going to be spoiled. I had intended to devote myself to a perusal of the Odyssey, from which I am wont to take mental nourishment from time to time, but I foresaw I was doomed to listen to endless prattlings of my fellow bachelor. Our tastes are not similar. Hyde is accustomed to going about among the city, while I long for the seclusion of our apartment. In his going about he had entirely overlooked the precious things in our own vicinity until he chanced to stumble into the wake of Miss Lanston, and now he beheld her coming in at our own entrance. I knew he would never leave the apartment again and I felt that he probably would end up in some ridiculous adventure such as emulating the Shakespearean person who negotiated his lady's balcony, even if he had to do it on the trellis of vines. I feared this, inasmuch as a portly and dignified person ascending a morning glory vine is no worthy spectacle.

The next evening Philip came home again. I might have known it, and I half expected it. This was something rare. He almost always dined out and remained out for most of the night. But he came home. He was in the same exaggerated high spirits.

"Congratulate me, Luculius," said he in a foolish tone in no wise fitted to his time of life.

"Has a guardian been appointed for you?" I asked mincingly, a method I often employ in avoiding undue familiarity.

"I have met her father," said he. "He's a fine old gentleman—and he likes me."

"I hope," said I, "I hope you didn't commit yourself to any unnecessary asininity."

"Be quite reassured," said Philip. "It was by chance. I happened to meet him at a luncheon. I paid for his luncheon and he told me a funny story."

"And although you had heard it," said I dryly, "you laughed."

"He has a very droll way of telling stories," said my poor, deluded friend.

"And he asked you about the extent of your wealth?"

"He showed a very kindly interest in my poor affairs, but I assure you——"

"You needn't," said I. "He is trying to sell you the girl. It is not the way of life. Lovey—Miss Lanston—has a right to follow the dictates of her heart in such things."

"But I haven't had a chance to——"

"You would be taken with a rheumatic twinge in the middle of your proposal," said I. "No girl wants to be wooed by an elderly person with the gout."

"I? Elderly?" said Philip. "I admit to some years of discretion, but——"

"On boots," I retorted, "but not women."

Philip was incensed at this, as I could see. He strolled to the front of the apartment. It was evening—summer evening. There was the listless quiet of July in the air and the first dusk was falling. Philip stood in our window glancing up and down the street. Then his eye was suddenly held by something above him. I watched him narrowly lest he bravely attempt the ascent of the morning glory vines as I had feared.

"Lovey," I heard him murmur.

"Please don't make an ass of yourself," I begged.

His only reply was to beckon me. I approached, with no interest whatsoever, but merely approached. Philip Hyde pointed to the windows of the Lanston sun parlor just above us. In the window sill, one over the other in a posture of exquisite ease and comfort, were a pair of neat tan boots. We could not see Miss Lanston for she evidently reclined in a wicker chair reading. But her artistic boots alone, perched in the low window sill, proclaimed her presence.

It seemed to me that both Philip and I were engaged in a very graceless employment, but I could not refrain from agreeing with him that the boots were exceptionally turned and no doubt the last word in the cobbler's art. And yet I suppose I might have found equally romantic footwear in any boot shop. I said this to Philip.

"There are dozens of display windows downtown," I said; "why don't you spend an evening comforting your esthetic soul bobbing from window to window, gazing at the niftiest things in shoes?"

"That," said he, fetching me a tremendous clap on the shoulder and laughing immoderately, "is precisely what I am doing—gazing at the niftiest thing in shoes."

I detest puns and plays upon words. It marks a poor mental state. And yet I agreed with him. Lovey Lanston was a very delicious thing. But there was another and a more disastrous result of Philip's punning; it aroused the figure in the window above; she had heard his burst of laughter; she perceived Philip standing in our front window staring wide eyed at her feet—at her boots so roguishly embellishing the sill; she shrieked a very audible shriek, withdrew her booted feet and swung a drape in front of the window. The curtain was down. Lovey was very angry. Philip colored very profusely.

"There," said I, "you have done it."

"I thought you weren't interested," said he.

"Nor was I," I retorted. "I didn't mean that you afflicted me by causing the withdrawal of those prett—those shoes. I mean that you have annoyed Lovey."

At this point the telephone rang. I was glad of the opportunity to go away. I left Philip blushing furiously and deeply embarrassed. The telephone was for Philip, so I called him and repaired to my own room.

He must have talked for only a short time, for he presently came running, all agog again.

"Luculius," said he, "I'm in the greatest luck!"

"Don't tell me you have got your senses back so soon," said I. "One doesn't recover so readily from aphasia."

"Mr. Lanston," said he, "it was Mr. Lanston calling."

"And did he rebuke you for your boorishness?"

"He has invited us up—for the evening," said Philip, in the height of excitement.

There was nothing to do. I could not escape. Mr. Lanston would be irreparably offended if I did not come up and I saw I was in for an evening of tiddle-de-winks or something equally thrilling. So we went, Philip tripping lightly and smiling all over the place, and I beset with a premonition that all was not right.

The Lanstons were charming people. I had seen them come and go but never met them. Mrs. Lanston was slightly hard of hearing as I discovered, wherefore she sat by and made needlework while her husband and Lovey talked with Philip and I. Philip was transported. He was idiotic. He prattled and took the deepest interest in things that would have bored a schoolboy. Lovey was very gentle and very polite. I should hate to have a very beautiful girl be very polite to me. She was beautiful. I am only poorly skilled of words and so I can only refer you to the poets who extract from their pure souls the gold that lies therein and spin from it a fabric of transcendent charm—a fabric of words so rich that even beauty pales before it. The richest fabric of words could not do justice to her fine face, her chin, her eyes, her hair, her hands and—well, we sat there talking.

Presently Philip and Lovey withdrew to the next room. Of course he had asked her to play. So she did, and gentle, polite tunes they were. I should hate to have a very beautiful girl play polite tunes for me. I would rather have vicarious ones. There is more agul in them—more interest. Philip had aroused nothing more than politeness.

Philip didn't even blush for the peeping he had been caught at doing. He was shamelessly happy. Mr. Lanston shot a covert glance at Mrs. Lanston and Mrs. Lanston caught it. They are very estimable people, the Lanstons, and I do not blame them for seeking a good match for their daughter.

"I am glad to see Lovey emerging upon older things," said her father.

"Yes," said I, "she is." He looked at me a bit sharply. But Philip ought to have known better.

"Girls will be girls in their extreme youth," said he, "but of course there comes a time when parents must suppress their heartaches and think only of the growing generation."

"I believe you are quite right," said I. "I should guard her very jealously were I in your place."

He smiled benignly, and so of course I knew he didn't understand me. "Would you believe," said he, leaning over and tapping me on the knee (I detest to be tapped on the knee)—"would you believe," he repeated, "that the young cub on the first floor has had the infinite assurance to pay court to our daughter?"

"You amaze me," said I aloud. To myself I said: "I shall hope for the youth as against Philip." Then aloud I continued: "Do you mean the young person called Stavers?"

"Stavers," said he, "is correct. His name is Johnny Stavers. Of all the unutterable nerve. He hasn't a thing in the world."

"I believe that all he does is work for a living," said I, in fine scorn.

"And for a very moderate wage," said Mr. Lanston.

"But then, of course, he may advance," said I.

"My daughter already is advanced," said he. And I admitted he was right. But I did not agree with him altogether about young Johnny Stavers. I had often remarked this young man. He was a robust, full blooded person and given to whistling. I do not fancy whistling personally. It is an expression of rudeness. But I thought best not to cross Mr. Lanston, so I let him have his way. He was quite taken with Philip and of course I could not appear in the position of interfering with my friend's romance. After a most delightfully tedious evening we came away. Philip sighed all the way downstairs and sat sighing for hours after.

The next day we had the misfortune to get a request from Simms for a fortnight's holiday. There was no way out of it, so Simms went, leaving us to do our own housework. We managed very simply. We didn't do any. I kept closely to the library and I was contented to discover that Philip kept very assiduously to the front of the house. On the second evening I looked in on Philip to see him gazing fixedly but smilingly and rapturously upon the Lanston's sun parlor window. I made a point of going in for some trifles so I might have a view of that same window. Behold my astonishment to perceive that disposed upon that same window sill were the exquisitely booted feet of the situation, but his judgment warned him that this would be worse than folly in that house. So, not being a ready liar, he compromised on a half truth.

"I? O—I'm a representative of a morning paper."

"O—really?" Her lip curled in a disdainful smile and the mocking gleam returned to her eyes. "And did you find what you were looking for in my uncle's office?"

"I have already explained to you," said Bobby, gently, although he colored at her tone, "that I went to Mr. Parker's office under the impression that it was the bedroom of my friend Jack Reynolds, and that when I learned otherwise I left it."

"So you have. And I have intimated to you that I do not find that explanation convincing—Mr. Robert Farquhar."

"Good Lord!" said Bobby. "You know me?"

"I do."

"Why in the name of heaven didn't you say so in the first place?" he demanded. "We've wasted a lot of time!"

"Why didn't you say so? I gave you the opportunity."

"Then you've known all along?"

"Why do you think I permitted you to enter the house? Why do you think I stood there in the window and watched you trying to unlock my uncle's door with your badly made key? Why do you think I let you go to his office, stay as long as you liked, and come out of your own accord before I stopped you? Because I recognized you as you came up the walk in the moonlight, Mr. Private Secretary!"

"By the Lord, you've got nerve!" fervently commented her captive; whereat, for the first time, she flushed. "Now we can talk business!"

"Stay where you are," she commanded, raising her revolver as he hastily descended a step or two.

"But you've got me! Don't you see that you've got me—since you know me? It won't help me to run away now," he urged. "Even if I did you would only have to say that I was here and it would be up to me to prove that I wasn't—which I couldn't do. Don't you see? Now I've got to talk to you."

"Talk all you like—but stay on that landing," she advised. "As you so pregnantly phrase it, I've got you, and I have no intention of letting you get away, to use whatever you may have about you belonging to my uncle, until he has seen you."

"Look here. I mean it. Look at me." She looked, and Bobby's clear gray eyes never wavered or faltered under her scrutiny. "I swear to you," said he, holding her gaze, "that I have nothing in my possession that belongs to your uncle or that concerns him in any way. I swear to you that I looked at nothing in his office except some printed books, and I looked at them only because I was startled by finding his name on the flyleaf of one I picked up supposing it to belong to Jack Reynolds. I solemnly swear to you, so help me God, that I have told you the whole and absolute truth both about this and about my reasons for entering this house as I did. Do you believe me?" Bobby's eyes were deep wells of truth, his lips were clean and honest and his voice was vibrant with sincerity. She looked at him and wavered.

"And just what are you going to say to my uncle when he comes?"

For a moment Farquhar hesitated, wishing to spare her, and then he decided to tell her and put her to the test. Therein lay his only hope now, and time was perilously short.

"I'm going to tell him that two of his men have deserted him and advise him to get into line himself before he loses what little power he has left," he said.

"What do you mean?"

"A bill has been introduced into the legislature making the patrons of a gambling house equally guilty with the keeper."

"Yes, I know. Well?"

"You know of that measure?"

"Yes."

"And approve of it?"

"Of course. Why not?"

"I take it your uncle doesn't discuss these things with you."

"Why?"

"Does he?"

"No. He says a woman shouldn't try to understand politics—but I can't help it. Things interest me."

"Precisely. Now, the Henderson bill—that's the one about the gambling houses—is coming up tomorrow, and I have today received authentic information that two of your uncle's men, Con Claffin and Jerry Kincaid, members of the legislature, are going to vote in favor of it."

"Well, what of it?" she queried. He was watching her closely, but could detect nothing of defiance or bravado in her straight glance.

"It's flat insubordination that's all."

"You mean—you mean that Uncle Tom—How dare you say such a thing about him. You!"

"I'm sorry," he said, quietly, "but it's true. He is opposing that bill with all his remaining strength, and until today he had us beaten, but the defection of these two men will throw the balance against him."

"What do you think he'll do?" she asked.

"The least he will do will be to spread the story broadcast in tomorrow's papers."

"Well? You can then spread yours."

"Mine. My story of how and why I entered this house? Who'd believe it—then?"

"Evidently you expect me to."

"Now—yes! You saw me come in. You know the time I spent fiddling with that fool key and lighting matches—why, can't you see that I wouldn't have done that if I hadn't been straight?"

"Very well. Tell that to the reporters."

"But they wouldn't believe it—tomorrow—as defense. Nobody would believe it who hadn't seen it, nor even the men of my own party—perhaps not even the chief himself. But it's true. You know it's true." She was eyeing him gravely, thoughtfully, and he began to hope that he was at last undermining her determination. "And that's the least of it—the scandal," he pressed. "Parker will never stop at that."

"What else do you think he'll do?"

"Perhaps the worst he can do, under the circumstances—and that is what he will do—will be to accuse me of thievery and have me searched. I have taken a solemn oath before you that I have nothing in my possession belonging to him. But I have in my pocket—and this is what I meant when I said I'd tell you the whole truth, and I could give no greater proof of my faith in you—I have in my pocket one very important confidential paper, with which Gov. Rhodes has intrusted me, and which I am pledged not to let any one know about. If that paper falls into Tom Parker's hands——"

"He wouldn't read confidential papers!"

"Wouldn't he! This paper is the governor's veto message—his signed veto of the railroad bill, which I am pledged to deliver to the legislature before noon tomorrow. Parker is deeply interested, financially and otherwise, in that bill."

"I don't believe it!"

"Nevertheless he is. It's the whole truth now, remember. And unless I deliver the message to the legislature before noon tomorrow—that bill will become a law. It's a matter of the state—of the people, don't you see? And he has only to detain me here with that paper a few hours——"

"I understand that you are basing this whole argument on the supposition that my uncle is a base and dishonorable man," she said, "which I refuse to believe. Listen!" Through the quiet, suburban night sounded the distant tap of footsteps on cement walks. "There he comes. Now we'll see."

"But you're giving me no chance," he protested. "Be fair! I claim a fighting chance."

"Well, what do you want?" she asked, and at the words Bobby vaulted over the stair rail and dropped lightly near her.

"No, no!" he cried, as she raised her revolver. "Don't be foolish! I couldn't get away now if I tried. But if I can prove to you that he is fighting this Henderson bill—if I can prove to you that he's determined to beat it—will you then believe that he'd read my papers if he got the chance? Will you?"

"Y-yes; but you can't——"

"Sh! Your uncle himself owns one of the biggest gambling places in the city."

"That's a lie!"

"Listen! That's one reason why he's so keen about this bill. Another is that he's in the pay of the gamblers' association. Now, you tell him that a man came to see him in a great hurry tonight and left a message that Con and Jerry—that's Claffin and Kincaid, you know—that Con and Jerry have slumped and the deal tomorrow is a dead one. Can you remember that? Say it!"

"Con and Jerry have slumped, and the deal tomorrow is a dead one," she repeated, impelled by his insistence.

"That's right. And it's true. You tell him that, and I'll hide somewhere until——"

"And escape? No, you won't!" she retorted.

"No, no! I won't even try to escape! Isn't there some place I can't get out of? Isn't there a closet?"

"There's a coat closet."

"Window in it?"

"No."

"Well, there you are! Where is it?" He hurried after her to the back of a large square foyer, talking in a rapid whisper. Already Parker's approach was distinctly audible. "Now, if you decide that he is not opposed to the Henderson bill, you may give me up. But if he shows that he is fighting it, you'll believe me about the other things, too, and help me get away."

"No, I will not!" she cried, under her breath. "I will not set a trap for him!"

To this he made no reply, having planted his last barb, but he dug his nails into his palms and wondered. Which would she do? She was honest. He believed that. But she was a woman, and her heart and all her instincts of personal as well as of family loyalty were involved. He heard Parker fumbling at the door, then the fall of the chain, followed by the heavy voice of the big boss.

"Hullo, Joan! What's the matter? Anything wrong?" Her low reply did not reach him, but he heard Parker ask: "Then why have you got all the lights going on a hot night and the door bolted and chained? Afraid! Why, you're not alone in the house, are you? Aren't some of the maids here? O, just lonely, eh?" The man laughed indulgently. "Foolish little girl! Been having bad dreams?"

"Yes, I have," said Joan, clearly. "I've been having awful dreams lately, Uncle Tom. I—I have been afraid!"

"Humph! Well, there are others. I've had a nightmare or two myself, girlie. Let's forget 'em. Let's go up to the office and have a cool drink and a smoke and a nice cozy chat before we go to bed—shall we?"

"Why not here?"

"Here! In the hall?" He laughed again. "You are rattled, aren't you? Hold on a minute, until I hang up my hat and get some bottles out of the ice box, and we'll go up together."

He stepped toward the coat closet, and behind the closed door Bobby braced himself for a spring, determined not to be captured without a fight and believing all other hope to be lost. It seemed to him that Parker's hand must be on the door, when Joan's voice rang out sharply:

"Uncle Tom!"

"Yes? What's the matter, girlie?" Genuine concern colored the tone, and the footsteps receded again. "Are you ill?"

"No—no, of course I'm not ill—only nervous." She achieved a little laugh. "Uncle Tom, there was—a man here."

"A man? What man? Did he frighten you?"

"Yes—that is—no. He asked if you were at home."

"Ned Keene, I guess. Didn't he leave any message?"

"Y-yes. He said to tell you— O, I don't believe it matters!"

"Go on, Joan; what did he say?"

"Uncle Tom, did anybody named Reynolds ever live in this house?"

"What the deuce has that to do with it? Did he ask for John Reynolds?"

"Not—no, it has nothing to do with it. I just want to know. Did a Reynolds—Judge Reynolds—ever live here?"

"Yes. He built the house. Sold it about six years ago."

"O!"

"Why? What's the matter?"

"Nothing. I—I just wish he hadn't."

"Hadn't what? Joan, child, what's the matter with you? Have you a fever?"

"No—no, I'm all right."

"Then give me that message—straight, if you can. What did Ned say?"

"He said—the man said—to tell you that Con and Jerry—Uncle Tom, who are Con and Jerry?"

"Some political friends of mine. What about 'em?"

"He said to tell you they had—slumped."

"What?" roared the Boss.

"And that the deal tomorrow was—was a dead one," she finished, faintly

"The devil he did! When was this? What time?"

"O-oh, Uncle Tom!"

"What time? Quick!"

"About—half past 11, I think. O!" It was a catch of the breath rather than an exclamation. "Is it really—important?"

"Important! It's about the last straw, that's what it is! But I'll stop it," savagely, through set teeth, "or break somebody! I've just time to catch the twelve-three."

"Where are you going?"

"Back to town—and on to Hades, if necessary, to fix this thing! They think I'm down and out, do they? We'll, I'll show 'em! I won't be back tonight. 'By." There was a sound of hurrying footsteps, the door slammed, and silence followed.

After a moment Bobby softly opened the door of the closet and peered out. The lights had been extinguished. He stepped out into the hall, and found only darkness and silence. Although the way now lay open, he still lingered, not wishing to go without seeing Joan Herrick again, but uncertain as to where she was or how to reach her. For a long time he stood in absolute silence, waiting, hoping she would come back for a final word with him. Then a shuddering sob from the moonlit drawing room solved his doubt, and he went quietly to where she lay prone, face down, across a divan.

"Bless you!" he said brokenly. "O, bless you!" The sobs ceased, but she gave no other acknowledgment of his presence. He knelt beside her, longing, yet not daring to touch her hand. "I can't thank you ever, but won't you let me try?"

"Go away," she whispered.

"I know," he said. "You must hate me. You have saved—O, it isn't just that you have saved me, now, at the moment, but you have saved the chief. You have greatly served the people and saved to them their faith in him. You have saved the whole thing. It sounds trite and cheap to say that I shall always thank you—and bless you. But I shall."

"O, will you go!" she gasped.

"Yes, at once. But first I want you to know that I realize—fully—what this has cost you."

"You don't! You can't!" The restraint in which she held herself broke, and she sprang up and went, sobbing, to the window, whither he presently followed her. "You can't know! He was all I had. My own people died years ago. He has always, always taken care of me, and now you have taken away—my faith in him. I have betrayed him, and he was—all I had!"

"I know," said Bobby, his voice deep and tender and broken by emotion. "I wish—I have wished all along—that I could spare you that. But I couldn't."

"O, isn't anything real?" she cried. "Isn't anybody sincere and simple and honest?"

"Yes; you are," said Bobby. "And big and brave and strong and fine. And there are men in the world who are as honest and as big. Some day you'll meet one of them, and then you'll be more than ever glad that you did the right thing tonight, no matter how it hurt you or him or anybody."

"You don't understand," she said. "I've lost my faith in him, and he was all I had. There's no faith left in me."

"You believed me," ventured Bobby softly. "I told you the truth, and you believed me."

"It was the truth?" searchingly. "This has not been for nothing?"

"It was the absolute truth. Do you believe that? Do you?"

"Yes," she whispered, at last, and turned away her face.

"Thank God!" After a moment's hesitation he took her hand in his warm, firm grasp and kissed it. "Will you let me see you again some day?"

"No." She shook her head. "You must never come here again."

"You can't forgive me?"

"No, no! You were right. But because you were right, for your own sake——" She broke off with a negative gesture.

"There's nothing of that sort between you and me that can't be bridged," he asserted.

"I am his niece—in effect, his daughter," she cried, "and you are—what you are. What can ever bridge that?"

"The truth," said Bobby, simply. "Time and the truth. May I try—some day?"

It was enough for him that she did not forbid him. Once more he kissed her hand before he released it, and quietly left the room and the house. When he had descended the steps he took off his hat and stood for a moment looking up at the motionless figure in the window. Then he turned, his head still bared, and walked quickly out to the bright, empty street.

beautiful Lovey. Philip did not so much as move nor change that ecstatic and entranced expression of his. I tiptoed out of the room. It was hopeless.

A little later I felt the need for coffee. I am only indifferently successful in making coffee, but I can manage after a fashion, so I went pottering about the kitchen. I was about to switch on the kitchen light when I heard a low whistle. Was this the signal of prowlers? thought I. I went to the window and in the deepening dusk heard a responsive whistle. Then I heard steps on the back stairs of the building. The next moment I saw the head of Johnny Stavers project above the porch level and then I saw the daintily shod feet of Miss Lanston coming down the steps from the flat above.

They met on our back porch. And there was no politeness in the manner of her greeting. There was a good deal of hurried whispering and agitated planning. I managed to take a position where I could observe but remain unseen. Though the dusk was falling I could see by Lovey's flashing eyes that something disturbed her, for she frequently indicated our apartment in one of her impatient gestures. I crept closer.

"Father wants me to marry that old thing in there," I could hear her saying.

"Who?" came from Johnny Stavers, young and eager and full of action.

"He's a funny, middle aged bachelor," said Lovey, "and he's fat. And he has money, father says."

"Huh?" said Johnny, "money? O, gee, I suppose that crowds me out. I wanted to tell you that I got a raise today and the boss says I can be head of the department in six months. I thought you'd be glad."

Now their voices fell so low I could not hear. I walked softly out of the kitchen. I believed I didn't want any coffee. I did not report to Philip that Romeo and Juliet were planning an insurrection on his very own balcony. I entered the front of the apartment whistling, though I abhor any intemperate outburst. Philip Hyde still sat in the same chair, the same fixed expression of bliss on his face and still gazing transcendently at the Lanston's sun parlor window. Now I had but just that moment left the back porch; I went in again on some minor pretext and glanced along Philip's line of vision. There in the window, just as before, reposing delightfully, were the boots of Lovey Lanston. What an amazingly rapid journey she made from the sun parlor to the back porch and to the sun parlor again, I thought.

The next night and the next it was the same. I found Philip gazing at the window sill and its tenants of dainty feet. Miss Lanston was not to be seen because, I reflected, she must be sitting back in a rocking chair reading. Also I decided she must have forgotten her shock of the first evening when she surprised Philip looking at her. And yet when I went to the kitchen, for no reason whatever, I always was astonished to find Lovey and Johnny Stavers in close conversation.

On the third night I sat ruminating over this strange twist of events when there came a tremendous clatter at our front door. Both Philip and I hastened to open it. The caller was Mr. Lanston in a very fever of excitement.

"Quick!" he cried. "Quick! I fear it is too late."

"An accident?" said I, anxiously.

"Yes. No," he cried again. "It's terrible. O, it's infamous. Come with me at once."

"What is it?" asked Philip, quite helplessly and trying to compose his sparse hairs. "Do go with him, Lucullus, and if you want me I'll be here waiting." And Philip went back to his chair by the window.

Mr. Lanston was distracted. He drew me after him up the stairs. Mrs. Lanston also was distracted. She was going from room to room wringing her hands and giving vent to the most baleful of sounds. Mr. Lanston snatched up a bit of paper and thrust it into my hands. I read it, all the while Lanston dancing about me in agitation.

"Dear folks," said the note he handed me, "when you find this Johnny and I will be married. I do not like fat men without any hair. Lovey."

"O!" said Mr. Lanston, "O! O!"

"I shall tell Philip," said I. And I scampered back down the stairs and went in to Philip. He was not in the least agitated. Instead he sat in his former posture of imbecile happiness gazing up at the window. I waved the bit of paper before his face.

"Read this," I cried.

"Pardon me one moment," said Philip. "Let me read this first. I have made a little verse about something."

In spite of my agitation, he read:

"Lovey's tripping, dainty boots
Fascinate me wholly.
Swains may come and press their suits
But I adore her solely."

He paused. "A droll conceit, eh?" he said. "Do you get me? Boots and solely? Eh?"

"My genial idiot," said I. "Lovey has eloped with the whistling young man on the floor below."

He only smiled more effulgently. "Please don't try to reform me," he said. "I am quite lost. Please look up in the window of the sun parlor and tell me what you see there. Lovey eloped, indeed! You are a rare jester."

I stepped forward and glanced up. My eyes almost popped out. For there, though her form was apparently hidden by the window drapes, was Lovey, her trim, immaculate boots perched as before, on the edge of the window.

"Come," I exclaimed, "we must tell Mr. Lanston."

I pulled Philip from his chair and together we ran up the stairs. The Lanstons' door was still open and the parents of Lovey sat quite crestfallen just within. I dragged Philip straight through to the sun parlor. We jerked open the door to surprise Miss Lanston. She was not there.

But a pair of her boots, placed with the most realistic and lifelike design, were perched on the window sill just as if their owner occupied them and was sitting in a chair just behind. I could almost see Lovey's mocking smile.

"Decoyed," said Philip.

"Try the shop windows," said I.

THE CONTEST MYSTERY by Oney Fred Sweet

Had the Judges Haggled in Secret Session This Night They Would Have Been Mobbed.

BROTHERLY love is a beautiful thing, but somehow human nature seems to find factions and feuds and fights more interesting. Folks seem to love to "take sides."

I am reminded of the declamatory contest mystery connected with the Prairie Junction opera house during the season when, in my fifteenth year, I acted as janitor for that palace of entertainment. It appeared that the previous winter Miss Lola Lowe had been given the decision of the judges for the excellence of her elocutionary effort in denouncing the demon rum. The decision had not met with unanimous approval, it being hinted that the judges, during their lengthy debate back of the scenes before making an announcement, had been influenced not so much by Miss Lola's histrionic ability as by the fact that her parent owned the bank and the creamery and held numerous mortgages against houses and lands in the community.

The event was bygone when I came to Prairie Junction, but echoes of it still lingered. A vast majority argued that the judges had been "swayed" when they gave Miss Lowe highest markings for her rendition of "One More Glass, Bartender," and that Effie Dougherty had really far outclassed her with her interpretation of "The Broken Pledge." But it's what you get that counts in this vale of tears, not what you should get. Miss Lowe wore the silver medal pinned on her chest. And her father said she should keep it there.

Of course the old opera house has been turned into a movie these many years, and as to the declamatory contests wherein each recitation dealt with some phase of the drink evil, they are no doubt passé. The glamour surrounding the foaming glass has faded. Even in those old days the local Willie Greens were finding it necessary to sleuth after their "grog." Grog—that was the word used in so many of those temperance recitations.

It had not been my good fortune to attend the annual elocutionary combat as yet. But post-mortems were still being held over the event of the year before, and the wheel of time would eventually bring it to us again. In the meantime, following the departure of Bosaris, the hypnotist, and the Wyndham Comedy company, we had two attractions that winter that still hang clear cut on memory's walls. The one was Montrose's Mammoth Minstrels and the other Edmund Demuth, Shakespearean actor. The minstrels played to a capacity house.

Montrose, when he appeared with silk hat and cane at the head of his fast walking band, looked older and less pink than the poster of him that for weeks in advance had hung in the postoffice window. After a swift walk around the block or two of business section the band formed a circle at the bank corner. There was a pause as the musicians shifted their music, rattled the saliva from their instruments, indifferently looked the crowding townspeople over, and then, slow and dreamy, came "My Old Kentucky Home" with variations.

I'll say that the harmony of the flutes and the cornets and the trombones made those two story buildings on Main street look like skyscrapers, and the music lent a melancholy atmosphere about the courthouse over in the middle of the square. It lifted one out of the commonplace. Those who couldn't pay their way in that night sneaked in.

Montrose was interlocutor in his big "first part," and he had a grandiloquent manner when he introduced his lyric tenor, who sang "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Later the audience thought he was funny in his blackface monologue, but he had found fault with my janitor work during the afternoon and I was disillusioned. While Edmund Demuth, who came some weeks later, was not so popular with the masses, he was so kind and sympathetic off stage that personally I worshiped him far more than I had the flashy Montrose.

Edmund Demuth came to us on a raw day, and you had a feeling when you looked over him and his organization that the territory had figured his stuff as being too deep. He asked me rather sadly concerning the seat sale, and my report was not such as to give him any cheer. Then he asked me if I wouldn't get something from the drug store that he might take for his lungs. Mr. Adger, the druggist, didn't like to stand him off, but then Mr. Adger was just that commercial that a Shakespearean actor didn't look any different to him than anybody else. Mr. Demuth was not young any more, and the members of his small company quarreled with him during their afternoon visit to the opera house. He seemed to be living in ages past and the petty aggravations of the present apparently tried him sorely.

Well, that night it was just as I expected. A few local highbrows came out, but they formed but a handful. The two waitresses from over at the Pioneer house, who had come on "comps," left after the first act. It was one of those nights when I couldn't seem to be able to keep up heat, and Edmund Demuth coughed a good deal amid his lines. But despite the fact that I knew him to be tired and ill, he was wonderful in his part—wonderful.

And then for a spell of several weeks the house was dark. In fact, I didn't trim the kerosene lamps again until the morning preceding the night of the annual declamatory contest. There was romance about that old opera house even in the gray of morning—the initial carved entry, the blue window shades that were drawn tight for the occasional matinée, the front stage curtain with the sunshine showing up its cracks. I whistled as I worked with a broom. I knew that every kitchen chair would be filled that night.

The hour for the program arrived. We tolerated the opening instrumental number at the piano. The majority of us were more or less bored at the earlier recitations flaying the liquor traffic. It was like a bunch of fight fans enduring the preliminaries. We were waiting for the big bout between Miss Lola Lowe and one Effie Dougherty. Miss Lowe's parents occupied what were termed "reserved seats," a row of chairs slightly elevated from the rest, and the banker sat with a pose that was much like that of an emperor of old above the arena. His wife beside him had on her new set of furs.

Mrs. Dougherty sat over near the stove. Ever since the winter before, when Miss Lowe had nosed out her daughter by a scant three points, the widow had been failing, and months previously she had ceased taking in boarders at her home down by the depot. She had had a bad year. Disappointments sour the most cheerful of us. She sat a bit hunched over.

Eight contestants emerged from the wings, bowed stiffly, and monotoned against the curse of strong drink. Most of them had lapses where they forgot their lines and were obliged to be prompted, the prompter speaking in a tone of voice that could be heard clear up to the skylight on the tin roof where the kids from across the tracks sneaked in when the attraction merited the effort. These minor contestants brought pride and pleasure to those who represented their immediate home fires, but the town at large was but mildly interested. The town was waiting.

Finally Miss Lola Lowe appeared. The basting threads had been pulled late that afternoon from the gown she wore, and against the shimmering white of her waist there dazzled the silver medal granted her by the judges' decision the season before. She appeared with laurels already won and with an attitude of self-confidence in her ability to retain those laurels. She did not forget her lines. But, like the eight who had preceded her, she was self-conscious. She was good, but you never lost sight of the fact that it was Lola who was speaking and not the tattered drunkard's wife pleading to the barkeep against selling her husband another drop.

When she had finished there was applause that was especially heavy from the vicinity of the reserved seats. Banker Lowe had the fate of many a townsman in the hollow of his hand. There was applause. Lola was an improvement over what she had been the year before. It looked dark for the Dougherty faction.

Effie did not follow immediately. She waited until the applause for her rival had fully subsided. It was only then that she came forth. And when she opened her lips she was no longer the Widow Dougherty's daughter. She was Joe Morgan, suffering from delirium tremens. You could have heard a pin drop in that old opera house. And then you could hear the sobs that couldn't be suppressed. Her voice rose, it fell at times to nothing more than a whisper. With art she concealed art. She tricked us and kept us from realizing that we were being tricked. We forgot Effie, forgot the contest, forgot everything save that we were living in the soul of Joe Morgan, and when she finished she left us limp.

But with her last words she did not rush from the stage. She did not stalk off into the wings, crudely showing us her profile until she was beyond view. She took a pace or two toward an exit, turned back, and with a bow and a smile became Effie Dougherty again, thanking us in queenly fashion for our kind approval.

How had such magic been wrought? Her bow was a bit of technique that would have done credit to Bernhardt. Nothing accidental about that final bow. She had known how many steps she was going to take before she turned, just how her dress was going to hang when she did turn, just how far she would relax her lips into a smile. And the house—all save one corner over in the reserved seats—went wild. How in the world had she done it?

The judges made quick work of their figure comparing. There was no long haggle this night back of the scenes. Had they attached any suspense and delay to their secret session they would have been mobbed. The silver medal was all but torn from Miss Lola's chest and pinned upon the daughter of Mrs. Dougherty, former boarding house keeper.

A few nights later I was passing Mrs. Dougherty's old boarding house down by the depot. She had announced in the paper that her health had so revived that she was going back into business again. It was shadowy on the sagging porch, but I could make out the widow standing on the steps engaged with somebody in conversation. Then I heard the man's voice.

"I can never pay you for your kindness," he was saying. "I was ill and without funds, deserted by my companions, and ye took me in. It embarrasses me, now that a rest has brought my recovery, to be unable at this moment to offer recompense."

"It is Effie and I who can't thank you enough," the widow replied.

And then I saw him press on to meet the arrival of the incoming train, stray wisps of long hair tossed by the breeze above his turned up coat collar. It was Edmund Demuth just leaving town!

The Mighty Trifle

when Reynolds learned that Bobby must take an early morning train back to the capital, and therefore could not possibly join him at luncheon the next day, he insisted upon his spending the night with him at his home in Glenwood. To Bobby's protest against going to a suburb when he had to make so early a start next morning Reynolds retorted.

"Suburb nothing! Your train stops at Glenwood, man! You'll save twenty-five minutes on your starting time. No, you won't inconvenience anybody," he rapidly continued. "Mother and the girls are still in Europe and dad's in Canada. Business brought me east unexpectedly, and I'm keeping bachelor hall out there, with Annie, our old cook, looking after me. Here's my latch key. I've got to meet my aunt, who's coming in about half past 11, and take her to a hotel, so you'll get there before I do. Go in and make yourself at home, just as you used to. You'll find pajamas and things in my room."

"Same old room?"

"Same old room. If you hunt around you'll probably find another one ready for you somewhere. Annie always keeps one fixed up for my unexpected friends. By the way, you'd better take the latch off the front door when you go in. Annie's a good cook, but she has the disposition of a Tartar, and one thing she won't stand for is being rung up in the wee sma' to let somebody in. Whatever you do, don't wake Annie! Good-by, Bob. See you later."

Something over an hour thereafter the governor's secretary, still without his bag, was on his way to Glenwood, his mind intent, as it had been all day, on the plans and purposes of "the chief."

Curtis Rhodes, the governor, had been elected only after a disrupting struggle in his own party; his first term of office had been much like that of other governors who had steadfastly tried to work the will of the people rather than that of "the organization," and now that he sought reëlection he had to reckon with the unvenomed and reorganized opposition of disappointed and powerful politicians. And him Bobby Farquhar served with the wholehearted and ardent devotion that idealistic youth has ever given to noble leaders, combined with a practical, clear headed ability which the older man was not slow to recognize.

Consequently, when Gov. Rhodes himself had been unexpectedly called away from the capital on Saturday by urgent private business which would detain him several days he had still desired Bobby to spend the following day in the city, as had previously been arranged. In addition the secretary had been intrusted with the governor's veto message in the matter of the railroad bill, then agitating the whole state, with instructions to maintain the strictest secrecy concerning the message and its content lest some one should use the information for his own profit in the stock market.

Thus it was that Farquhar had spent a long, hot, fatiguing day in the city, hard at work for "the chief," as he delighted to call the governor, and thus it was, too, that on no account whatsoever must he fail to take the early morning train to the capital, which would enable him to deliver to the legislature before noon on Monday, the last day when it could be presented, the message that he carried meanwhile in his breast pocket.

The results of the day's work were, on the whole, not entirely disappointing, although Gov. Rhodes' friends had confessed themselves puzzled by the attitude of Tom Parker, "the big boss," who was at once the most formidable and the wiliest of the governor's enemies. More than any other, Parker, as the head of the party organization in that state, had felt the ignominy of defeat when Rhodes was elected; more than any other, he had suffered when the power of bestowing patronage was stripped from him, and in his present grim silence the friends of the administration read a sinister portent. He was known to be in frequent conference with men who had formerly been his aids, yet, although there were many theories, no one of the governor's adherents had been able to learn anything definite concerning Parker's purpose, except that his implacable hatred of Rhodes had intensified from month to month, and that he was undoubtedly plotting night and day to defeat him.

This inability to discover Parker's probable line of attack troubled Farquhar, for the time before the convention was growing short and the big boss' political methods and movements were obscure at best. All the way out to Glenwood he pondered over the situation, and he was still thinking of it when he walked through the quiet, moonlit streets of that fashionable suburb.

Presently he stopped before a large house, set back amid smooth lawns, scrutinized it a moment, glanced at the houses to left and right of it, nodded reminiscently, and turned in toward its entrance. When he and Jack Reynolds were in college together Bobby had often been a guest here, and now, after an absence of several years, he noticed few changes. As he mounted the steps, fumbling the while for the key Jack had given him, he remembered sundry other occasions when he and Jack had approached this selfsame portal, whispering and on tiptoe, long after the house had been closed for the night, and had felt their way through halls beset with pitfall and with snare, and up shrieking stairs, to snatch a scanty sleep before the 7 o'clock call to breakfast upon which the elder Reynolds had insisted.

Soon after graduation Farquhar had gone abroad to continue his university work, and just before his return Jack Reynolds had gone west to live; but now, immediately after their reunion, here was Bobby, again trying to fit a rebellious key into a reluctant lock in the Reynoldses' door.

He chuckled to himself in the darkness, remembering how often he and Jack had threatened to replace that lock with one more indulgent, and he was glad that after all these years even the lock was unchanged. Indeed, it began to appear that time had added to its rigors. Try as he would, he could not make it yield to his pressure. He made vain search through his pockets, on the chance that he was not using the key Jack had given him, although he knew he was. Then he lighted successive matches and by their uncertain light experimented with every possible position and angle of the key. In the end he admitted to himself that Reynolds, in his haste, had given him the wrong one and his enjoyment grew as he reflected that even this situation was not without precedent.

Of course, he could ring the bell, arouse the tartaric Annie, and attempt to explain himself and his presence to her, or he could sit down on the steps and await Jack's arrival, but neither of these methods of procedure fitted in with the memories now crowding Bobby's mind. He chuckled again as he remembered a night when he and Jack had found themselves out without a latchkey and a window that had subsequently saved them from ignominious resort to the doorbell. There still remained the window.

When he found it, it was locked. But the zest of adventure had now entered into Bobby Farquhar, and he determined not to be outwitted by an insensate latchkey. Therefore he stole furtively around the house, careful not to make a sound that could arouse the acrimonious cook, and eventually, from a side veranda, found an open window protected only by a screen which moved at his touch.

Reconnoitering, he decided that his window must be in the dining room, whereupon, grinning gleefully, he proceeded to push up the screen and swing himself over the sill. Very quietly he lowered the screen again, paused a moment to get his bearings, and slipped across the dining room and into the hall, where, in contrast to his memories, a dim light was burning; the stairs, however, creaked as loudly as of yore. When, still smiling widely, he had tiptoed up half their length, he remembered Jack's instructions to take the latch off the door, and as carefully let himself down, step by step, to the floor again.

As he turned he noticed a little movement of the curtains in the doorway leading to the dark drawing room. He stopped for perhaps five seconds, looking fixedly at it, but it was perfectly still again, and deciding that it had been stirred by a little breeze from the open window, he resumed his careful descent, took the latch off the outside door, and again crept upstairs.

Attaining the upper hall, he abandoned the game he had been playing with himself, boldly struck a match, entered the room that he had always known as Jack's, and switched on the lights.

Then for the first time a certain unaccustomedness in his surroundings, dimly felt in the lower hall, impressed itself upon him. He looked about, half unconsciously seeking something familiar and suggestive of earlier days, and with a vague feeling of disappointment that his room was not at all as he remembered it. However, he reflected, the women of one's family are always changing things about and replacing cherished old possessions with new ones unhallowed by any dear association. Then it began to dawn upon him that this was not a bedroom at all, but a sort of study or office, with bookcases and a writing table and a filing cabinet. He stepped to an open door leading to another room, which proved to be a bedroom, and decided that in the years after his departure and before Jack went west his friend had probably been given this additional room as a tribute to his man's estate.

At any rate, however unfamiliar to him, it was a very comfortable and masculine sort of room. A book lying upon the writing table attracted him, and he took it up, wondering why Jack, who was not given to serious reading, should keep Bryce's American Commonwealth on his desk. As he opened the book a name written boldly on the flyleaf caught his attention, and he stood stupidly staring at it. "Thos. L. Parker." Then the truth crashed across his mind. He had entered the house of Tom Parker, the big boss.

Instantly he switched off the lights, holding his breath, and listened with a tensity he and Jack had never even imagined when they were boys. Silence! Cautiously, on tiptoe, he slipped out of the room and looked down to the hall below, which was perfectly dark. The dim light had been extinguished. He hesitated only for the space of a breath, however, and went on, wincing at every creak. He reached the landing, and was about to start on the last descent, hoping he should escape undetected, after all, when lights flashed up all over the lower floor, and he found himself staring down into the defiant face of a young woman, who stood with her back against the hall door, one hand behind her and the fingers of the other still on an electric switch button.

"Well?" said she. "Did you find what you came for?"

"O," stammered Bobby, "I beg your pardon! I'm afraid I've frightened you. I'm not a burglar—honestly, I'm not. But I—I seem to be in the wrong house."

"Really!" The girl eyed him scornfully.

"Yes." He put out one foot to continue his descent of the stairs. "You see, I thought——"

"Don't do that!" she sharply commanded, whipping out the concealed hand, which held a revolver. "Stay where you are."

He laid his hand lightly on the stair rail and leaned against it, mentally estimating his chances of vaulting over and making a run for it. But there was no immediate way of escape. The door, he noticed, was now chained, and was probably bolted as well. Doubtless the windows were still open, but they were all screened, and there were both courage and purpose in the firm lips and steady eyes of this young woman, as well as in the way she handled her revolver. Meanwhile he was saying, with apparent serenity: "I'll stay here, if you like. But if Mr. Parker is at home—by the way, I'm not mistaken about that? This is Mr. Parker's house?"

"It is."

"You see, I'm here by accident, so I wasn't sure."

"O! You fell in, I suppose. How unfortunate!"

"No, I climbed in—under the impression that this was the house of an old friend. But now that I'm here, if Mr. Parker is at home, I'd like to see him." Bobby had decided upon a bold policy. He argued that, if Parker were at home, this girl would not be standing guard alone, and he wished to know whether she expected the immediate return of the head of the house, or whether she had summoned other assistance and how much time he had, in any case, to make his escape.

"Mr. Parker is not at home—at the moment."

"I infer that you expect him—soon?"

"I do."

"Then it's particularly fortunate for me that you are here." Again Bobby's smiling mask and smooth tone gave no hint of the vortex that his mind was.

"I think you'll stay until he comes," she remarked.

"Thank you. By the way, have you any idea how long that will be?" He looked at his watch and found it to be after half past 11. "Because I'm expected at Judge Reynolds' tonight and I mustn't be too late."

In spite of her scorn of him she yielded a grudging smile to his cheerful manner, but in no way relaxed her vigilance or the readiness in which she held her weapon.

"He should be here by ten minutes of 12," she told him, "if he caught the quarter past 7 train."

"Then since you have a little time," he had replied to her last speech, "perhaps you'll permit me to explain to you how I happened to be here at all."

"That would be very interesting." Her tone was still dry.

"First, will you tell me how long it is since Judge Reynolds lived in this house?"

"I don't know who Judge Reynolds is, or that he ever lived here."

"You must be a stranger in Glenwood."

"I have been here only a few months."

"Because everybody who has lived here long knows the Reynoldses. They built this house, and when I last visited them seven years ago they still lived in it."

"Ah?"

"Today, in town, I met Jack Reynolds, who has lived out west for a long time, and he asked me to spend the night with him. I haven't been out here before since Jack and I were in college together, but I suppose he forgot that. So I came to the old house—and evidently they now live elsewhere."

"Evidently."

"That's the reason, of course, why the latchkey Jack gave me didn't fit your door." For the first time a gleam of startled attention replaced the mockery in her face. Bobby saw it and pressed the advantage. "He said the family was away and the cook was a Tartar and not on any account to be awakened; so when I found the latchkey wouldn't work—perhaps you heard me trying to unlock the door?"

"I did."

"Where were you?"

"At the drawing room window—watching you."

"Why didn't you scream?"

"For reasons of my own."

"O!" He studied her for a moment, wondering what those reasons could have been, but immediately resumed his light tale. "Well, of course the key didn't fit, but I thought simply that Jack had given me the wrong one. He was in a desperate hurry. So I went around to a window we used once when we were kids, but it was locked. Then I poked around until I found one that was open and came in—as I supposed, to the Reynolds' house."

"And went directly to my uncle's office," supplied the girl, her face hardening to suspicion again.

"O, then you are Mr. Parker's niece, Miss ——?"

"Miss Herrick."

"Thank you. I went directly to the room that was always Jack's, Miss Herrick, in the old days."

"After carefully taking the latch off the outside door so you could escape quickly if it proved not to be 'Jack's' now," she mentioned. "Such foresight is rather remarkable, isn't it?"

"You forget that I have Jack's key," he reminded her, and again caught that quick response in her face. "He asked me to leave the door open for him." There was the briefest pause, during which he thought he saw a little softening shadow of self-doubt in her eyes. "So that is why I am here."

"It's an ingenious explanation," she granted.

"Does it satisfy you?"

"You will perhaps pardon my not finding it altogether convincing—under the circumstances. However, my uncle may. You can try. By the way, I don't think you have told me who you are?"

For a mad moment Bobby contemplated telling her the truth—the whole truth—and relying upon the sincerity of his personality, and the fair mindedness of which her face seemed an index, to extricate him from the

THE TEENIE WEENIES

TESS PUTS A MONSTER TO ROUT.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

FOR several days the Dunce and the Clown had been very mysterious. They disappeared each afternoon, when their work was done, and nothing was seen of them until supper time. Their hands were smeared with paint and their clothes were usually soiled, so the Teenie Weenies knew that the two little fellows were building something.

"Say, Dunce, why are you and the Clown sneakin' around so mysteriously? Buildin' an air-ship?" asked the Cook one evening as the two Teenie Weenies sat down to the supper table.

"Just have patience and you'll all find out," answered the Dunce, winking at the Clown.

Some of the Teenie Weenies wanted to follow the pair when they started off on their mysterious way next day, but the General asked them not to do it.

"Let them alone," the General told the curious Teenie Weenies. "When they want to tell you the secret they'll let you know soon enough."

A couple of days later the Teenie Weenies all set off on a walk down towards the creek which ran back of the rose bush. The Clown and the Dunce went along, but they had only walked a short distance when they fell behind the rest, whispered a few words to each other, and presently sneaked away. None of the Teenie Weenies noticed their absence, for they were all chatting loudly as they walked along.

Finally the little folks came to the edge of the creek, where they sat down to rest on a soft mossy place beside an old basket.

"I wish the water was warm enough to go in swimmin'," said the Sailor. "I'd like to—" But the Sailor never finished the sentence, for the Lady of Fashion, who was sitting facing the basket, let out a loud scream and jumped to her feet.

The Teenie Weenies all turned and saw a most hideous creature slowly walk around the end of the basket.

"A monster! A monster!" shrieked the Chinaman, and he climbed up the stem of a dandelion, which stood near, as fast as a monkey could have done it.

The frightened Teenie Weenies ran in all directions. The Lady of Fashion could hardly run in her tight skirt, so she hopped over the ground in funny little jumps.

"Oh, mister monster, don't eat me!" shouted Gogo, as he dropped onto his knees. "I'm too fat to run. Please don't eat me."

Tess, the new Teenie Weenie, didn't seem a bit frightened. She stood watching it come towards her without the least sign of fear.

"Well, look who's here," she said, as the monster made straight for her. "You-all better get out of here or I'll bounce a rock off you," and picking up a stone that lay at her feet she threw it at the monster with all her might.

The monster went down in a heap and from out the hairy skin came a familiar voice. "H-h-h-hey! Stop it. W-w-w-what you tryin' to do?" cried the voice, and the next minute the Dunce and the Clown crawled out from the wreck of the monster.

"Jimminie f-f-fishhooks!" exclaimed the Dunce, "were you tryin' to kill me?" and he rubbed a bump on his Teenie Weenie head where the rock had hit him.

"Well, sir," growled the General when the little folks had gathered around the Dunce and the Clown, "what do you mean by dressing up in that way and scaring the lives out of honest people?"

"W-w-w-we thought it would be f-f-fun to fix up this monster and get under it and walk out and scare Tess," answered the Dunce.

"This is what you and the Clown have been so mysterious about for the last week, is it?" asked the General.

"Yes, sir," said the Dunce. "We wanted to have some fun."

"Well, you had your fun," growled the General. "And you can now go home and get into bed without any supper this evening."

"You didn't scare me any," laughed Tess. "I ain't afraid of monsters or toads or ants or grass-hoppers or nothin'."

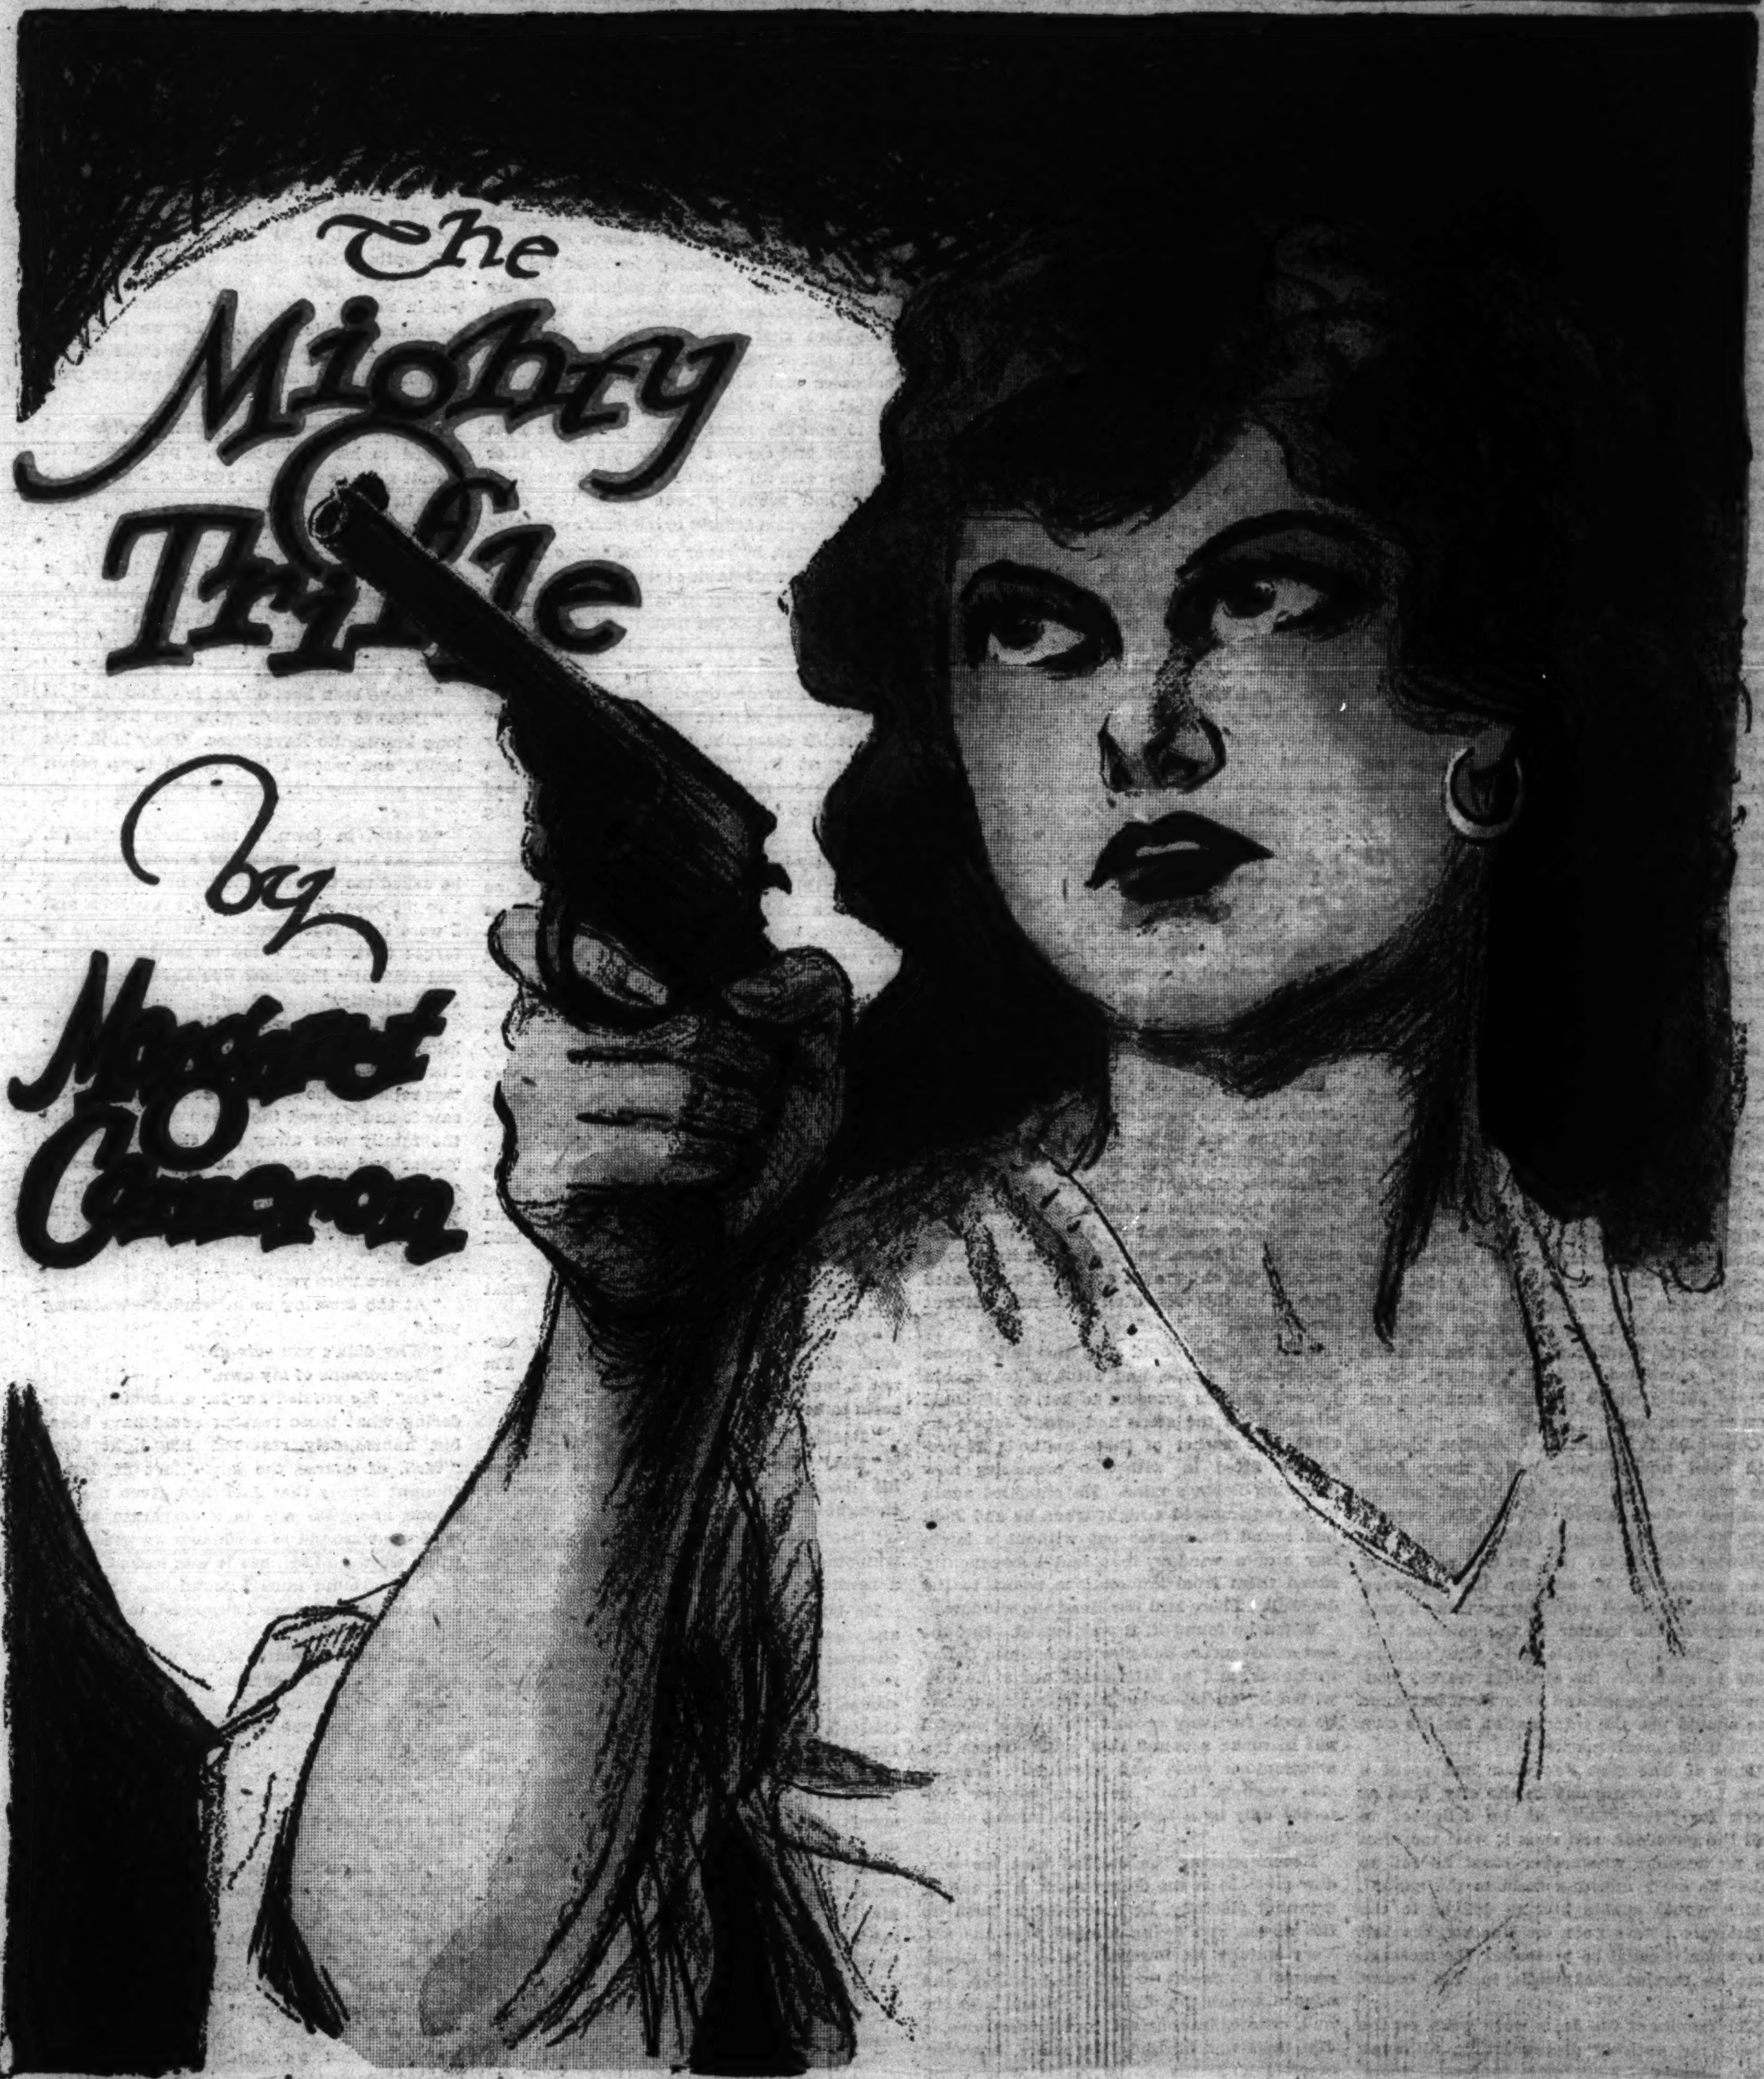
The Mighty Trifle

by Margaret Cameron



It Looked Like Coincidence But It May Have Been Fate.

BOBBY FARQUHAR often wondered afterward why it should have been Reynolds whom he met that night, rather than any one of half a dozen other men who would have extended a similar invitation. "It was just one of those things," he once said to me, "that some people call coincidence, and some people call the working of fate, and in which some other people see 'the hands of providence'; but, whatever you choose to call it, it begins with what looks like a trifle and ends by knocking the most careful plans into pi and changing a fellow's whole life for him."

Bobby, who was the governor's private secretary, had been spending that particular Sunday with certain of his chief confidential friends and advisers in the principal commercial city of the state, conferring about the approaching nominating convention, and, inasmuch as it was desirable that neither reporters nor politicians should know of his presence in town, he had not cared either to register at a hotel or to be seen about the clubs, where he was well known. Consequently, upon arriving in the city that morning, he had sent his bag by messenger to Bruce Hayward's, where he often stayed, together with a note promising to get out to the house himself in time for a chat that night if possible.

Early in the afternoon he was told that the Haywards were out of town, and then he began trying to locate his bag. Eventually he learned that it had been received, apparently by a servant of Hayward's, who must have left the house immediately thereafter, for, although Bobby telephoned out there at intervals through the afternoon and evening, he was unable to get any response.

About 10 o'clock that night he was on his way to his last appointment, when he unexpectedly met Jack Reynolds, an old college friend whom he had not seen in seven or eight years. Both men were in haste, and

By Field Marshal Viscount French, of Ypres

Herewith is presented the first installment of a remarkable serial by Field Marshal French, who was commander in chief in France when the British expeditionary force made its great retreat in 1914 and finally held at the Marne. Marshal French recites here for the first time the blunders which almost spelled disaster for the allies. He takes up the mistakes of the allied generals step by step, severely criticizing several commanding officers, including Smith-Dorrien, Lanrazec, and Lord Kitchener. In a forthcoming installment Marshal French will tell of Lord Kitchener's visit to France in the uniform of a field marshal, a direct affront to Lord French himself. He will give also his version of his removal from the command in France. Throughout, though, he bears witness to the remarkable achievements of the British in the field. His revelations, the more because he is a master of English expression, probably are the most momentous which have yet appeared on the conduct of the war.

FOR years past I had regarded a general war in Europe as an eventual certainty. The experience which I gained during the seven or eight years spent as a member of the committee of imperial defense and my three years' tenure of the office of chief of the general staff, greatly strengthened this conviction. For reasons which it is unnecessary to enter upon, I resigned my position as chief of staff in April, 1914, and from that time I temporarily lost touch with the European situation as it was officially represented and appreciated.

I remember spending a week in June of that year in Paris, and when passing through Dover on my return my old friend Jimmie Watson (Col. Watson, late of the Sixtieth Rifles, A.-D.-C. to the khedive of Egypt) looked into my carriage window and told me of the murder of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his consort. I cannot say that I actually regarded this tragedy as being the prelude which should lead ultimately to a great European convulsion, but in my own mind, and in view of my past experience, it created a feeling of unrest within me and an instinctive foreboding of evil. Then came a few weeks of the calm which heralded the storm—a calm under cover of which Germany was vigorously preparing for "the day."

One afternoon late in July I was the guest at lunch of the German ambassador, Prince Lichnowski. It was a small party, comprising, to the best of my recollection, only Princess Henry of Pless, Lady Cunard, Lord Kitchener, his excellency, and myself. The first idea I got of the storm which was brewing came from a short conversation which I had with the ambassador in a corner of the room after lunch. He was very unhappy and perturbed, and he plainly told me that he feared all Europe would be in a blaze before we were a fortnight older. His feeling was prophetic. His surprising candor foreshadowed the moral courage with which Prince Lichnowski subsequently issued his famous apologia.

On July 28 Austria-Hungary declared war on Serbia. The military preparations of the dual monarchy inevitably led to a partial mobilization by Russia against Austria, whereupon the German emperor proclaimed the "Kriegsgefharezustand" on July 31, following this up by declaring war against Russia on Aug. 1. On Aug. 2 German troops entered Luxemburg, and, without declaration of war, violated French territory. Great Britain declared war against Germany on Aug. 4 and against Austria on Aug. 12, France having broken off relations with Austria two days earlier.

On Thursday, July 30, I was sent for by the chief of the imperial general staff and was given private intimation that if an expeditionary force were sent to France I was to command it. On leaving the room I found some well known newspaper correspondents in the passage. I talked a little with them and found that great doubt existed in their minds as to whether this country would support France by force of arms. This doubt was certainly shared by many.

GERMANY WARS ON RUSSIA.

I REMEMBER well that on the morning of Saturday, Aug. 1, the day upon which Germany declared war on Russia, and it was known that the breaking out of hostilities between Germany and France was only a question of hours, I received a visit from the Vicomte de la Panouse, the French military attaché in London. He told me that the ambassador was much disheartened in mind by these doubts and fears. We talked matters over and he came to dinner with me that night. Personally, I felt perfectly sure that so long as Mr. Asquith remained prime minister and Lord Haldane, Sir Edward Grey, and Mr. Winston Churchill continued to be members of the cabinet their voices would guide the destinies of the British Empire, and that we should remain true to our friendly understanding with the entente powers. As the result of the long conversations I had with the Vicomte de la Panouse I think I was successful in causing this conviction to prevail at the French embassy.

England declared war on Germany on Tuesday, Aug. 4, and on the 5th the mobilization of regulars, special reserve, and territorials was ordered. On Wednesday, Aug. 5, a council of war was held at 10 Downing street, under the presidency of the prime minister. Nearly all the members of the cabinet were present, while Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Sir Charles Douglas, Sir Douglas Haig, the late Sir James Grierson, Gen. (now Sir Henry) Wilson, and myself were directed to attend. To the best of my recollection the two main subjects discussed were:

1. The composition of the expeditionary force.
2. The point of concentration for the British forces on their arrival in France.

As regards 1: It was generally felt that we were under some obligation to France to send as strong an army as we could and there was an idea that one cavalry division and six divisions of all arms had been promised. As to the exact number, it did not appear that we were under any definite obligation, but it was unanimously agreed that we should do all we could. The question to be decided was how many troops it was necessary to keep in this country, adequately to guard our shores against attempted invasion and, if need be, to maintain internal order.

Mr. Churchill briefly described the actual situation of the navy. He pointed out that the threat of war had come upon us at a most opportune moment as regards his own department, because only two or three weeks before the fleet had been partially mobilized and large reserves called up for the great naval review of his majesty at Spithead and the extensive naval maneuvers which followed it. So far as the navy was concerned he considered home defense reasonably secure; but this consideration did not suffice to absolve us from the necessity of keeping a certain number of troops at home. After this discussion it was decided that two divisions must for the moment remain behind and that one cavalry division and four divisions of all arms should be sent out as speedily as possible. This meant a force of approximately 100,000 men.

As regards 2: The British and French general staffs had for some years been in close secret consultation with one another on this subject. The German menace necessitated some preliminary understanding in the event of a sudden attack. The area of concentration for the British forces had been fixed on the left flank of the French, and the actual detraining stations of the various units were all laid down in terrain lying between Maubeuge and La Cateau. The headquarters of the army were fixed at the latter place.

CONFER ON EVENTUALITIES.

THIS understanding being purely provisional and conditional upon an unprovoked attack by Germany, the discussion then took the turn of overhauling and reviewing these decisions, and of making arrangements in view of the actual conditions under which war had broken out. Many and various opinions were expressed; but on this day no final decisions were arrived at. It was thought absolutely necessary to ask the French authorities to send over a superior officer who should be in full possession of the views and intentions of the French general staff. It was agreed that no satisfactory decision could be arrived at until after full discussion with a duly accredited French officer. I think this is the gist of the really important points dealt with at the council.

During the week the headquarters of the expeditionary force were established in London at the Hotel Metropole, and the staff was constituted as follows:

Chief of staff—Gen. Sir Archibald Murray.
Subchief—Brig. Gen. H. H. Wilson.
Adjutant general—Maj. Gen. Neville McCready.
Quartermaster general—Maj. Gen. Sir William Robertson.
Director of intelligence—Brig. Gen. MacDonogh.
C. R. A.—Maj. Gen. Lindsay.
C. R. E.—Brig. Gen. Fowke.
Military secretary—Col. the Hon. W. Lambton.
Principal medical officer—Surgean General T. P. Woodhouse.
Principal veterinary officer—Brig. Gen. J. Moore.

It was about Thursday, the 7th, or Friday, the 8th of August, that Lord Kitchener was appointed secretary of state for war, and on Monday, the 10th, the mission sent by the French government arrived. It was headed by Col. Huguet, a well known French artillery officer, who recently had been for several years French military attaché at London.

As before mentioned, one of the most important matters remaining for discussion and decision was finally to determine whether the original plan as regards the area of concentration for the British forces in France was to be adhered to, or whether the actual situation demanded some change or modification. There was an exhaustive exchange of views between soldiers and ministers, and many conflicting opinions were expressed. The soldiers themselves were not agreed. Lord Kitchener thought that our position on the left of the French line at Maubege would be too exposed, and rather favored a concentration farther back in the neighborhood of Amiens. Sir Douglas Haig suggested postponing any landing till the campaign had actively opened and we should be able to judge in which direction our coöperation would be most effective.

Personally, I was opposed to these ideas and most anxious to adhere to our original plans. Any alteration in carrying out our concentration, particularly if this meant delay, would have upset the French plan of campaign and created much distrust in the minds of our allies. Delay or hanging back would not only have looked like hesitation, but might easily have entailed disastrous consequences by permanently separating our already inferior forces. Having regard to what we subsequently knew of the German plans and preparations, there can be no doubt that any such delayed landing might well have been actively opposed. As will be seen hereafter, we were at first hopeful of carrying out a successful offensive, and had those hopes been justified any change or delay in our original plans would have either prevented or entirely paralyzed it. The vital element of the problem was speed in mobilization and concentration; change of plans meant inevitable and possibly fatal delay.

Murray, Wilson, Grierson, and Huguet concurred in my views, and it was so settled.

The date of the embarkment of the headquarters staff was fixed for Friday, Aug. 14.

During the fateful days which intervened daily and almost hourly reports reached us as to the progress of mobilization both of our allies and our enemies. From the first it became quite evident that the German system of mobilization was quicker than the French. There was reason to believe that Germany had partly mobilized some classes of her reserves before formal mobilization. The splendid stand made by the Belgians in defense of their frontier fortresses is well known, and the course of the preliminary operations on the Belgian and Luxemburg frontiers, as well as those in the neighborhood of Nancy, gave us hope that the wonderful army of which we had heard so much was not altogether the absolutely invincible war machine we had been led to expect and believe. During this most critical time, my mind was occupied day and night with anxious thought. I will try to recall those days of the first half of August, 1914, and crystallize the result of my meditations. This will serve to show the doubts, fears, hopes, and aspirations—in short, the mental atmosphere in which I awaited the opening of the campaign.

FORESAW EVENTS OF WAR.

IN the ten years previous to the war I had constantly envisaged the probable course of events leading up to the outbreak of this world war, as well as the manner of the outbreak itself. In imagination I had seen the spark suddenly emitted in some obscure corner of Europe, followed by the blowing up of one huge magazine, such as the declaration of war between Russia and Austria would prove to be, then the conflagration spreading with lightning speed, and I had seemed to have a foretaste amid it all of the anxious hesitation which would precede our entry into the war.

I have been a member of the committee of imperial defense since 1906 and have assisted at the innumerable deliberations of that Aulic council. It was somewhere about 1908 that the certainty of a war was forced upon my mind. Lord Haldane was then secretary of state for war, and I was inspector general of the forces. Lord Haldane was himself alive to the possibility of war; but, while he hoped to ward it off by diplomacy and negotiation, he fully acquiesced in the desirability of making every preparation which could be carried out in complete secrecy. He told me that were he in power, if and when the event occurred, he would designate me to command the expeditionary force, and requested me to study the problem carefully and do all I could to be ready. It thus fell out that in August, 1914, the many possibilities and alternatives of action were quite familiar to my mind.

It is now within the knowledge of all that the general staffs of Great Britain and France had, for a long time, held conferences, and that a complete mutual understanding as to combined action in certain eventualities existed.

Belgium, however, remained a "dark horse" up to the last, and it is most unfortunate that she could never be persuaded to decide upon her attitude in the event of a general war. All we ever had in our mind was defense against attack by Germany. We had guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium, and all reports pointed to an intention by Germany to violate that neutrality. What we desired above all things was that Belgium should realize the danger which subsequently laid her waste. We were anxious that she should assist and coöperate in her own defense. The idea of attacking Germany through Belgium or in any other direction never entered our heads.

Prewar arrangements like these were bound in such circumstances to be very imperfect, though infinitely better than none at all. It will be of interest at this point to narrate a conversation I had with Emperor William in August, 1911. When his majesty visited this country in the spring of that year to unveil the statue of Queen Victoria, he invited me to be his guest at the grand cavalry maneuvers to be held that summer in the neighborhood of Berlin.

It was an experience I shall never forget, and it impressed me enormously with the efficiency and power of the German cavalry. It was on about the third day of the maneuvers that the emperor arrived by train at 5 o'clock in the morning, to find the troops drawn up on the plain close by to receive him. I have never seen a more magnificent military spectacle than they presented on that brilliant August morning, numbering some 15,000 horsemen, with a large force of horse artillery, Jäger and machine guns.

When his majesty had finished the inspection of the line, and the troops had moved to take up their points for maneuver, the emperor sent for me. He was very pleasant and courteous, asked me if I was made comfortable and if I had got a good horse. He then went on to say that he knew all our sympathies in Great Britain were with France and against Germany. He said he wished me to see everything that could be seen, but told me he trusted to my honor to reveal nothing if I visited France.

After the maneuvers of the day were completed, at about 11 or 12 o'clock, I was placed next to his majesty at luncheon, and we had another conversation. He asked me what I thought of what I had seen in the morning, and told me that the German cavalry was the most perfect in the world, but he added: "It is not only the cavalry; the artillery, the infantry, all the arms of the service, are equally efficient. The sword of Germany is sharp, and if you oppose Germany you will find how sharp it is."

Before I left his majesty was kind enough to present me with his photograph, beautifully framed.

GERMAN VIOLATION OF TREATY.

REVERTING to my story: Personally I had always thought that Germany would violate Belgian neutrality, and in no such half measure as by a march through the Ardennes, which was what our joint plans mainly contemplated. I felt convinced that if ever she took this drastic step she would make the utmost use of it to pour over the whole country and outflank the allies.

The principal source of the terrible anxiety I felt took its root in the thought that we were too much mentally committed to meet an attack from the east, instead of one which was to come as it actually did. It reassured me, however, to know that our actual dispositions did not preclude the possibility of stemming the first outburst of the storm so effectively as to ward off any imminent danger which might threaten northern France and the channel ports.

To turn from the province of strategy to the sphere of tactics, a lifelong experience of military study and thought had taught me that the principle of the tactical employment of troops must be instinctive. I knew that in putting the science of war into practice it was necessary that its main tenets should form, so to speak, part of one's flesh and blood. In war there is little time to think, and the right thing to do must come like a flash—it must present itself to the mind as perfectly obvious.

No previous experience, no conclusion I had been able to draw from campaigns in which I had taken part, or from a close study of the new conditions in which the war of today is waged, had led me to anticipate a war of positions. All my thoughts, all my prospective plans, all my possible alternatives of action, were concentrated upon a war of movement and maneuver. I knew perfectly well that modern, up to date inventions would materially influence and modify our previous conceptions as to the employment of the three arms respectively; but I had not realised that this process would work in so drastic a manner as to render all our preconceived ideas of the method of tactical field operations comparatively ineffective and useless. Judged by the course of events in the first three weeks of the war, neither French nor German generals were prepared for the complete transformation of all military ideas which the development of the operations inevitably demonstrated to be imperative for waging war in present conditions.

It is easy to be "wise after the event"; but I cannot help wondering why none of us realised what the most modern rifle, the machine gun, motor traction, the aeroplane, and wireless telegraphy would bring about. It seems so simple when judged by actual results. The modern rifle and machine gun add tenfold to the relative power of the defense as against the attack. This precludes the use of the old methods of attack, and has driven the attack to seek covered entrenchments after every forward rush of at most a few hundred yards.

It has thus become a practical operation to place the heaviest artillery in position close behind the infantry fighting line, not only owing to the mobility afforded by motor traction, but also because the old dread of losing the guns before they could be got away no longer exists. The crucial necessity for the effective employment of heavy artillery is observation, and this is provided by the balloon and the aeroplane, which, by means of wireless telegraphy, can keep the batteries instantly informed of the accuracy of their fire.

I feel sure in my own mind that had we realized the true effect of modern appliances of war in August, 1914, there would have been no retreat from Mons, and that if, in September, the Germans had learned their lesson, the allies would never have driven them back to the Aisne. It was in the fighting on that river that the eyes of all of us began to be opened.

New characteristics of offensive and defensive war began vaguely to be appreciated; but it required the successive attempts of Maunoury, Castlenau, Foch, and myself to turn the German flanks in the north in the old approved style, and the practical failure of these attempts to bring home to our minds the true nature of war as it is today.

SETTLE DOWN TO WAR.

ABOUT the middle of November, 1914, after three and a half months of war, we were fairly settled down to the war of positions. It was, therefore, in a somewhat troubled frame of mind that I began to play my humble part in this tremendous episode in the history of the world. The new lessons had to be learned in a hard school and through a bitter experience. However, for good or for evil, I have always been possessed of a sanguine temperament. No one, I felt, had really been able to gauge the respective fighting values of the French and German armies. I hoped for the best and rather believed in it; and in this confident spirit, although anxious and watchful, I landed at Boulogne at 5 p. m. on Aug. 14, 1914.

It will be a fitting close to this chapter if I add the instructions which I received from his majesty's government before leaving:

"Owing to the infringement of the neutrality of Belgium by Germany, and in furtherance of the entente which exists between this country and France, his majesty's government has decided, at the request of the French government, to send an expeditionary force to France and to intrust the command of the troops to yourself.

"The special motive of the force under your control is to support and coöperate with the French army against our common enemies. The peculiar task laid upon you is to assist the French government in preventing or repelling the invasion by Germany of French and Belgian territory and eventually to restore the neutrality of Belgium, on behalf of which, as guaranteed by treaty, Belgium has appealed to the French and to ourselves.

"These are the reasons which have induced his majesty's government to declare war, and these reasons constitute the primary objective you have before you.

"The place of your assembly, according to present arrangements, is Amiens, and during the assembly of your troops you will have every opportunity for discussing with the commander in chief of the French army the military position in general and the special part which your force is able and adapted to play. It must be recognized from the outset that the numerical strength of the British force and its contingent reinforcement is strictly limited, and with this consideration kept steadily in view it will be obvious that the greatest care must be exercised toward a minimum of losses and wastage.

"Therefore, while every effort must be made to coincide most sympathetically with the plans and wishes of our ally, the gravest consideration will devolve upon you as to participation in forward movements where large bodies of French troops are not engaged and where your force may be unduly exposed to attack. Should a contingency of this sort be contemplated, I look to you to inform me fully and give me time to communicate to you any decision to which his majesty's government may come in the matter. In this connection I wish you distinctly to understand that your command is an entirely independent one, and that you will in no case come in any sense under the orders of any allied general.

"In minor operations you should be careful that your subordinates understand that risk of serious losses should only be taken where such risk is authoritatively considered to be commensurate with the object in view.

"The high courage and discipline of your troops should, and certainly will, have fair and full opportunity of display during the campaign, but officers may well be reminded that in this, their first experience of European warfare, a greater measure of caution must be employed than under former conditions of hostilities against an untrained adversary.

"You will kindly keep up constant communication with the war office, and you will be good enough to inform me as to all movements of the enemy reported to you as well as to those of the French army.

"I am sure you fully realize that you can rely with the utmost confidence on the whole hearted and unswerving support of our government, of myself, and of your compatriots, in carrying out the high duty which the king has intrusted to you and in maintaining the great tradition of his majesty's army. (Signed) KITCHENER,
"Secretary of State."

TO THE SEAT OF WAR.

I LEFT Charing Cross by special train at 2 p. m. on Friday, Aug. 14, and embarked at Dover in his majesty's cruiser Sentinel. Sir Maurice FitzGerald and a few other friends were at the station to see me off and I was accompanied by Murray, Wilson, Robertson, Lambton, Wake, Huguet, and Brinsley Fitzgerald (my private secretary). The day was dark, dull, and gloomy, and rather chilly for August. Dover had ceased to be the cheery seaside resort of peace days and had assumed the appearance of a fortress expecting momentary attack. Very few people were about and the place was prepared for immediate action. The fine harbor was crowded with destroyers, submarines, and a few cruisers; booms barred all the entrances and mines were laid down.

It was the first time since war had been declared that I witnessed the outward and visible signs of the great struggle for which we were girding our loins. Not the least evidence of this was the appearance of the officers and men of the Sentinel. All showed in their faces that strained, eager, watchful look which told of the severe and continual daily and nightly vigil. This was very marked and much impressed me.

We sailed a little before 4 and landed at Boulogne about half past 5 in the evening. I was met by the governor, the commandant, and the port officials, and we had a very hearty reception. There were several rest camps at Boulogne and I was able to visit them. Officers and men looked fit and well and were full of enthusiasm and cheer.

Boulogne was only a secondary port of embarkation, but I can vividly recall the scene. Every one knows the curious and interesting old town, with its picturesque citadel, situated on a lofty hill. On all sides were evidences of great activity and excitement. Soldiers and sailors, both British and French, were everywhere. All were being warmly welcomed and cheered by the townspeople.

The declining August sun lit up sinuous columns of infantry ascending the high ground to their rest camps on the plateau to the sound of military bands. From the heights above the town, the quays, and wharves, where the landing of troops and stores was unceasingly going forward, looked like human beehives. Looking out to sea one could distinguish approaching transports here and there between the ever wary and watchful scout, destroyer, and submarine which were jealously guarding the route.

Over all towered the monument to the greatest world soldier—the warrior emperor who, more than a hundred years before, had from that spot contemplated the invasion of England. Could he have now revisited "the glimpses of the moon," would he not have rejoiced at this friendly invasion of France by England's "good yeomen," who were now offering their lives to save France from possible destruction as a power of the first class? It was a wonderful and never to be forgotten scene in the setting sun; and, as I walked round camps and bivouacs, I could not but think of the many fine fellows around me who had said good-by to old England forever.

I left Amiens for Paris on the morning of the 15th and we reached the Nord terminus at a quarter to 1 p. m., where I was met by the British ambassador (now Lord Bertie) and the military governor of Paris. Large crowds had assembled in the streets on the way to the embassy, and we were received with tremendous greetings by the people. Their welcome was cordial in the extreme.

We drove to the embassy and lunched there. In the afternoon, accompanied by the ambassador, I visited M. Poincaré. The president was attended by M. Viviani, prime minister, and M. Millerand, minister for war. The situation was fully discussed and I was much impressed by the optimistic spirit of the president. I am sure he had formed great hopes of a victorious advance by the allies from the line they had taken up, and he discoursed playfully with me on the possibility of another battle being fought by the British on the old field of Waterloo. He said the attitude of the French nation was admirable, and that they were very calm and determined.

After leaving the president I went to the war office. Maps were produced; the whole situation was again discussed and arrangements were made for me to meet Gen. Joffre at his headquarters the next day.

Ravinia's Outdoor Opera Feature of Summer Season

By Mme. X.

A QUEER lot we Chicagoans are—some of us at least. In Ravinia park, with its open air opera and concerts, we have an institution so unique, distinguished, chic, and altogether high class that were it in or near New York, Boston, or Philadelphia its fame would be international. Thousands of music lovers would make pilgrimages to it. Hundreds would clamor for nearby cottages so as to be within easy reach of it. Yet, because it is a local enterprise which we have seen grow year by year from small beginnings, we Chicagoans—some of us at least—are prone to overlook it and leave it out of our calculations. There are even those so lost to all sense of music as to say, "Cut out the highbrow and give us a brass band!"

No lower in the scale of human intelligence would the man or woman be who, speaking of the pictures at the Art institute, should cry, "Cut out the highbrow and give us chromos!"

There is nothing the winter season of music can offer us equal to those summer afternoons and evenings in that large, airy, shady pavilion, with flower gardens to the south glowing in sunshine or filling the nights with perfume, while the senses are lulled or excited by the best works of the great composers, beautifully given.

More Enjoyable in Open Air.

Those who listen to the symphony orchestra concerts in the mephitic twilight of Orchestra hall have no conception of the vastly superior joys of sitting under the spell of that same orchestra in the open air, with birds twittering an accompaniment, while butterflies dance to the music of Debussy, Chopin, or Tschaikowsky.

The winter season's operagoers, who often hide their yawns behind their programs, should see those same operas, shortened, with all the superfluous eliminated and given with the dash and spirit bred of the beauty of the summer night in which the scenes and the costumes of the performers glow like jewels.

To watch and hear Mlle. Muzzio, last July, act and sing the sorrows of Madame Butterfly while the trees whispered to the eaves of the pavilion and black bats swooped across the lighted stage, was such a keen delight as no indoor music ever provided.

Sitting there I pondered on the many mortals I call friends who at that same moment, not far away, were indoors under electric light matching their wits at cards while melody, moonlight, and the sweetness of a perfect summer night awaited them.

The whole north shore, from Chicago to Waukegan, owes much to the devoted, public spirited men and women who make Ravinia park possible. Head of these good citizens and music lovers is Louis Eckstein of Glencoe, who gives two-thirds of his time to the association; defrays, out of his own pocket, the cost of an office with four or five clerks; makes no charge for traveling expenses, telegrams, or long distance calls—in short, makes the Ravinia park company possible.

No Profit in Enterprise.

No one in this company gets any salary or remuneration whatsoever; the funds all go to the actual running expenses of the park—taxes, opera, upkeep of the grounds, and equipment.

Other members of the organization are C. T. Boynton of Highland Park, Ward Willets and Landon Hoyt of Winnetka. Chairman of the guarantee fund is Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of Lake Forest. Others on this committee are Mrs. William Sutherland of Glencoe, Mrs. William I. Osborne of Evanston, Douglas Smith of Winnetka, Donald McLennan of Lake Forest, and John R. Washburne of Highland Park.

There are a great many people who can't afford the regular grand opera prices to whom this opportunity to hear the best operas presented by well known artists for 50 cents a ticket is an inestimable boon. If every one who can afford it on the north shore should buy one $10 book of tickets, which comprises twenty tickets, it would insure the success of the enterprise.

If the high musical standard set there is not kept up, or if the whole project should be abandoned, the property might fall into the hands of some purely money making enterprise, catering to noisy crowds which would be a distinct detriment to the whole north shore.

The ticket selling drive begins tomorrow under pretty Mrs. Leeds Mitchell's direction.

One innovation is planned this year which, if it succeeds, should add much to the attractions of the park. The Ravinia company is going to run the restaurant itself and will try to make it as desirable in its way as the rest that it offers by having a shorter menu of a higher quality. The gay little black and white open air pavilion, where the meals are served and where there is dancing in the intermissions, is a cheerful background for lighter sociability.

Great Lakes Men to Benefit.

The Ravinia club, which last year entertained 42,000 soldiers and sailors at the park, giving them suppers, dances, vaudeville, etc., is planning to do a somewhat similar work this summer for the men at the Great Lakes and Fort Sheridan. This is at the especial request of Rear Admiral Bassett, who thinks this sort of thing of incalculable value to the men.

Mrs. Frank R. Green of Winnetka is president of the club, Mrs. Edgar A. Snow, first vice president; Mrs. William Irving Osborne, second vice president; Mrs. W. W. Cressap, treasurer; Mrs. J. Warren Burke, recording secretary, and Mrs. Hugh Foresman, corresponding secretary.

Each of the north shore communities has a chapter in this club, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald being the chairman for Ravinia, Mrs. Walter Baldwin for Highland Park, Mrs. Norman Anderson for Winnetka, Mrs. W. W. Wheelock for Kenilworth, Mrs. John Wanner for Wilmette, and Mrs. Morris Miller for Glencoe.

There seems room among these various committees and subcommittees for one on the weather. This great factor, well handled, can do more to insure the season's success than any other thing. Those 17 year locusts, just stirring their dry wings under the crust of the earth, are promised to add their rattling castanets to the summer's orchestra, which usually means a long, hot, dry season—at least, so say the old fashioned weatherwise.

It's up to every right minded resident in that ornamental, financially well endowed district known as the north shore to lend a hand to help those who are making Ravinia park a fact. There is nothing that we Chicagoans can regard with more justifiable pride than this open air temple to the best music.

The symphony orchestra will have a season there this summer under the batons of Hagemann and Paape, while among the opera stars promised are Mabel Garrison, Florence Easton, Alice Gentiles, Francis McLennan, Orville Harrold, Morgan Kingston, Milo Picco, and Leon Rothier, while the charming Muzzio herself has written to ask if she may come back for a few performances before going to Buenos Aires.

Leaving for Summer Haunts.

Society is drifting earlier than usual to its various summer haunts. Last year many people delayed because of being absorbed in war relief work, but this year finds almost every one with a sense of elation that comes from release from more or less confining labor, eagerly planning for what promises to be the gayest season we've had in the country hereabouts certainly since 1914. The fashionable and popular architects say their offices are full of people eager to spend money. Certainly the shops are crowded, and the restaurants and theaters are ditto.

There is everywhere a cheerful air of prosperity in the land not to be matched I fear anywhere else on this globe. The thought of the contrast between us and other nations came with poignant force the other night at a big club dinner given by the Casino to "Baboushka," as her fellow country folk call Mme. Catherine Breshkovsky, the famous "grandmother of the Russian revolution," when she told the company of Russia's destitution.

A crisp, snowy white kerchief, brought over her silver hair and pinned under her chin, framed her wholesome, ruddy, sweet old face. She has only recently learned to speak a little English. Her vocabulary is limited, her enunciation is far from distinct, but every one that evening understood her when she spoke of Russia's suffering.

She talked principally of the children of Russia, 4,000,000 of whom are fatherless, homeless, utterly destitute. She wants first food and clothes for them; next, education. Without this latter she says they will grow up a terrible menace to the rest of the world. But now they have no schools, no teachers, no books, even no pencils, pens, inks, or paper. Her soft, rather muffled voice trembled; her kind eyes filled with tears as she told the story of her native land.

Devoted Life to the Peasant.

She is a great and distinct figure in today's dazzling phantasmagoria of a world. She is 75 years old, was born of aristocratic family, in a home of wealth, but nevertheless has spent thirty-two years of her life in prisons, dungeons, and Siberian exile, and has passed through unspeakable physical sufferings—her crime being that since she was 17 years old she has never ceased to work for the liberty and enlightenment of the Russian peasant.

No wonder such men as Nicholas Murray Butler, Charles E. Hughes, George Kennan, Henry Morgenthau, and Henry S. Pritchett are proud to vouch for her and to stand back of her enterprise in this country, "the Catherine Breshkovsky Russian Relief fund."

The feverish condition of mankind today was evidenced by the fact that it was thought necessary that evening at the Casino to have some secret service men to protect her from Russian reds, people drawn from the very class to whose salvation she has devoted her life.

Among the many present were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gillette, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dunham, Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Mason, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Morrill Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strobel, Count and Countess Bolognesi, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Morrisson, Count Nils Rosen, Consul Falkenstjerne, Henry Millikin, Harold F. McCormick, and Kellogg Fairbank.

Memorial Hospital in France.

The Chicago chapter of the American Fund for French Wounded went out of existence last Wednesday morning and in its stead arose the American Memorial Hospital association, dedicated to establishing a $500,000 hospital at Reims. Already forty of the one hundred beds have been subscribed for.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson left here last Wednesday for a fortnight's speaking tour for this enterprise. Her itinerary will cover half a dozen states and will be a strenuous one night stand campaign. The governor of Kansas, Henry Allen, will escort her about that state, while at Memphis Mrs. James Harahan will help her to reach the people of Tennessee.

The hospital will be a permanent memorial to France of the great work done there in aid of the people of our sister republic in the hour of her greatest need.

Mrs. Ryerson is initiating at her country place on Lake Otsego what ought to prove a valuable new opening for women. She owns the golf club there, a lovely nine hole course with a quaint little clubhouse on the north shore of one of the prettiest lakes in this country.

She is proposing to run it entirely by women. For this purpose she took there with her ten days ago two of the land army young women who got their training last summer at the Libertyville training farm organized by Mrs. Tiffany Blake. Two more of these girls go there later and this quartet will keep the golf course in order, cutting the grass, keeping the greens and trees close clipped, and running the simple restaurant. There will be no men employed on the place except the caddies. It is an interesting experiment and, if it succeeds, other similar clubs may find it worth while to follow suit.

Art Purchases on View.

On Tuesday the Friends of American Art will give a reception at the Art institute where their latest purchases will be on view. They are one of the Art institute's most entertaining byproducts, and American art and artists owe them much in the way of support and encouragement, though it is generally held that art should know no nationality.

Last Tuesday a small company of art lovers and patrons attended a tea given in the Powers building by Mrs. Arthur Aldis to exhibit the paintings of Raymond Johnson, a young artist of unusual promise. Shimmering, iridescent creations they were, pictures of a world seen through a prism. He was the author of the very successful scenery of the late lamented Little theater.

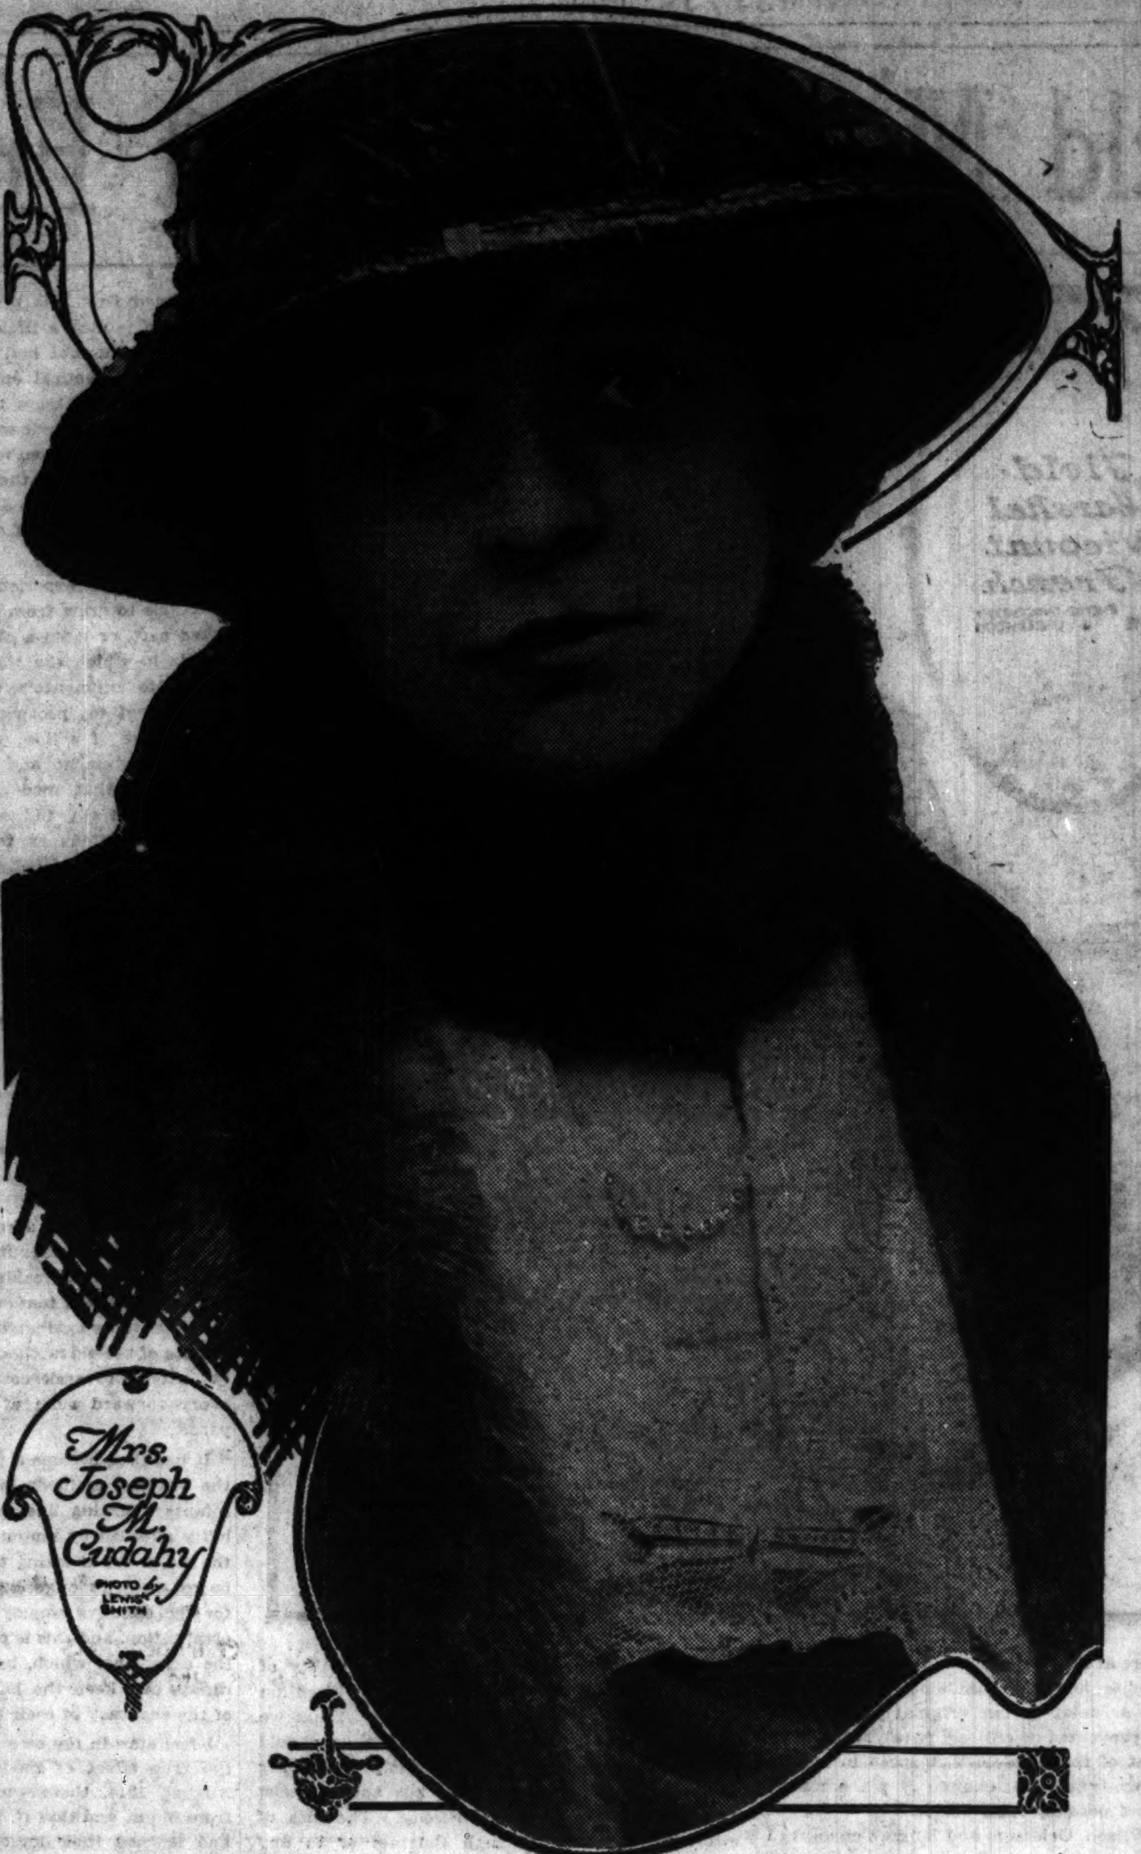
Among the guests at this art tea was Capt. Abram Poole, who had an hour or so before blithely shed his uniform and was making his debut as a civilian once more. He will probably return to his first love, art, and now plans, after a few months' wandering, to plant his easel here next winter.

There was also at this tea an English officer, Capt. Hawkins, who comes to this country—the mecca of every one with anything to put through that needs financial backing—to ask our interest in a scheme to bring France, England, and America together by a sort of inter-educational project, which shall give the youth of these countries an opportunity to pursue some of their studies far away from home in one or the other of these lands.

The underlying idea is good if it can be worked out far enough. Anything is good that enlarges the horizon of young or old.

The Lake Forest cottage the John McCutcheons recently bought of Arthur Young, is, under Howard Shaw's touch, being transmogrified from a sad little brown house into a gay little white villa, with green blinds and terraced front entrance. The new owners expect to move in by June 1, with John T. II., aged 2½, in full command.

She Has Charge of Banquet of Child Welfare Workers



Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy of 1415 Astor street and Lake Forest is in charge of arrangements for a banquet to be given tomorrow evening at the Congress hotel for the delegates who will attend the conference of child welfare experts from foreign countries to be held here tomorrow and Tuesday. Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick will give a luncheon for them today at the Blackstone, and tomorrow the Alliance Francaise will give a luncheon for the Belgian and French women delegates at the Congress hotel.

"STABILIZING THE DOLLAR."

Let us assume that a servant girl in 1896 managed by careful self-denial to put $100 in the bank at 3 per cent interest. Nominally the deposit has today increased to $200, but if she attempts to spend it she finds she can buy only about half what she could in 1896. In other words, after years of waiting and with interest accruing every six months her $100 is worth no more to her than it was in 1896.

The remarkable depreciation in the value of the dollar, as indicated by this example and hundreds of others which will occur to nearly every one, has directed the attention of economists and financial experts to the possibility of stabilizing the dollar's purchasing power.

Just recently Lord d'Abernon, a distinguished British financier, asserted that some means of keeping the ratio constant between money and goods must be devised to avert social unrest and to place financial conditions on a firm basis. He suggested for one thing that an index of prices in a given community should be used to determine wages in that community.

In this country a group of economists, of whom the most conspicuous is Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, are advocating a carefully worked out plan to stabilize the dollar.

Prof. Fisher is emphatic in saying that "if we take the ground that we must simply drift with the tides of gold and credit, that we are helpless to do anything to rectify or prevent in the future the great social injustices which history warns us will surely come, as between creditor and debtor, wage earner and employer, salaried man and profit taker, we shall simply be fertilizing the soil of public opinion for a dangerous radicalism."

A stabilized dollar would be most immediately advantageous to the wage earner and the salaried man. It is notorious that incomes rarely, if ever, keep pace with prices, and we know that what was a good living wage a few years ago is today hardly more than a bare subsistence.

But business men, especially bankers and investors, are likewise interested. The man who lends a dollar of a certain value and gets it back at a depreciated value is cheated. It is estimated that since the fall of 1915 the purchasing power of the dollar has depreciated as much as 25 per cent in a single year. In any such year, therefore, the bondholder loses not only his interest of, say, 5 per cent, but 20 per cent of his principal.

The dollar is thus the "great pickpocket," to use Prof. Fisher's phrase.

It is not surprising, therefore, to find that his plan is approved in principle by such men as Frank A. Vanderlip, George Foster Peabody, Henry L. Higginson, John V. Farwell, Senator Owen, and Royal Meeker, United States commissioner of labor statistics, as well as various economists.

Prof. Fisher proposes that we should have a standard dollar just as we have a standard yardstick, a standard pound, a standard bushel, and so forth. These standards of weight and measure used to be as unstable as the dollar now is, and no one could be certain he was getting thirty-six inches of cloth when he called for a yard or sixteen ounces of beef when he called for a pound. "The gold dollar," says Prof. Fisher, "is now fixed in weight and therefore variable in purchasing power. What we need is a gold dollar fixed in purchasing power and therefore variable in weight."

The plan is somewhat intricate to describe, but its supporters say it could be put into effect as easily as daylight saving. It consists primarily in using an index number such as that issued by the bureau of labor statistics as a standard of value and then in shifting the weight of the gold dollar at specified intervals, say monthly, to correspond with that index. The index number is prepared by averaging the prices of some 300 commodities and thus furnishes a very accurate measure of price levels.

It should be said at once that in order to avoid obvious difficulties Prof. Fisher proposes to abolish gold coins from circulation. The gold is to remain in the treasury in the form of bullion and is to be represented by gold certificates. The shifting in the weight of the dollar will in a sense be theoretical, though if a jeweler or exporter wished to get gold he would pay for it in gold certificates on the basis indicated by the prevailing index number.

For the initial standard Prof. Fisher proposes that we take the price standard of 1916-'17, which is close enough to our present standard so as to cause little or no dislocation of existing financial arrangements. We arbitrarily call that standard 100. Then if in any particular month the index figure goes to 101 we "load" the dollar 1 per cent above the ideal par, or if the index figure goes below 100 we subtract from the dollar.

All this may sound radical and unsettling to the person who regards the gold dollar as sacred. It is true that the adoption of the gold standard was a great advance, and this plan by no means contemplates the elimination of that standard. But the gold dollar is after all merely a medium of exchange; if it were convenient to use a basket of commodities, say eggs, flour, meat, and vegetables, it would serve the same purpose and perhaps serve it better.

As things now stand the value of gold is at the mercy of a great number of influences; an overproduction at the mines brings the value down, whereas increased use by jewelers or the demands of exporters will serve to send it up. When we speak of the value of gold, however, we mean its purchasing power, because its price remains constant at $18.60 an ounce. There is a story of a dentist who was surprised to find that despite war conditions he paid approximately the same price for gold that he did thirty years ago.

Prof. Anderson of Harvard university has offered certain criticisms of the Fisher "stabilizing" plan. He proposes these modifications: that it be done by international agreement; that it be done only after prices have gone down to something like a stable normal level, and that changes under the plan be limited to 2 per cent or 2½ per cent a year. Prof. Fisher does not believe these modifications are necessary.

The Fisher plan is here briefly outlined, not because THE TRIBUNE is in any way committed to it, but because it is a late development in economic thought and one that is likely to assume considerable importance in future discussions of financial legislation.

GOOD TIMES IN CHICAGO.

Chicago should be a pleasant place. It should be a city of good times.

It is not enough that we have a forest of smokestacks betokening the vast industry that holds forth here; not enough that deep canyons of brick and steel mark the center of the west's commerce; not enough that a thousand trains unload their daily freight here.

The belching smokestacks, the roaring canyons, and the clattering engines are like to become drab. Color is gone from our lives. We must not live in a vast foundry nor expect our guests to take much joy of visiting us there.

In these "welcome home" days we are by way of developing some decorative effects. Most of this color of life is being shown us by the women who, after all, demand pleasant things as well as the matter of fact. The women have shown us that Dionysius need not be a scapegrace, but a reputable member of the community, festooning the boulevards and inciting us to laughter and merriment.

The festivals that now are making life worth living for the returning here should not be discontinued. We should not crumple the gay bunting into dusty and forgotten closets nor remind the heroes that gaiety is only a mechanical incident to their deeds. Chicago should not be suffered to become a mere theater, emblazoned for the mimic pageant only to be darkened, drear, and gloomy the moment after.

Festivals and good times that are erected for the moment bear a mark of artificiality, as if to say: "Here come the heroes; let's smile pleasantly and have it over with." Chicago should not have it over with. The smile of welcome should not come off.

We hope the women will be dedicated to this pleasant task. We urge them to keep alive the spirit of the pageant. They should insist that color and decoration be not simply dutiful expedients, but wholesome components of every day life. It should be worth while to live in Chicago for the pleasantness there is in life, and not alone the prosperity that most men seek.

Most important to this maintenance of the festival spirit is that we preserve the agencies we now have. Energetic men and women have given a good deal of their time to the organization of festival committees and these committees are thoroughly grounded in detail and administration. It would be too bad to have this organization disbanded.

Instead of this we believe it should be expanded to include neighborhood, precinct, and ward organizations over the whole city. Women should make it their business to see that each neighborhood is always ready to participate in a great city festival whenever the occasion requires. And these festivals should be frequent instead of seldom; they should appeal to every one instead of the few; they should draw support from every person in Chicago instead of only those who inspire civic progress.

Each local reading room and playground and community center should be the headquarters of Chicagoans interested in making Chicago a place for heroes. We should make our festivals as attractive as our means will permit. Our boulevards should not be merely staid and somber thoroughfares, but flashing in color and the avenues of the joyous. Saturdays and Sundays should not be without recompense.

We hope the leaders of the city's entertainments in these days will keep up their spirits and hold fast to the organization they have created. We hope this will be a home for heroes.

OWN YOUR OWN HOME.

If the English language had developed during the modern age of apartments we should have no such word as "home." Merely the annual shifting about would prevent the accretion of those associations which give the word its cherished quality. And the worst of it is if we continue to live in apartments and rented houses we shall lose those associations and all they denote.

The home owner is inclined to be contemptuous of apartment dwellers. He says they are apt to be childless, frequently lazy, often fond of mere garishness, and usually of unstable disposition. The indictment is unfair, but, on the other hand, we should scarcely think of bringing these counts against home owners.

We do know that the instability of apartment dwellers is notorious, and no one deplores it more than the apartment owners. Some persons seem actually to live in moving vans, and we are not speaking of the families that cannot afford to pay the rent.

The present shortage of apartments has, of course, greatly stimulated the buying of homes. We hope the movement will continue. For the thrifty it may be observed that as long as he lives in an apartment he will have to assist the owner in paying his income tax—no inconsiderable item—whereas, if he owns his own home, he will at least save that much. We doubt whether it is any longer true, except in special cases, that it is cheaper to pay rent than to buy.

It cannot be cheaper in the long run if a man has any pride in possession or finds satisfaction in the family life of the home, using the word in its traditional sense.

WHAT THE NATIONS WILL WEAR.

[New York Evening Post.]

The map of Europe is showing all the popular spring styles in men's suitings. The neat horizontal stripe is all the vogue in that part of Hungary claimed by the Czecho-Slovaks. The horizontal stripe, somewhat heavier, is worn by the Roumanians over a couple of hundred thousand square miles or so. The Serbs, on the other hand, go in for the vertical hairline to the extent of 25,000 square miles, and the neat check pattern is where the Serbs and Roumanians will land in each other's hair if something isn't done soon. The dot and dash is worn in those parts of former Poland grabbed by Germany. Most of the self-determined little fellows go in for a decided plaid effect.

Small Town Perils.

[From the Helena, Ark., World.]

Citizens are warned to keep off the streets when the new motor-driven hose wagon is making a run to a fire. The vehicle is capable of great speed, and the practice of running to the middle of the street to "see the fire wagon pass" should be discontinued from this time forward. Such practice will hereafter be attended by considerable danger to life and limb. Citizens should remain within doors, or at least refrain from running into the streets, when the new hose wagon is passing to a fire.

Why do you linger so long?"

Moonlight last night o'er the warm earth was

Moonlight and silvery dew.

Calling and calling to you.

"Summer has come to the hills and the meadows,
Summer and sunlight and song.
Winter and sorrow have fled with the shadows—
Why do you linger so long?"

SMALLPOX IN MAY.

MAY shares with November the honor of being the healthiest month of the year. In most years November has the honor, but the number in which May leads is not inconsiderable.

In a study of the distribution of disease during the last forty years I found a few years in which the acute chest diseases of the winter and spring remained prevalent during May, just as occasionally the acute abdominal diseases of the summer and autumn carry well into November, but in most years these are the two in-between months in which there are no seasonal causes for illness.

A climate all Mays and Novembers would be nearly ideal. In both months there are ranges of temperature from day to day and between night and day, there is considerable wind movement, both are storm months, but neither has protracted spells of heat or cold. According to Huntington these qualities are requisites for a healthy, efficiency producing climate.

In running down the list I found but two diseases that are liable to prevail in May. They are hookey and smallpox. I decided to write about smallpox, leaving hookey for the teachers. The rise in atmospheric temperature and the more out of doors life brings to a virtual end epidemics of measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, meningities, and even colds and coughs—not so smallpox. The oncoming warm weather does not seem to have much effect on smallpox until June and does not stop it until July. Especially is this noticeable with the mild variety of smallpox which has prevailed since 1898.

The cause of smallpox is not known. The incubation period is seven to sixteen days. It is usually twelve days. If the infection is severe the disease is more liable to have a short incubation period and if mild a long one. As a rule on the twelfth day the patient develops violent headache and backache. There is a fever of about 104 degrees and this usually comes on with a chill. This fever and aching lasts for about three days. At the end of this period the temperature goes down and the pains get easy. The person who has been uncomfortable for about three days becomes easy. He feels like getting out of bed and even walking out to see his friends. In the nice May weather the chance that he will go on the streets or will visit with friends is strong, and this is one reason why smallpox has such a strong tendency to spread in May.

During this preliminary period of fever there is apt to be a rash which has somewhat the appearance of a measles or scarlet fever rash. It may stay out only a few days. There is none of the redness of the eyes, running at the nose, sore throat, and cough that go with other rashes due to communicable disease.

During this period of preliminary fever the man may need a few doses of acetanalid or some other fever-headache medicine and a purgative. That is about the only treatment required. It is important to know that the disease is catching during this stage. The patient is contagious during the period of comfort following the fever as well as during the stage of headache. The fever free stage may only last a few hours. Then comes what is known as the period of eruption.

The eruption begins as a sharply defined, small, hard mass situated in the deep layers of the skin. It extends to the surface and appears to be a hard, shotlike red area. It generally appears first on the forehead and the front of the wrists and then elsewhere on the body. The skin that is habitually covered by clothing is apt to be the last involved. In nearly every case there are a few nodules in the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet. By the end of the third day water blisters appear on these hard nodules and later on the clear water in the blisters changes to pus. Fever is not a prominent symptom of the eruption stage until the blisters become pustules. By the end of the ten days of the breaking out the blisters begin to sink down in the center, giving the navel appearance of umbilication which is characteristic of smallpox.

In the old style smallpox the skin was a mass of pustules and the inside of the mouth and nose and the eyes themselves were affected. The present day smallpox is a different matter. There may not be more than two or three pustules. The average case has less than a hundred. There will be two or three on the forehead, five or six more on other parts of the face, a few in the hair, one or two in each palm and sole, and a score scattered elsewhere on the body and limbs.

The popular impression of smallpox shared by most of the physicians is that of the face greatly swollen and the skin covered with boils. That was smallpox as the older physicians saw it and that is the way the pictures in the books show it, and most of the younger physicians only know the disease as they have seen it in the book pictures.

It is because the disease is so different now that so many people who have it go through their illness without suspecting the trouble and so many physicians fail to properly diagnose the cases they see.

Somewhere about the twelfth day of the eruption the pustules begin to dry down. By the end of the second week masses of scabs are replacing the boils. The entire course of the disease is about six weeks.

Chicken pox has a longer incubation period. There is no preliminary fever. The eruption comes out without warning. In fact, the chicken pox eruption is generally accidentally discovered. The eruption is not under the skin. It looks like small blisters set on the skin which could be scraped off, leaving nothing behind. The blisters came out in crops and young ones will be by the side of others that are drying up. And finally chicken pox blisters do not often come on the forehead and never on the palms and soles.

Every case of smallpox should be cared for in a hospital. The sick get a better chance for their lives, and pitting is much less, and the well are much better protected.

Treatment consists of dressing the boils and ulcers with some antiseptic, keeping the scabs moist with wet cloth or soft with ointments and keeping pain within limits.

No method of prevention is satisfactory except vaccination.

During the last four years there have always been in the neighborhood of twenty million men in the various armies. Multiply this number by four and three-quarters—the number of years of the war—and we get a population almost equal to that of this country. While we were having thousands of cases of smallpox the soldiers have been free. There have been a few small outbreaks, but not enough to amount to anything. There are more cases of smallpox now in two rural counties in Illinois than there have been in all of these armies in four and three-quarters years.

Prior to this war armies in war times have always suffered from smallpox. The reason there is so little smallpox in the army now is because they are so thoroughly vaccinated, and the reason there is much in these rural populations is because they are so poorly vaccinated.

The reports are that two of these outbreaks have occurred in persons who had good vaccination scars. The number of cases in the outbreaks probably in no case exceeded a dozen, and yet they are charged as failures of vaccination to protect and, being so charged, constitute blots on the record.

Dr. Heman Spalding of the Chicago health department—and nobody in the world knows smallpox any better than Dr. Spalding does—says that they should not be so recorded. He says that some people are not wholly protected by a single vaccination; that after a person has been successfully vaccinated he should be revaccinated at once when the first one has healed. If he is fully protected by the first the second will not take. No person repeatedly vaccinated until it does not take will or can have smallpox. Dr. Spalding holds that in this way the few persons not protected by a single vaccination can be made safe.

They are looking for smallpox in London next year. Since 1884 they have been having waves at nine year intervals. In 1884 they had 6,363 cases; 1893, 2,376 cases; 1902, 7,916 cases, and 1911, 70 cases. It is true the number of cases in 1911 was small when compared with the earlier years, but there were but two in 1907, one in 1908, five in 1910, five in 1912, one in 1913, one in 1914, eleven in 1915, one in 1916, and none in 1917.

They are anticipating trouble because a large proportion of their civilian population is unvaccinated and a good many susceptibles have been accumulating since the last epidemic. The people may heed the experience of the army and get vaccinated and thus escape the anticipated outbreak in 1920. Let us hope that our civilian population may also heed the experience of their army.

RECUPERATING.

Mrs. B. writes: "1. How should one live following an operation for goiter in order to receive full benefit of operation?

"2. We are to spend the summer in the woods. Will have a screened house and good water. How shall we dispose of the garbage in order to have no flies and sickness from it?"

REPLY.

1. As soon as convalescence is well established live a normal life. Eat about what other people eat. Avoid excitement but do not become a shut-in or a self-centered semi-invalid.

2. Get a barrel and screen one end with rather fine screening. Throw the garbage on this and let the fluids drain into the barrel. Wrap the drained garbage in paper. Burn or bury it. The slop water should be carted off and emptied into a stream or poured into a seepage hole if the soil is of the right type.

BICYCLE RIDING IN ROGERS PARK.

Chicago, May 12.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Are the residents of Rogers Park to share the sidewalks with bicyclists, two wheeled hand trucks or any other vehicle which should travel the roadways? Whether on the side streets or more frequented parts it's the same; one is notified by a whistle, bell or call to make way for their convenience or be run into and take the consequences. Pedestrians have no right to walk the roadways only at their own risk. Will you help to set the wrong right?
R. H.

With reference to letter complaining of bicycle riding on sidewalks in Rogers Park, I beg to submit the following report from the commanding officer of the Thirty-fourth precinct:

"Every spring complaints of this nature are received at this station. As in most cases school children and juveniles are the chief violators, it usually takes a little time to cope with the situation. I personally instructed all members of my command several weeks ago relative to this matter, and also called their attention to it again upon receipt of this complaint, and I can safely say there has been a great improvement, and I believe that within a week or two there will be no further cause for complaint."

S. A. T. C. AND THE VICTORY BUTTONS.

Chicago, May 10.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—What are the S. A. T. C. men to have to show that they were in the service? From an article in a recent issue of your paper it looks as though these men are not going to be allowed to wear the new Victory button. Now, all along we were told that we were in the service, and just like any other men in the army. Are they planning a separate insignia for us?
B. G. F.

The war department stated that the men of the students' army training corps would not be permitted to wear this victory button, but a later decision of the judge advocate general, that the S. A. T. C. man had the same status of a drafted man in the army, may alter the original orders of the war department. We do not know of any special insignia being planned for these men.

JAPAN AND AMERICA.

Urbana, Ill., May 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Within the last few days the anti-American movement in Japan has become more and more serious. It might be worth while for us to look into the matter more closely at this particular time. Among all the papers dealing with this question, perhaps only the Japan Advertiser—a paper representing American interest in Japan, always friendly to the best in Japan and commanding the respect of thoughtful Japanese—has summarized all the charges made by the Japanese on the actions of the United States in a most concise and brief paragraph. This Tokio daily points out:

"It has become practically impossible for America to do anything that seems right in Japanese eyes. Are unfavorable comments made in New York on the president's policy, or political maneuvers started in Washington to embarrass him? These are [illegible] made public by 'official quarters' in Japan. Does trouble arise in Corea? Without needing to wait for the facts the newspapers announce that American missionaries are at the bottom of it, and to make the charge more convincing facile correspondents telegraph that missionaries have been arrested. Does America propose unified control of the Siberian railways, the only measures that can give practical relief to the situation there? It is a dodge to get control of the roads and resources of Siberia. Is the 'internationalization' of the Chinese railways suggested? It is an Anglo-American device to freeze out Japan. Does an American banker visit China? It is a sinister mission to supplant Japanese interests. Does America create an army with which to assist the hard pressed defenders of liberty in Europe? Japanese newspaper announces that 'one Germany has been slain but another has been born.' Does she build a merchant fleet in reply to the depredations of the submarine? We are duly informed that 'a new lord of the ocean has appeared.' America having created a great organization for war in order to obtain a victory which shall redeem the world from the menace of a rapacious militarism, the Japanese press monotonously bemoans her inconsistency, and its tone clearly implies incredulity of any motive other than the lust of power."

I shall not attempt to argue on these false charges point by point. I shall only ask a few questions in order to upset all of them. Has the United States in her history ever shown any desire to harry the peace of the far east in order to satisfy her own interests? Has she ever tried to change in the least her principles of the rights of the people? Can you give me a single instance in which she endeavors to do any mischief to the far east through her [illegible] work? Has she expressed a single desire in the Paris peace conference in order to fatten herself? The situation makes me feel as though I could not keep silence on this subject because of the injustice done to a great nation. And I dare say with emphasis that the anti-American movement originates from no other than those whose ambition is too great and who become too much jealous of the greatness and power of other nations.

CHICAGO'S SMOKE PROBLEM.

Stockton, Cal., May 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Chicago will never dissipate its smoke pall until its citizens who use bituminous coal as fuel receive some sort of an inspiration, either forced or voluntary, which will spur them to throw aside the antiquated systems now generally in vogue throughout the city and spend enough money to install modern coal burning equipment in their plants, guaranteed to eliminate the "smoke nuisance." The whole problem is one of commercial greed and selfishness on the part of the coal consumers, who, notwithstanding the fact that they are fully aware of existing conditions and know how to overcome them, consistently refuse to make the necessary investment.

Contrary to general belief that the large coal operators and distributors of Chicago are opposed to modern efficient methods of burning coal (on account of the reduced tonnage required), the writer found during his investigations that the biggest coal dealers in the city, both wholesale and retail, would be glad to furnish their customers with powdered coal whenever said [illegible] furnaces equipped to use it.

The answer to this "Smoke Problem" lies directly with you, Miss Chicago, and when you shall have passed such laws as to force your citizens to avail themselves of the discoveries of modern science in the efficient combustion of coal fuel, or, by some divine inspiration of civic pride, they do it voluntarily, then and only then, "O Beautiful," can you obtain your ideal, "the city Beautiful," a city of pride to its citizens and an attraction to visitors.

Yours for a smokeless Chicago.

THE RAINBOW IN CHAMPAGNE

by Walter B. Wolf... ADJUTANT, 84TH. INFANTRY BRIGADE.

The Rainbow (42d) division took part in the heaviest fighting of the American armies, on the Ourcq, at St. Mihiel, and in the Argonne forest. Previous to these engagements, however, it fought in the Fourth French army under Gouraud in the defense of the Champagne. Its share in this victory has been somewhat overlooked by American correspondents.

The following brilliant description from the pen of Lieut. Col. Walter B. Wolf of Chicago, who fought through the war as a Rainbow man, tells of the battle of July 15, probably the hardest single day's fighting in which the division was engaged. The account appears in Lieut. Col. Wolf's "History of the 42d Rainbow Division."

THE Rainbow's destination was the valley of the Marne between Vitry-le-François and Chalons-sur-Marne, where it arrived after a twenty hour rail journey, and was momentarily located in comfortable, though troopworn, towns along the Paris-Nancy highroad. Here it remained, luxuriating, for about four days. Without warning, it was transferred to the Fourth French army, commanded by the celebrated Gen. Gouraud, and then, on the sultry night of June 28-29, it made a long punishing march of thirty-five kilometers towards the front, and at dawn dragged into stations situated on and around the famous drill and maneuver ground known as the Camp de Chalons, fifteen kilometers behind the line, and also on both sides of the Chalons-Suippes road and at about an equal distance from those two towns. It was historic battle ground.

In nearly every stage of military combat it had played an important part, and at no time was it more fought over than in the present war. Its long, bare undulations were cut by military roads, running straight as an arrow, as well as by similar highways of the Romans. It was studded with historic names and reminiscent of Attila and the Saracens. In the present war it had been swept over by the Germans in 1914 when Chalons was taken, and the Germans swept back across it after the first battle of the Marne. The French jumped off from it in the Nivelle offensive of 1917. On its left flank were the famous Monts—Haut, Carnillet, Sans Nom, Teton, and Casque, taken at great cost and then held by the French. It was the Champagne—the arid and outlandish part of the Champagne, with not a vineyard, not a garden, and not a field of wheat—known, because of its meagerness, as the "lousy Champagne." It was very white and very desolate. The scrubby trees were dwarfed and gnarled and with their patchy foliage, merely emphasized the whiteness and glare of the scene. Heather abounded, chalk was everywhere; chalk reflected the heat and kept the cool of the ground in, made the roads firm, and finally afforded deep dugouts of great strength and resisting power. The only touch of color on the widths of these plains was the thick poppy fields, then full blown. Here the division was, immediately upon its arrival, ordered to prepare for a special operation with the [illegible] French army aimed to drive a wedge from Chatillon-sur-Marne in the direction of Olizy and Violaine into the new German positions on the north bank of the Marne in the locality of Dormans. Without delay, rehearsals of the attack, including the use of tanks, were inaugurated by the infantry brigades and carried out under the direction of the French corps commander, Gen. Pelle. Nothing before or since has ever been received with greater enthusiasm by the Rainbow.

All the infantry were eager to carry out the operation. It was, however, never carried out. The chance to swing back and carry the fight to the German, after months of defensive warfare, was deferred—deferred on the very morning when the infantry were prepared to move by trains back of Chalons, and the artillery and animal transportation was alerted to move by road. Instead, the Rainbow was, on July 4, amalgamated with Gen. Gouraud's army as an integral part of the defense by the 21st army corps against what, we were informed, would be the main offensive effort of the German, designed to force a conclusion of hostilities and the defeat of the allied cause. Upon the Fourth of July, our own national holiday, we accepted this responsibility as though it were a charge to defend the integrity of our own country, whose birth was that day being celebrated.

The Plan of Defense.

THE situation that we found, as the entire division took over on July 5 the defensive positions in the rear of the sectors held by the 170th and 13th French divisions, was one of incredible quietude. On this front before, during the period of the war, it has been estimated that more men had been killed and wounded for each minute of the war than at any other place in the line, not a shell came over by day, not an aeroplane was seen by day, and there was very little movement or circulation by day. At night, similar conditions prevailed; the infantry were virtually at a truce and but few guns were fired. Only the purr of the bomber's plane on these clear, luminous nights carried any martial suggestion.

As a matter of fact, the French awaited a German attack of great size and power on the front of Gen. Gouraud's army, and had brought careful and extensive plans to defend it to a state of completion. The positions on both our and the enemy's side were very strong by nature, and in addition had been organized for defense with incredible labor and detail. Accordingly, on the 7th of July, Gen. Gouraud published this order, now famous, of exhortation and of confidence in his command, of whom the soldiers of the Rainbow were the sole American members:

"To the French and American soldiers of the Fourth army:

"We may be attacked at any moment.

"You all know that a defensive battle was never engaged under more favorable conditions.

"We are awake and on our guard.

"We are powerfully reinforced with infantry and artillery.

"You will fight on a terrain that you have transformed by your work and your perseverance into a redoubtable fortress. This invincible fortress and all its passages are well guarded.

"The bombardment will be terrible. You will stand it without weakness.

"The assault will be fierce, in a cloud of smoke, dust and gas.

"But your positions and your armament are formidable.

"In your breasts beat the brave and strong hearts of free men.

"None shall look to the rear; none shall yield a step.

"Each shall have but one thought: to kill, to kill aplenty, until they have had their fill.

"Therefore, your general says to you: You will break this assault and it will be a happy day.

"[Signed] GOURAUD.

"By authority of the Chief of Staff.

PETTELAT."

In order to defeat the newly devised form of attack, which consisted in infiltrating through organized positions, Gen. Gouraud worked out a scheme by which he planned to break the entire shock of the German blow which he anticipated would be delivered by a superior number of troops and possibly supported by more artillery. It was to withdraw from those forward positions which the enemy would naturally plan to assault with the greatest forces, and on which he would, in preparation for this assault, put down his heaviest artillery blow; and in this way, the aggressive and brilliant French general reasoned, he would cause the force, probably the heaviest and most brutal force of the German blow, to fall in the void.

To carry out this plan of defense, he ordered the front line positions, that were extremely strong and had been built at great cost and which the German would never suspect would be voluntarily given up, to be evacuated at the moment the German attack was launched. The withdrawal from the front positions having been properly effected at the last moment, the plan of Gen. Gouraud was then to slaughter the enemy by artillery on the evacuated position and to complete the slaughter by the infantry on the intermediate and second positions directly in the rear. It was a daring plan, which could only be carried out by great boldness on the part of the defending troops, by measures calculated to deceive the enemy, and lastly, by the establishment of signal groups who would stay in the front line, and even though surrounded and cut off, advise the artillery and infantry as to the progress of the enemy. In furtherance of this plan, the 42d division had at first placed its infantry brigades upon, and its artillery brigade along, the second position, but was later ordered to send elements forward to the intermediate position, where the full brunt of the German blow would be struck, after the abandoned first position had been passed.

Accordingly, the 2d and 3d battalions of the 165th infantry, the 3d battalion of the 166th infantry, the 2d battalion of the 167th infantry, and Companies E and F, 2d battalion, 168th infantry, went forward to reinforce the two French divisions on the intermediate position, the rest of the infantry of the Rainbow and the entire engineer regiment holding the second position. Thus, on a front of thirteen kilometers and of two French divisions, the Rainbow garrisoned for the defense one-third of the first line, on which Gen. Gouraud planned to check the enemy, and the entire support line, and in addition had a number of elements advanced fordward to "sacrifice" stations in the front line position that was to be abandoned.

"Francois 570."

FOR an entire week the suspense continued. Finally, on the 14th of July, the French national holiday, the 21st army corps, with which the Rainbow was serving, called the 42d division to the telephone, gave it the signal—Francois 570—verified it, and said, "Good Luck!" This code signal meant that a general German attack on a wide front was expected to break, and was the order for all troops to take their battle posts and kill—and kill a-plenty—until the Germans had their fill. The suspense was broken. Troops who had been two nights on the alert of their posts and had borne the strain with indifference, were lolling in the patches of the woods or stretched at the bottom of the trenches for a heavy sleep. They were roused, covered with white dust that gave them an ashen and worn appearance. But they had but a few minutes more to wait.

Shortly before midnight the entire line started. Thousands of French guns broke the weeks of quiet and fired with an intensity that caused the atmosphere to shake with a constant rolling, unbroken sound. The deep roar of the heavy guns, smashing detonations of the middle calibers, and the bark of the 75s coalesced with the vibrating, swishing note of the departing projectile. It was a hellish music. To its accompaniment the stars were snuffed out and the skies turned in blotches and splashes and flashes to red, yellow, and green. The surface of the earth was like a shaking table. Back of the line of the Monts there was a perfect ribbon of flame, and, out of the void, where was the Montagne de Reims, the gun flashes loosed a matchless nocturnal rainbow. The 42d division, girdled by a semicircle of active guns, each firing its maximum rate, moved into a spectacle such as it never saw again. For ten minutes the French guns alone were firing, and, sharply on the break of midnight, the infernal intermingling of sounds that developed from our lines seemed suddenly to be silenced and a similar, wilder, and more violent one to rush from the Germans.

All of the German guns had broken loose; they had broken loose according to schedule. At 10:45 on the evening of July 14 we had been told by the French corps that the German attack would come about 4 o'clock the next morning, and that his artillery preparation would start at midnight; that this had been gained from prisoners taken in the very front lines, taken but a few minutes before, and that the French artillery would begin its counter-preparation at the very earliest moment. Every syllable of this message had proven to be correct. In the many instances of valor that this great battle afforded, the flashing raid led by the French lieutenant into the teeth of the German position after dark on the evening of the 14th of July, by which he gathered up and brought back at top speed to his lines a large number of prisoners from the assaulting troops, who gave the exact information as to when the enemy's artillery preparation would start and his assault begin, stands out as one of the most brilliant and certainly most valuable. And the premature launching of the allied artillery preparation which this information afforded, caused a carnage to the enemy that will long remain unknown. With absolute accuracy the artillery had thrown their metal far into the German lines and then brought it down forward to the abandoned lines in such a way as to catch the fresh troops that had been brought in for the assault in their assembly positions.

Attending this immense volume of artillery, in which the freaks of acoustics seemed to indicate a numerical superiority of the enemy, myriad rockets of all colors rose and fell while flares of every type sent out blinding and wavering planes of light. It was often so bright that one could read as though by day. Overhead was the sound of shells racing in both directions, and along the lines, and along the roads, and back in the towns were the spurts of light and the geysers of smoke that marked the end of their trajectories. The high road from Suippes to Chalons was in a mist of powder that hung among the great trees lining it; in Vadenay, Bouy, La Cheppe, and St. Remy-sur-Bussy fires had shot up and a black nimbus hung as though each were Pompeii and each doomed. Dumps, like great pyres, were burning in every direction, barracks and hutments were in flames, draft animals, surviving the destruction of their hitch, dashing maddened through the plain, fell from the wounds they had suffered. The white, dusty scene was slashed into a spectrum of color through which the mouths of many furnaces of conflagration showed the ugly teeth of the gutted works of man. For four hours this kept up and the transformation that these minutes worked is beyond the conception of the single mind.

Along the roads ammunition boxes were tumbled in irregular piles, men lay dismembered. Animals lay across the trails and most important roads, passed over and plowed through by the hard driven caisson and ammunition columns. The German preparation answered no rule. On the right of our sector it went deep into the camps of reserves back of the second position, and searched out the draws for trench and other artillery. Towards the rear it raked the roads and made the trails that were built for detours under these identical conditions a most welcome refuge.

Prairie Fire of Shells.

ON the Monts there was a prairie fire of bursting shells, and, lastly, on the front line position the projectiles rained, and rained, and rained—into the void. Breaking dawn carried with it the very tints and flashes that this wild night had shown, and day pulled across the landscape as unannounced, unobserved, and as silently as the European express train to its platform. This day was to hold the future of France and perhaps the civilized world.

Hardly was it light before the hitherto uninterrupted intensity of the roar of German guns was augmented to high straining, howling notes. The rolling barrage was launched at 4:15 a. m., and from behind it those German troops, which had not been caught in the brilliant handling of the French artillery, moved forward in wave after wave to the attack. Again the French artillery, and with it our own artillery, came down, and for a steady hour, with its sound, rolled high over that of the Germans. Enemy shells came in as though from aeroplanes. The German guns, not firing in the barrage, attended to the abandoned front and intermediate positions with their fire confined within an area of barely three kilometers in depth, designed to obliterate the garrison, and, so far as the few survivors were concerned, to shake their nerves asunder.

On came the German waves and into the trenches of the front line. Up went the rockets of the signal groups, and had it not been for the volume of other sounds, the click of their automatic rifles in self-defense, and against the engulfing would have been heard. The fight was bitter and violent, defending machine guns were cracking on a field of targets, and yet the German pushed on. The outpost position from the Monts to the Main de Messiges was in his hands by design of the French and with the greatest cost to the German. Halting but a moment and reforming, the machinery of the assault was again under way; now it was a different story. In some way the garrison on the intermediate positions, although bearing heavy casualties, had weathered the storm of the artillery of the enemy. On them, closer and closer, came the waves, and of a sudden fifty, a hundred, yea, five hundred groups of combat loosed at close range their small arms fire and light artillery [75s], from which no concealment was possible for the German.

The surging waves shivered and broke backward on the impregnable breakwater of the infantry. At this impact the force of the German assault started to spend itself. The lines of attack were halted in disorder, shattered, gashed by hand combat, and slaughtered by artillery in the abandoned positions and by infantry on the defended positions. Recoiling from the defense, the German tried to work around the points of resistance. The Catalaunian plains were not to be penetrated. Again and again the assault was renewed, but each time it was less.

There was a hopelessness in the last few efforts, and then it stopped. The intermediate position stood on the front of the 21st army corps with the exception of two small points on the extreme right in the sector of the 43d French division, into which the German had succeeded in penetrating by help of the broken terrain, and from these points he was shortly thereafter ejected. The German army, which by 10 o'clock had figured on being through the second position along the road from Suippes to Chalons, had taken with terrible loss just that which Gen. Gouraud was willing to concede them. On our left the enemy held the Monts, on our front they held the abandoned outpost lines, and on our right they were being thrown back where they had gained temporary foothold north of Perthes-lez-Hurlus. After ten hours the infantry attacks died out, the artillery fire continuing with high intensity. The battle was at an end.

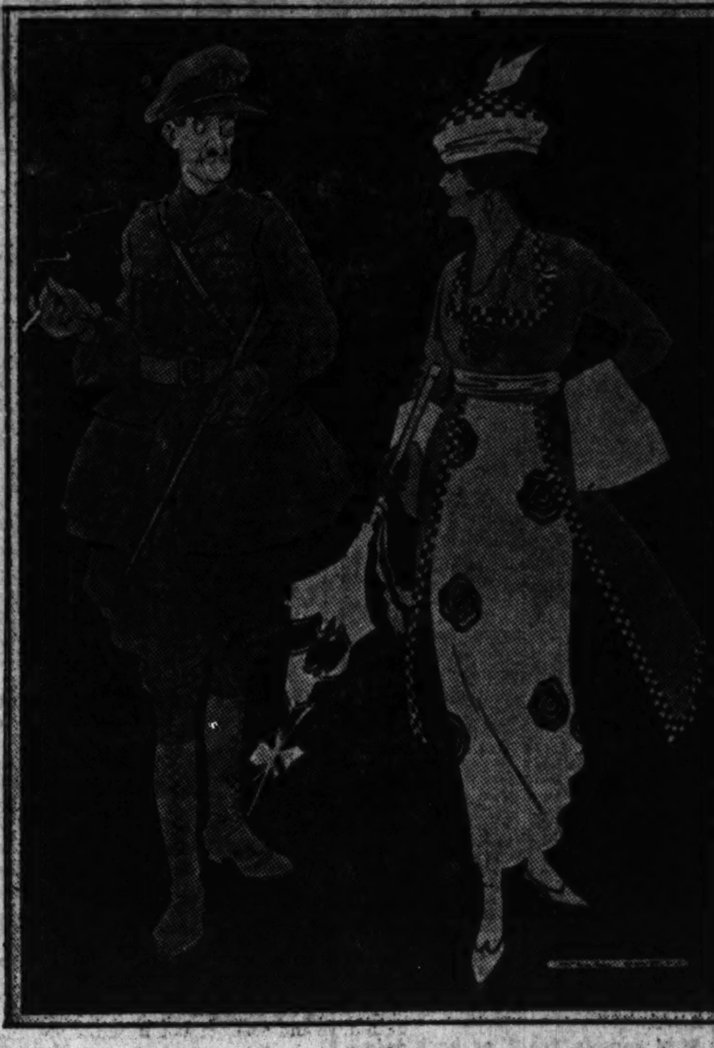
Rainbow Shifted Westward.

DURING the afternoon of the 15th and during the 16th of July the battle resolved itself into a vigorous artillery combat, attended by constant and daring harassing of all allied troops and all roads of flotillas of unpunished German planes. On the evening of July 18 the division on two hours' notice descended from the lines, and on July 21 entrained at St. Hilaire-au-Temple, Chalons-sur-Marne, Coolus, and Vitry-la-Ville for points on the Marne in the locality of Meaux and La Ferte-sous Jouarre, and about twenty kilometers southwest of Chateau Thierry. During the brief period between our withdrawal from the line and our entrainment, the entire complexion of the western front had changed, owing to the heavy defeat administered by Gen. Gouraud's army to the great German army.

This defeat carried larger, and more decisive results than the battle itself presented. From high morale and superiority of numbers, the German had been brought to a point where the forces on his side were about equal to those of the allies, and his morale had decidedly slumped. Troops from America, who had been coming in in ever-increasing numbers during the spring, were now known to be present in France in such a way and in such size that it was clear the balance of man power had been shifted in favor of the allies. American and French troops had gained a new impetus, and a new inspiration of victory. From long, tedious periods of defensive they saw before them an opportunity of picking up the offensive and holding it until the German capitulated. In the meantime Gen. Foch had swung all available troops into a savage and surprise attack in the locality of Soissons, which, by its success, unsteadied the lines along the Marne and put the entire salient of Tardenois in jeopardy. It was to this scene that the Rainbow proceeded.

"THE SECRETEST WALKS"

[From the Sketch, London.]



Gertie—She told me you told her that secret I told you not to tell her.
Bertie—My hat! I told her not to tell you I told her.
Gertie—I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me, so don't tell her I told you.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

"HULLO YOU, FODDER MAC!"

I do not mind the rack and din,
The toil and trouble, moil and sin,
Because I know awaiting me
I have a pal, and soon I'll see
Her little face against the pane
And hear her calling out again,
"Hullo you, Fodder Mac!"

She 'waits my coming in the gloam
And runs to meet me trudging home.
And, O, the love that lights her eyes,
The faith and trust and glad surprise,
And how her greeting charms my ear,
Her tiny treble ringing clear,
"Hullo you, Fodder Mac!"

A purple greeting from the great,
A salutation steeped in state,
Though trumpeted abroad by fame
Would be insipid, pale, and tame
Compared to hers that warms me through
Each evening in the dusk and dew,
"Hullo you, Fodder Mac!"

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"The Arrow of Gold" [Doubleday-Page], by Joseph Conrad.

"The Secret City" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.

"Dawn" [Houghton Mifflin], by Eleanor H. Porter.

"Green Valley" [Little-Brown], by Katharine Reynolds.

"Rosy" [Harpers], by Louis Dodge.

"Clinton and Others" [Dodd-Mead], by Archibald Marshall.

WAR.

"Belgium" [Appleton], by Brand Whitlock.

"The Grand Fleet" [Doran], by Rear Admiral Sir John Rushwood Jellicoe.

"Prisoner of U-90" [Houghton Mifflin], by Lieut. Edouard Victor Isaacs.

NONFICTION.

"Yashka" [Stokes], by Maria Botchkareva.

FOR a whimsicality which pricks one's flabby wits into action, for sheer charming sentiment, unadulterated by sloppy sentimentality, for wholly alluring characters, for a completely delightful, rollicking book you can't beat "Christopher and Columbus" [Doubleday-Page], by the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden." One dramatic moment stumbles on the heels of the one before, from the time that Anna-Rose and Anna-Felicitas, twins, half German, half English orphans, sit huddled together on the deck of their Santa Maria until having discovered America they become wholly English and wholly American by starting out on a voyage to the terra incognita of marriage. They are the most outspoken youngsters that ever declared they were not children—quite the contrary—and belied their declarations by their conversations. And Mr. Twist, who finds them on his hands, willy-nilly, is one of the most lovable characters that ever was suspected of "conduct." Speaking of conduct reminds me of one of Anna-Felicitas' naive remarks, "I don't see how anybody is ever to fall in love unless there's been some conduct first." If I were making up a bundle of books to banish the blues I'd start with "Christopher and Columbus."

"The I. W. W., a Study of American Syndicalism," by Paul Frederick Brissenden, Ph. D., special agent of the United States department of labor, is volume 83 of the Columbia university studies in history, economics, and public law, published by Longmans, Green & Co. The monograph is based on a thorough study of all the available material about the I. W. W.'s and the personal testimony of many of the leaders of the movement. The movement calls its members bolsheviki in Russia, Spartacans in Germany and Austria, syndicalists in France and Italy, and Commonwealths in Great Britain.

The tidal wave of anti-prohibition books is upon us. Everybody has something to say either solemn or silly about July 1, and sometimes they are both at the same time. "The Whole Truth About Alcohol" [Macmillan] is the latest complete drenching that we have suffered. After a few chapters of George Elliot Flint's fiery denunciations of those who would deprive us of our light and life in our joyous little noggin, who would take from us pore working folks the comfort and cheer of our harmless jug of ale, to say nothing of our elevating mug o' suds, one longs for the recall of that dear dead day beyond it, when one forgot to put a cross in the wrong, I mean the right, place. And now Christopher Morley, that safe and sane husband, father, column conductor, and rocking horse poet, is collaborating with Bart Haley. Their joint effort will bring forth "The Sweet Dry and Dry," which will be published on July 1 by Boni and Liveright.

The public library has posted the list of books recommended for children by the Child Welfare department of the United States bureau of labor. The list is of books on health and hygiene.

Kerensky's "The Prelude to Bolshevism" [Dodd-Mead] is a volume of permanent historical value. As prime minister of Russia he had a grandstand seat for the Kornilov uprising—the prelude to bolshevism.

"War Finance" [Houghton Mifflin] is a comprehensive volume on a really interesting phase of the great struggle by C. W. Barron, who for thirty years has been head of the Boston news bureau, which set the pace in financial journalism. Another book of interest especially to financiers, but equally readable by amateurs, is Prof. Jacob H. Hollander's "War Borrowing" [Macmillan], which explains the part credit played in the war.

D'ye remember the little boy who asked his mother who made elephants, and when he was told that God made them, asked who made flies, and when his mater assured him that the same divine hand fashioned them both suggested that it was pretty fiddly business makin' flies when one could make elephants. J. D. Beresford's "The Jervaise Comedy" [Macmillan] reminds me of that story. Pretty fiddly business writin' books like that when one can write the Jacob Stahl trilogy. It's a declaration of his dexterity and his versatility, but time's sure to swat it.

A new edition of Clara E. Laughlin's "Foch the Man" [Revell] has just come out, with new chapters, bringing the narrative down to the signing of the armistice and subsequent events in the life of the sturdy general. Perhaps the next edition will take the hero into Germany at the head of an army.

Waldo Frank has written a charming little monograph of "The Art of the Vieux Colombier," the inimitable little French theater that Jacques Copeau fashioned in New York. M. Copeau will lecture on the theater and its mission this afternoon at the Playhouse. The proceeds from the lecture will go toward the fund with which Bryn Mawr college will endow a "Victory chair of French literature."

THE UNIVERSITY MACHINE

By Carl H. Grabo

THE president of the great eastern university rose in response to the toast and said various complimentary things. But incidentally he remarked that the greatness of a university lay in its staff of teachers and not in its buildings. His host, the president of the great western university, realized that the insinuation was malicious and meant for him, for the great western university was notoriously given to expensive architecture. I forget now what defense the western president made; he said, as I remember, that he had both men and buildings.

Fifteen years after this friendly brush the eastern university president and his board of trustees started to purify the faculty of all "disloyal" elements—those, that is to say, whose political opinions did not coincide with theirs. The eastern university received much free advertising thereby, but both its staff and its prestige were incalculably weakened. In the western university, meanwhile, there had been no impairment of the right of free speech. Nor were there charges of disloyalty, dismissal, or other evidences of tyranny and persecution.

The moral to the story, if any, seems to be that buildings, presidents, and trustees are most useful when least conspicuous and when they interfere least with the real business of a university, which is to inspire young men and women with the love of books and thinking.

A medieval university was at first nothing more than a teacher or group of teachers and the students who sought them out demanding instruction. Buildings and land and money bequests from the pious and the wealthy came later. And with these in time grew rules, administrators, traditions, and all the machinery necessitated by large properties in lands, buildings, and libraries, and by the business of granting degrees. A university ceased to be a free, intangible, spiritual entity. It became an institution, with all the rigidity and lack of soul characteristic of institutions.

The American university, which has tried to grow up over night and in a decade rival Oxford or Cambridge, is a triumph of American push and aggressiveness. It is built on the lines of our large businesses, our trusts and corporations. If we are going in for higher education, thinks the American, and it seems the thing to do, let us have the biggest and most expensive universities in the world and the most of them. So we have, and they are a handsome lot, from Cambridge to Berkeley. Yet the suspicion that they are not satisfactory in every respect is frequently expressed.

AMERICANS and American institutions are curiously homogeneous. All our critics from abroad comment upon our lack of variety. The fault is manifest in our universities as everywhere else. These are big, showy, and handsome. They are solidly financed and well advertised. And they are run on the best corporation lines, with a shrewd board of trustees to look after the investments and a good business administrator to serve as president, raise money, and present an annual statement of income, output, and manufacturing costs. The men who teach are employés hired and paid in accordance with the laws of supply and demand in the labor market.

It is idle to lay the blame for these defects, if they are such, solely upon the universities, which are only representative of the American spirit and American ideals of success. That this is so may be seen if one compares our state institutions with those privately endowed. The state institutions are more nearly controlled by public sentiment than those under private management. But so far as I can see they are no less material minded and are even less free in spirit than the universities privately endowed.

The deans in the various schools in the state university and the heads of departments appear before the state regents and present their claims for appropriations. The dean of the engineering school endeavors to show the exceptional value of his work and thus get a larger appropriation and more buildings than the dean of the school of agriculture. And the dean of the arts colleges, unable to make so tangible a showing of efficiency, is lucky to get anything at all. Size, numbers, material achievement—these are the tests of success.

It is a fair consequence of these standards that the able president of a state normal school was asked to resign because his school had not grown rapidly enough. That the school's scholastic standards had been raised and that its graduates were better trained than before was not considered. Perhaps the fact was unknown by those in authority, though it should have been.

THE president of a state university must inevitably play politics to some extent in the effort to secure large appropriations. In one instance, at least state university funds were used to buy advertising in newspapers, the object being to influence voters in behalf of large university appropriations—a curious state of things, surely. Nor is the president of the privately endowed college often much happier in his financial responsibilities. The president of a little college was recently asked to resign because he had failed to raise enough money. He protested that the gifts he had secured were greater than his salary. The trustees replied that though this was true the gifts did not equal his salary plus his traveling expenses. He was therefor dropped like any other unsuccessful salesman.

The unrepresentative character of the board of trustees in privately endowed institutions has been the theme of much sharp criticism. Trustees are chosen largely for their wealth and position rather than for any educational knowledge. They are counted upon to administer the university property wisely and to give buildings and money as the university may need these. Also they give their time freely. Graduates of the university are, however, slightly represented on the board, if at all. And the faculty is represented only by the president, whom the trustees appoint.

In some notorious instances trustees have abused their authority to repress free speech and have forced teachers who have expressed heterodox ideas to resign. Yet during the war, when persecution of individual opinion was widespread, it was not the private institutions, despite the wide publicity of certain notorious exceptions, which were most illiberal. The worst offenders were the state universities. There, popular condemnation, mob rule worked more effectively than in private institutions. The stories of persecution and supression, of petty rivalries, hatreds and jealousies, of tittle-tattl, false charges, and public hearings make sorry reading. Nor is the situation much better now. Freedom of speech is effectively denied in more than one state university today, and if the public hears nothing of the matter it is because the teachers are cowed and dare speak only privately.

OUR universities make more or less show of democratic organization and the faculty has a thousand different duties and powers in small administrative matters. But the power is more seeming than actual, for it does not reach to the expenditure of the university's money. Nor has the faculty any voice in the selection of trustees and regents. And rarely does it have a voice in the selection of a president.

Th atthe faculty would run a university more efficiently than do the president and the board of trustees is unlikely enough. Yet the exercise of greater powers and responsibility would undoubtedly be wholesome for the teachers themselves. Democracy is admirable, is it not, because it is good for people to learn how to govern themselves, even though badly, rather than be governed by others, however wisely and well?

What then of the students? Rumors from revolutionary Russia and Germany tell of universities whose students have overthrown the autocracy of dean and president and are running the institutions on new lines, with what faculty participation in power is not clear. There are few university teachers who would not shudder at revolution pushed to such heights as this, for how many of our present faculties would survive a student referendum and recall?

The college student has no hand in the management of the school which educates him. He is guided or coerced into the courses of study thought good for him. He is examined and graded, supervised and followed up. When he gets too far below in his studies or flies too much in the face of the regulations, his dean speaks seriously to him. The college student is treated more or less as a child and consequently often enough acts like one.

Though this casual paper is no reform document, some probable changes in the constitution of universities and their management can be forecast. When our social ideals evolve a bit more and as a people we demand institutions more democratic than we know today; when we learn to prefer quality to quantity and cease to measure success in terms of money, notoriety, and numbers—when all these things are so universities will doubtless change too.

There have been some interesting modern revivals of the medieval form of university: teachers and students coming together anywhere and seeking knowledge with no thought of marks, attendance, degrees, and all the endless business of formal education. The Rand school in New York is, I am told, such an institution, and there are others like it throughout the country. The students call the teachers whom they wish to lecture and answer questions on topics which the students select. If the teacher isn't liked he isn't asked again. There are no degrees and regulations, for only those come who wish to learn, and they come only to learn.

It all sounds very attractive to the college teacher weary of marks, degrees, attendance sheets, faculty meetings, restrictions, rules, and what nots. Our big universities, with their buildings, equipment, and traditions, can never attain such freedom as this. But they may be wholesomely stimulated by the competition of the university which has discarded all machinery and, like the medieval friar and palmer, attains happiness and freedom in the renunciation of material things.

Have we such a corset? Yes, we have. It is a Warner corset in the hands of our corsetieres—for the Warner corset, properly fitted and properly worn, not only brings grace and poise to the figure, but is thoroughly comfortable as well. We find, unfortunately, that too many women are wearing a model never intended for their figure, with the result that they are not nearly as comfortable as they could be. Their figure has not the poise it should have, and the corset does not wear properly. Why not let our corsetieres choose a Warner corset for you? A model for every type of figure. Simply [illegible]c to Ungraceful Women

Every corset should have a real, definite mission—should be chosen with care and consideration for the figure. The difficulty at so many stores really is that they carry so small a variety that even though they know just which model you should wear, they haven't it in stock. Here you find Warner corsets featured in so wide a range of models that we can fit accurately and correctly every figure—bringing health, comfort and a fashionable figure—that is why ours is Chicago's busiest corset store. Our corps of corsetieres is admittedly the largest and best in Chicago, and their services are yours for the asking without charge. Why not ask their aid?

Warner Corset in a handsome flesh brocade, for the average figure, medium high bust, slight taper at the waist, absolutely straight back, being boned with side steels in back section, six hose supporters; sizes to 30, at 5.00

Warner Corset for the tall average figure which requires a very low bust, but not topless; long skirt, takes good care of a moderately full figure; sizes 21 to 36, at 2.50

Mrs. A. E. Cook is one of the patronesses of the dance festival which will be given on Saturday evening at the Evanston's Woman's club for the benefit of the Chicago Lighthouse.

Mrs. Richard Finnegan w'l take part in "Suppressed Desires," a one-act comedy, which will be one of three given by the Edgewater drama study class at the Rogers Park Woman's club on Thursday evening.

Wider Interest in Civic Affairs City Club's Aim

THE Woman's City club will move in June to larger quarters in the Stevens building. Larger quarters will bring greater club privileges.

There is no other club like the Woman's City club in the United States. The keynote of its purpose is service to the community, not only through the officers and the chairmen of committees but through the conscious effort of the individual members. Consequently it differs from other women's clubs in desiring and seeking a large membership.

The first item on its post-war program is the increase of its membership from 3,000 to 5,000. The candidate needs but one proposer and the single requirement is a lively interest in civic affairs.

The club's announced purpose is to bring together women interested in promoting the welfare of Chicago. Through the work of the committees and the bulletin published once a month it distributes widely a knowledge of public affairs. It continually endeavors to arouse a sense of social responsibility for the safeguarding of the home, the maintenance of good government, and the ennobling of that larger home of all, the city.

During the coming year the club hopes to help mold public opinion through bringing to its membership reliable information regarding certain abuses and mistakes in the administration of the city government. It believes that through an enlightened and aroused public opinion the city administration may be influenced to change the present plan of procedure.

Perhaps of the club committees the one having in charge interest in the bathing beaches and public comfort stations has the largest of the immediate tasks.

The city welfare exhibit will continue to keep its displays up to date and will pursue its journeys through the state.

Another committee has inaugurated a campaign to secure clean air for the city.

These are only a few of the twenty-four committees dealing with every phase of city and county affairs as they affect the community and the individual citizen. Markets, housing, and moving pictures are among them. Not the least important this year will be those dealing with public health and with the city schools.

Twenty-five of the city ward organizations of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense have voted to join forces with the Woman's City club. With the present club and the added strength of the wards and the proposed 2,000 new members, a formidable array can be mustered to fight against that indifference of the average citizen toward the administration of civic affairs which is the great enemy of present day Chicago.

The officers are: Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, president; Mrs. John V. Farwell, first vice president; Mrs. William S. Hefferan, second vice president; Mrs. Treat Campbell, treasurer; Mrs. James L. Houghteling, secretary; Mrs. Charles F. Harding, assistant secretary.

All of these women, as well as the chairmen of many of the committees, have been in charge of some of the larger aspects of the war work of the last two years.

The Bryn Mawr club benefit to endow a chair of French at Bryn Mawr college takes place this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Playhouse. Newport Summer Season Taking On Old Time Gayety

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—Every day brings postscripts to the general statement that Newport is waking up. Cottages are not only taken but are beginning to be occupied. The famous watering place is taking on the aspect that it wore before the war. No place on this continent has for the last four years more accurately, more sadly reflected our great world calamity than this gay spot. It has been pensive and gloomy and dull. This year it will be gay.

Even the former ambassador from Russia and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Bakmeteff, will have the villa which they have occupied for so long. It is the former residence of the late James Gordon Bennett, Stone Villa, on the main boulevard.

Two of the most picturesque features of the summer colony used to be the East Indian servant of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, who used to open the huge door to Marble house dressed in his full native costume, and the Russian footmen of the former ambassador. They wandered about the lawn when not occupied with their duties, and their red turbans and sashes gave [illegible] a unique character to the awfully smart resort.

I doubt if they have those highly specialized footmen now. Just the garden variety of New York chauffeur and doorman they have probably found can answer their purpose today. However, with or without servants, the smart set of Newport is glad to have them present, for the Bakmeteffs were always favorites and their dinners celebrated.

In one particular the personnel will change, and residents are regretting the fact. Mrs. Richard Stevens, who has been there for so many seasons, has decided to go elsewhere this summer. She has sublet her villa. Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, friends of Mr. Stevens, opened their house this week. Mrs. Stevens, you may remember, was voted one summer to be the best dressed woman in Newport.

The summer will probably be enlivened with at least one wedding and one divorce. Miss Lesley Frederica Pearson, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. Frederick Pearson, will be married to Henry B. P. Ripley, and Mrs. Pearson will go to Armsea villa early in July to make extensive preparations for the smart nuptials.

Meantime, as you doubtless know, Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, who with the death of her father, Luther Kountze, is one of the richest women of the fashionables hereabouts, is applying for absolute divorce from her husband. She will occupy Flint cottage and it is reported it will be gay, while the proceedings are getting under way. Her mother will be at Hunneylea in Bellevue avenue.

Then there is, of course, another divorce to cheer the smart set along. It does not excite them so much, however, because they have predicted it for some eight years. Just as the French family got their lovely young tawny haired widow, Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, so happily married, Mrs. Jack Gerharty, another daughter of the family, is applying for divorce. Her romance with her chauffeur has not turned out happily at all. People thereabouts have been saying so for a long while. At any rate, it will furnish something to talk about during the summer.

No country season has ever in the history of man started so early as this one. People are actually in their country homes, installed there like the Rock of Ages. Dr. and Mrs. Preston Pope Satter White gave a luncheon in their country home at Great Neck, Long Island, for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George Barnett. Indeed they gave a luncheon and a dinner party both in the same week. Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Aldrich, in their country house at Great Neck, also gave a big luncheon. Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich had sixteen guests in their party. Dr. and Mrs. Satter White had thirty at a dinner and sixty for a Sunday luncheon.

These entertainments are merely typical of what is going on socially in the summer places in and around New York. Usually the season is not far enough advanced for this sort of thing before the last of June or the first of July.

It Used to Be Chalk—Then Came Face Powder

But the Final Word in Beautifiers Is LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER—the Most Beneficial, Lasting and Sensible Way of Applying Powder to the Skin.

It's hard to describe in words just what LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER is like. It is so entirely new and distinct from any other toilet article on your dresser.

LA MEDA is different from a cold cream because it possesses a satin texture never attained by a cream. It is also different from ordinary face powder because it is not dry but creamy and soft.

The secret of LA MEDA'S popularity is to be found in the fact that instead of lying like a layer of dust on the surface of the skin, it penetrates, and protects every tiny pore—every microscopical crease—clinging and beautifying all day long. For the face, arms and neck, there is nothing quite so satisfactory.

Any dealer can get LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER for you, or we will send it postpaid upon receipt of 65 cents a jar.

It is prepared in three tints—Flesh, White and Peachblow.

A sample will be mailed free upon postcard request, giving your name, address, and tint desired, and mention your dealer's name.

Corns, Calluses Quit Quick!

Two Drops of "Gets-It" Will Do It.

Ever hand-carve your toe with a knife trying to get rid of a corn? Ever use scissors and snip off part of the corn too close to the quick? Ever pack up your toe with "contraptions" and plasters as though you were packing a glass vase for parcel post? Ever use greasy ointments that rub off on your stocking? Ever use sticky tape that gets jerked off when you pull your stocking off? Kind o' foolish, when 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" on any corn or callus gives it a quick, painless, peaceful, dead-sure funeral! Why putter and suffer? "Gets-It" stops corn pains, it lets you work, smile and dance, even with corns. It's the common-sense way, the only simple, easy way—peels corns off like a banana peel. Used by millions. It never fails.

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Manufactured by Alvin K. Murkle, advanced radical and advocate of the bolshevist doctrines, is giving a little talk on "dynamic reconstruction." Reconstruction, according to Alvin's theory, consists principally in pulling down everything in sight—especially religion and morality, "which are all bunk anyway." A lady in the audience has just asked if it is true that the bolshevists are killing people right and left.

Alvin is naturally astounded at such a question. Although it happens that Alvin does not know a word of Russian, he was in Petrograd for a week and heard nothing but expressions of brotherly love and happiness—"and surely if there had been any unrest it would have come to my ears!"

"Reconstruction"

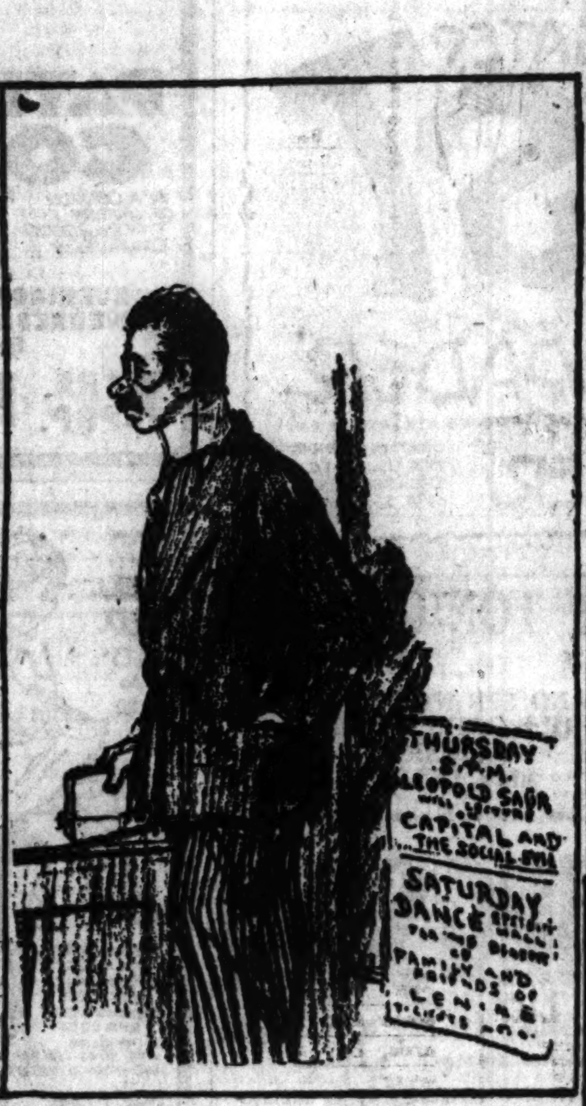
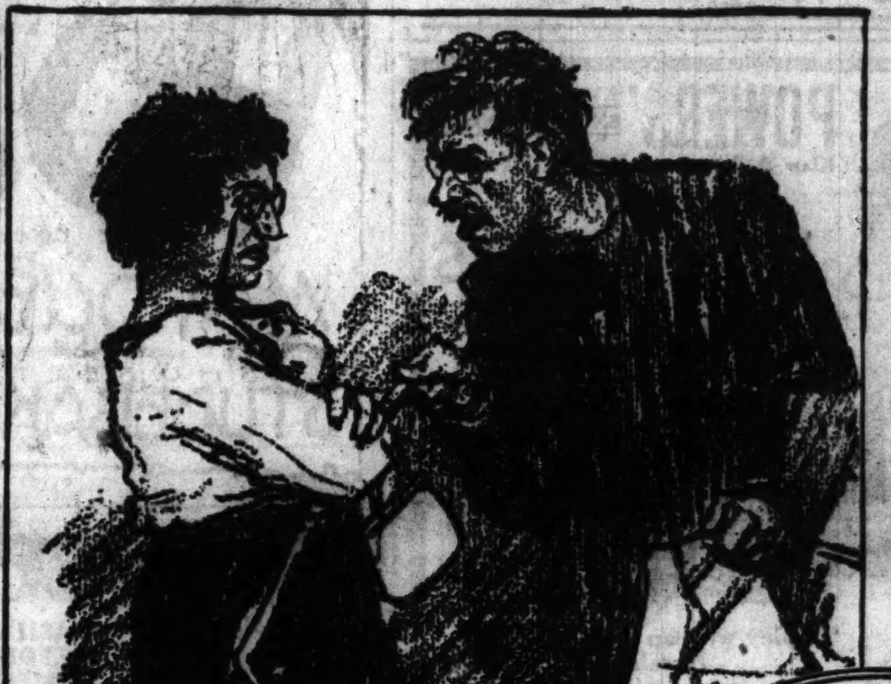
"My dear, at first I thought he had awfully cruel eyes, but the more I look at him the more I feel that he has the kindest eyes I ever saw!" Three ladies of the parlor bolshevist variety who, though a bit startled at Comrade Murkle's doctrines on "dynamic reconstruction," are convinced that no bolshevist would ever seize their property.

Comrade Boom, philosophical anarchist, takes occasion to speak slightly of the old fashioned idea of state socialism and feels that the basis of all reconstruction should be in the "Rule of Common Consent." In other words, let's all be supermen, each man a law unto himself.

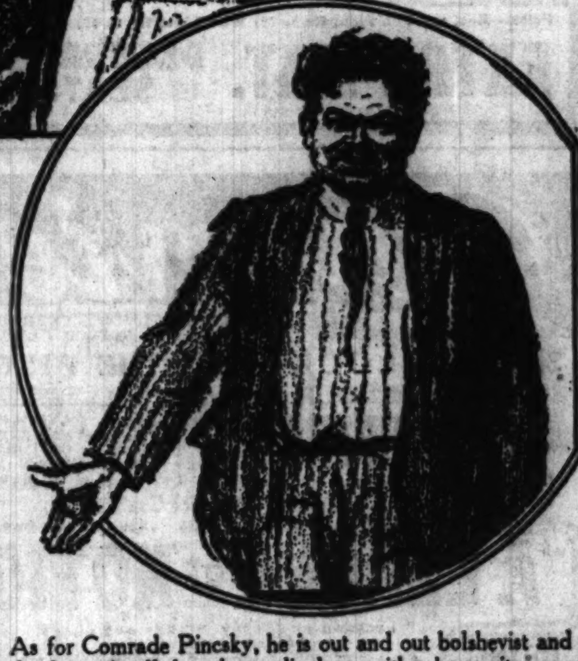


THURSDAY 8 P.M. LEOPOLD SAGR WILL LECTURE ON CAPITAL AND THE SOCIAL EVIL
SATURDAY DANCE

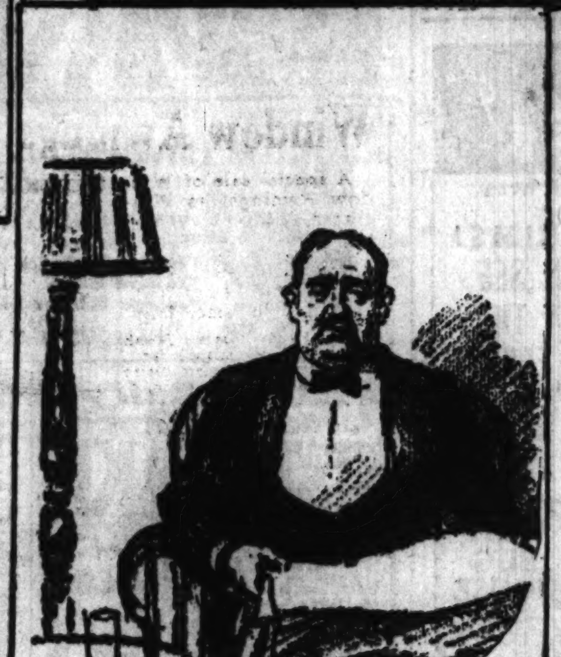
Comrade Wypeman is a syndicalist and thinks Comrade Boom all wrong. The only way to reconstruct the world is to start in with syndicalism, says Comrade Wypeman, which is direct action and applied anarchy.



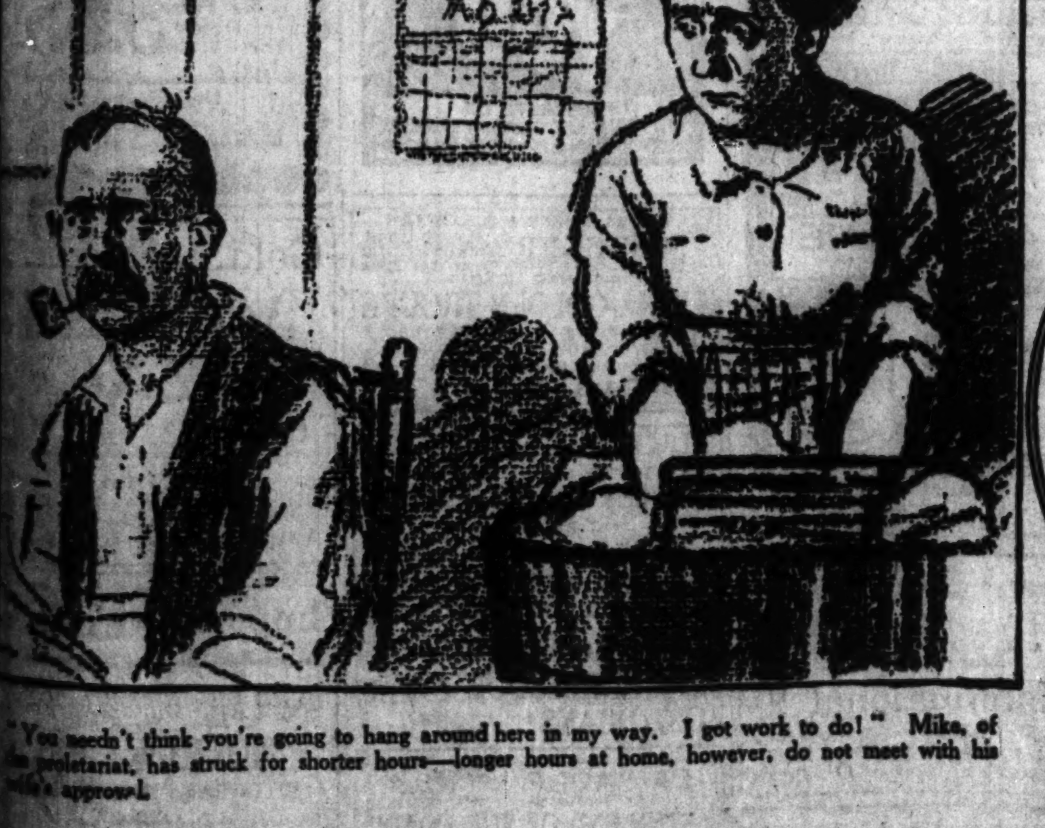
Joe Hod, on the other hand, is all for I. W. W., when it comes to making over society. It is the most idealistic—besides, doesn't it preach sabotage, which is much better than syndicalism? Joe's audience is Miss Linda Waw, who secretly leans to the bolshevists, who will allow any lady between 18 and 80 to choose her own husband. Miss Waw, by the way, bobbed her hair years before Mrs. Castle thought of it.



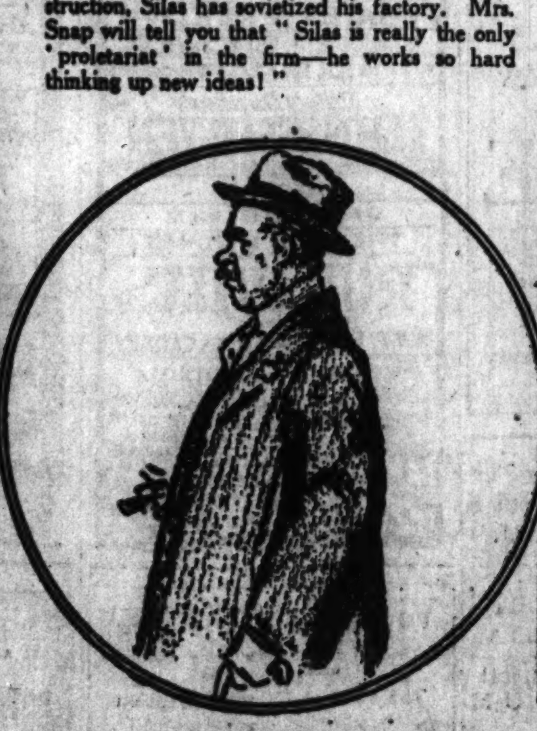
As for Comrade Pincsky, he is out and out bolshevist and is dead certain all the other radicals are either hypocrites or are on the wrong track. "Do evil that good may come of it," argues Comrade Pincsky. "Go out and kill if necessary. Rob the robbers." Comrade Pincsky's idea on reconstruction is at least a great little get-rick-quick scheme.



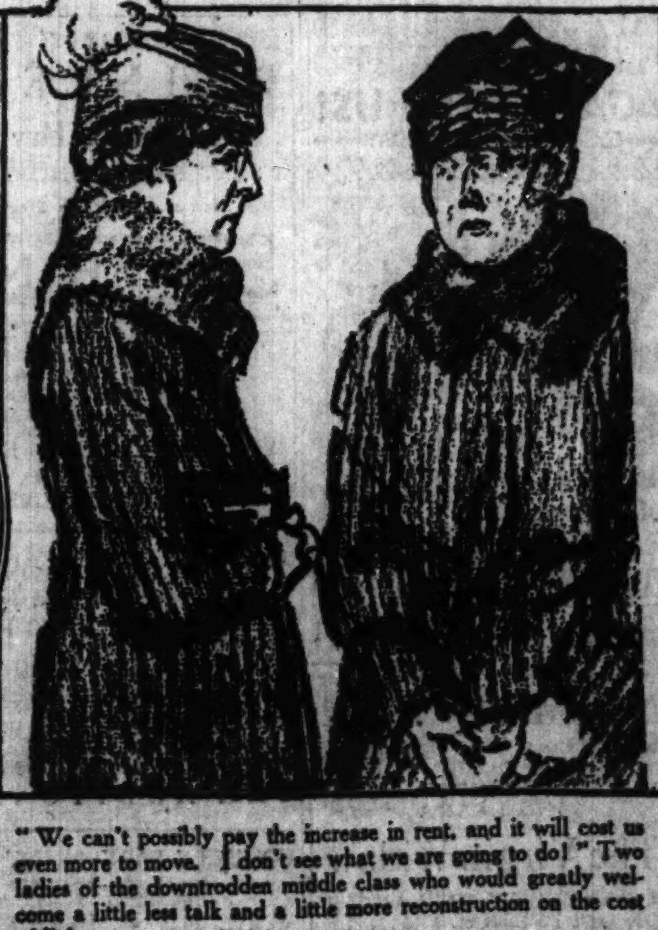
Preparedness is Silas T. Snap's motto. What with all this labor unrest and need for reconstruction, Silas has sovietized his factory. Mrs. Snap will tell you that "Silas is really the only 'proletariat' in the firm—he works so hard thinking up new ideas!"



"You needn't think you're going to hang around here in my way. I got work to do!" Mike, of the proletariat, has struck for shorter hours—longer hours at home, however, do not meet with his wife's approval.



Mr. Anson Gregg is conservative. He is somewhat pessimistic on the problem of reconstruction. "No use doing anything till the Republican party gets back in power!"



"We can't possibly pay the increase in rent, and it will cost us even more to move. I don't see what we are going to do!" Two ladies of the downtrodden middle class who would greatly welcome a little less talk and a little more reconstruction on the cost of living.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

WHEN a captivating little waif cuddles up to a dejected and hard-drinking young millionaire in the first act and by her glad, glad charm coaxes him out of the gloom of self and into the sunlight of others, you may wager with comparative impunity that all is well with your evening's entertainment.

Especially when the small Pollyanna is played by so unerring an artist as the child in "A Prince There Was," and the melancholy millionaire by so honest an actor as Mr. Grant Mitchell. As they sit together among the silken cushions of Mr. Mitchell's sumptuous apartments in the Plaza—she all in rags and smiles, he morbid but melting—even the chilliest of you will glow with a salubrious reaction.

She has walked miles and miles (for she has no carfares) and her shoes hurt her, and she is hungry and an orphan; yet she is brave, cheery, and altruistic. He is richly caparisoned in a satin dressing gown, he has a worshipful man servant and a yacht, no doubt, and he is half full of highballs. Yet is he glum and bent upon bourbon and oblivion. The natural and potent processes whereby she unconsciously weans him from the milk of the wild cow to the milk of human kindness tempt you, in case you are rich and inebrious, to wish that you, too, might have a littile fairy in your flat.

How pleasant, in the drama, are the paths of regeneration. Just as you are about to drink yourself to death, a benignant cherub appears and gives you the address of a boarding house inhabited by a pretty lady novelist who needs encouragement. Your fortune is large, its functions are foolish; George Parsons, the magazine publisher and your best friend, is worried about you, and so is Ernest Stellard, your doglike valet, who serves you the whisky and siphon, reluctant. So you toss a coin, engage lodgings at the boarding house, and go there to see what this lady novelist is like. And you fall in love with her, you quit drinking, and you give her, in the last act, the kiss, stage center, indicative of the married bliss which gleams, traditional, in the speculative and dubious aftermath of all the dramas. It is the primrose path of reformation. Popular plays stop at the rainbow's end, but they don't investigate it.

In a play so successful as "A Prince There Was" a minor fault or two may be found, perhaps, without incurring the anger of those who remove their sandals, burn incense, and genuflect as they enter the local temple of their hero, George M. Cohan's Grand opera house. This morning I shall let my correspondents speak of piffling flaws which, while interfering with their pleasure, did not altogether remove it. One man noticed that, though the forlorn little slavey told how hungry she was in the Plaza, she passed up with a stage nibble and a sip the cake and milk provided for her. "She said she was hungry; why didn't she eat?" he demands, a pragmatic occupant of the Monadnock block who suspects naught of symbols or expedients. He should know that to perform this slight illusion the Vernon child would have to do without her dinner or be overfed. He lacks imagination. The banana and the wisp of celery in the drama suggest more than the loaves and fishes of the parable.

Another writes that, though the story obviously takes place in wartime, only the remotest reference is made to that great thing. "They speak of the Red Cross incidentally, and we are led to believe by other slight remarks that Americans are fighting in France. Which made me suspect that the hero was a slacker or that the playwright was. It should have been left out altogether or recognized. The war," he concludes, "was slipped in to make the play up to date, and I suppose that it fools the boobs."

Still another complains that a Chicago telephone directory is used instead of a New York telephone directory, though he ought to be grateful that we creep however carelessly into the American drama. My sole friend in Evanston writes that she thinks it is an error for the author to change two popular characters of the second act into two unpopular characters in the third. That, she says, is foreign to the rules. But, learned ladies and gentlemen, "A Prince There Was" is sentimentality, duly diluted by George Cohan, and it is a combination that withstands us all. You'll like it, even if it isn't good.

Amendments have been made to "Peggy, Behave," in which Miss Wilette Kershaw is doing very well at the Olympic, and the author of them is Ring W. Lardner, the local feuilletonist. It appears that Miss Kershaw was dissatisfied with the contretemps of the second act, involving the introduction of a suburban fire department in scarlet lingerie, and she commissioned Mr. Lardner to invent a new episode, less bizarre. The result of Mr. Lardner's intercession is absence of the picturesque nozzle men of Owen Davis' version, and the substitution thereof of a stentorious chief of police. This new figure in the play is equipped with many racy observations, characteristic of the rôle and of its author, and he runs the show from the time of his entrance until it is over. Mr. Lardner, by the way, is soon to renounce journalism for the more remunerative and less arduous occupation of playwright. His dramatic works at present include a song, "Prohibition Blues," sung by Miss Nora Bayes in New York; the scenario of a play, presenting Mr. Bert Williams as the trainer of a baseball club, and a check for $3,000 from Elliott, Comstock & Gest, as advance royalty for his initial product, when and if it is finished.

OBSERVATIONS

"AN OCCASIONAL READER," from the studious environs of the University of Chicago, sends an article on "Hamlet" (which Mr. Hampden has been playing at the Princess, and Mr. Kellerd at the Auditorium), and cites it as a really bad example of burlesque and irreverence. It is by A. B. Walkley of the London Times, the drama's First Critic, and it is to be found in his volume of "Playhouse Impressions," the best of the essays in English on the theater. It was suggested by Edwin Booth's performance of what the correspondent calls "the nutty Dane," and it takes the form of a newspaper report.

SHOCKING AFFAIR IN OHIO—A SPIRITUALIST GOES MAD, AND MURDERS A WHOLE FAMILY.

The American papers are full of a tragic story from Jewett, O. A young Harvard student, Silas P. Hamlet, whose mother, Gertrude, had married her deceased husband's brother, Col. Z. Claudius, had fallen a victim to the wiles of the spirit-rapping fraternity, by whom he was deluded into believing that his late father, Judge Hamlet, had been POISONED BY THE COLONEL.

This delusion, coupled with the young man's conscientious objection to marriage with a deceased huband's brother, so worked upon his mind that he guyed his stepfather, the colonel, in some private theatricals, and shot Old Br'er Polonius, the faithful colored servant of the family, whom he found airing his eye

AT THE KEYHOLE.

For this offense he had to get away for a time to Texas, but, returning unexpectedly, forced Artemus W. Laertes, one of the best waltzers in New Athens, O., into a duel with rifles. Both combatants perished, but not until the colonel had been shot by his stepson, and his lady had been accidentally poisoned by drinking from a bottle of horse liniment that had been brought on the ground. The leading citizens have subscribed to give the family a first class funeral.

From this morning's New York Times:

It having been frequently said of Booth Tarkington that his writings for the stage and for the easy chair represent opposite poles of endeavor, that gentleman will essay to prove, during the coming season, that he is capable of putting into a play the qualities for which he is particularly praised as a fiction writer. The play in question is "Clarence," and it represents Mr. Tarkington alone, unincumbered or unaided by the technicians of the stage. The play was written for Alfred Lunt, who has been playing the leading male rôle in "The Country Cousin" on tour, and will presently be tried out in Washington by George C. Tyler. It was this play which was recently mentioned in these columns as "the work of a well known author who desires to remain anonymous," but at the insistence of his producing office Mr. Tarkington has now lifted the veil. A paragraph of his letter to that effect is of interest:

"All right—give it out that 'Clarence' is by B. T. You might say that it was so unlike any play I'd done before that I favored anonymity for a while. I'd been thought sometimes to write for the stage 'with my tongue in my cheek,' but had only tried to learn the trade. Mr. Tyler had given me a free hand, saying: 'Go ahead—write the kind of play you'd like to, without let or hindrance on the part of man, beast, or manager, and if it shows any signs of sanity whatever I'll produce it.' B. T., you can say, proffered the script of 'Clarence,' and, though Tyler was not sure of the sanity, he waived that point and will produce. Tyler felt that a play whose principal man had to learn the saxophone to play to beetles, to see if they had ears, was a somewhat eccentric drama, to say the least, but was not disposed to split hairs in defining the word 'sanity.' You might add that B. T.'s wish for anonymity may have had some connection with this point."

Cohan and Harris will give Aaron Hoffman's new comedy, "Welcome, Stranger," a chance for its life in Baltimore next Monday. Among the players who will perform the introduction will be George Sidney, Charles D. Clark, Mabel Scott, and Florence Rierson, barricaded by a dozen more.

◆

"The Light," a play by Oscar Hammerstein II., will have its first performance in New Haven on next Monday night.

Notes

Stewart Walker began his third stock season in Indianapolis two weeks ago, and, as usual, will essay a number of productions somewhat out of the beaten stock path. George Gaul, Margaret Mower, and McKay Morris are at present of his company, and Gregory Kelly, J. M. Kerrigan, Lillian Ross, Ruth Gordon, Judith Lowry, and Beatrice Maude will join the organization next month. Still others in the troupe are Edgar Stehli, Alrich Bowker, and Elizabeth Patterson. Mr. Walker's most ambitious productions will be "Kismet," "The Darling of the Gods," and "Peter Ibbetson," and it is likely that he will also try out at least a pair of new plays.

Speaking of Gregory Kelly, that young actor has spent two seasons as the William Sylvanus Baxter of "Seventeen," and will next season be rewarded with a new character. Mr. Walker's Indianapolis announcement makes no mention of the play among the stock potentialities, but it would not be surprising if it found production there nevertheless. Mr. Kelly will be seen as Wallace Irwin's Japanese creation, Hashimura Togo of blessed magazine memory.

Just as they do in the play, Sam Bernard and Louis Mann of "Friendly Enemies," at the Hudson theater, broke off their long association last evening, Mr. Bernard retiring from the cast to rest his German dialect. He will be succeeded by Charles Winninger.

Tattle of the Tuneful

By Frederick Donaghey.

NOTHING, patently, is less topical for mid-May than next season's operas in the Auditorium, save as Mr. Campanini may send word home that he has taken something new for production or decided on something old for revival to accommodate this singer or that one. Numerous readers, however, seem to be in trouble about the operas: letters come in once that Chicago, like New York, shall emerge from the wartime ether and put Wagner back into the repertoire; and letters come in ardent protest against Chicago's doing anything of the kind. Few of the signatures to either plea indicate racial bias, and few of all the signatures, I suspect, are of persons who give the practical proof of interest in the matter that resides in subscribing for seats.

Doubtless, much more type than this will be set to waste time and paper on a profitless theme. Mr. Campanini, before he sailed, was apprised of the Metropolitan's plan to revive two of the operas, in English, and said that he would not do so. That his last experiment with Wagner did not pay has been explained in this place. Wagner was in the Metropolitan, which, with its long season, has been put to it in filling répertoire since induced by what was said to be public opinion to put aside the German pieces. Mr. Campanini's decision to do that was made known a long time previously to the Metropolitan's. As an unconscious wit once said of the protective tariff, Wagner is a local matter.

Of course, the Metropolitan's doing the operas in English text is a concession to the counterfeit patriots whose outcries were the sole basis for barring Wagner and Humperdinck after the United States went into the war. A timid suggestion to continue the operas with translated "books" was yelled down at the time. Opposition is noisy now with the argument that, even though English words be used, "the Germans will gloat and will say that we could not get along without their music." That is in most of the letters against Wagner that come to me; and it was the logic which prevailed against the use of Wagner's music this last season in the Orchestra programs. It is, as I regard it, the nadir of all argument; yet, in matters of more importance than music it has been used to thwart the natural and right impulses of the American public.

Carranza and Villa, alternately, were permitted to get away with whatever they undertook on the plea that, if we went after them, the Mexican people might misunderstand us. We did not make ready for war because, we were told, the German people might misunderstand us. A plea influentially put forward in behalf of a man convicted of murder was not that there was doubt as to his guilt, but that the Russian rebels might misunderstand us. When the A. E. F. was in sore need of guns and of the things to shoot from guns, stores of both which could not be delivered to their purchaser, Russia, were not sent for the uses of our soldiers because it was feared that Lenine and Trotzky might not understand us.

THE question of German music ought to be reduced to its value as shopware: that is, will it sell? The language is something else. I am with those who believe that its public use, in speech or print, ought to be prohibited for eternity by federal statute. It is, in the arts of entertainment, neither necessary nor esthetic. To say that it is essential to Wagner's operas is to blah! The four operas of "The Ring" are without racial or national significance; and that is true of "Parsifal" and of "Tristan," too. [These two are the operas which the Metropolitan plans to restore: Mr. Gatti-Casazza says they are "non-imperialistic," and doesn't say what he means by that.] "The Mastersingers" and "Tannhäuser" are, in the fable, Teutonic; and "Lohengrin," perhaps, can rightly be listed with them: it doesn't matter.

Nothing concerning Wagner's operas matters save the music—and not all of that, by many tortuous pages. All of the operas could be improved by cutting and revision—even "Tristan," the best of them. That the works involve precious dramatic or poetic values, in their libretti, is another fallacy. Wagner was a third-rate playwright, and a joke as a stage-director. Any practical man of the theater could better, for the purposes of drama and of performance, every one of the "books." The Bayreuth tradition is a mercantile matter—not an esthetic asset.

The English texts for the Metropolitan are to be made by H. E. Kreihbel, for nearly forty years the writer on music for the New York Tribune; and he takes a terrific awe of Wagner to the job. He put forward, many years ago, the theory that a native opera for the United States could be developed only through a sympathetic understanding of Wagner; and he is, he is saying in his paper, still of that opinion. Like most of the addicts, he has not learned that, in music, Wagner was more of a sign-post than a terminal. He did for the music of the theater what Ibsen did for the drama: he developed a logical idiom. Playwrights have bettered Ibsen's instruction; and composers have bettered Wagner's: the latter's survival will be as a melodist. The best operas of the future will be written on his formula, but on a sane scale, and with a sense of measure which was denied to him.

IF the Metropolitan were to accept a mandatory for Ravinia Park, its shadow on the north shore's season could hardly be greater. That Orville Harrold has been engaged as a Metropolitan tenor for next season was made known here some weeks ago; and he is again to be one of Ravinia's singers. Back comes Millo Picco, also, with a Metropolitan contract. He has been busy at Ravinia through three summers, with a varied répertoire, a good voice, and an eager attitude toward his rôles, whether comic, as in "The Barber," or tragic, as in "Rigoletto." He went on, some weeks ago, with Caruso in the Metropolitan's revival of "The Love of the Three Kings," and was liked so well that he was placed on the roster. Another name sent out this week by Mr. Eckstein is Louis D'Angelo's: he has been of both Ravinia and the Metropolitan for some time.

Harrold's going into the Metropolitan's roster is the belated realization of a prediction made by all who heard him when he emerged as one of Oscar Hammerstein's "discoveries." The tenor has been an in-and-outer, with a lovely natural voice and abundant opportunity, but seemingly unable until within the last year to keep his footing. He put a great deal of exquisite singing into last summer's operas out at Ravinia, and in most of them paid unwonted attention to style and to the quality of his tone throughout a performance. I have a glad memory of his singing at Des Grieux in the fragments of "Manon" which make the Ravinia version of Massenet's aristocratic piece; and in a performance of "Hoffmann," too, he came through with a distinction which suggested that it was for him to say if he cared for the big opera-houses.

A third newcomer among the women in the Ravinia casts will be Maria Winetzkaja, a mezzo-soprano. Her photographs indicate that she is comely; and Mr. Eckstein indicates that she will be useful and, in an emergency, comforting: she is in possession of a repertoire. She is to take the place in the Ravinia routine held through a number of summers by Cordelia Latham, who died last winter. Miss Winetzkaja, now in Mexico with Raisa, Edith Mason, Titto Ruffo, and Polacco, is a Russian.

"Stravinsky, one of the most eminent composers of the century, is suffering poverty. Actors have their Fund: musicians have no organized system of relief for distressed colleagues. Why not?"—Editorial in Musical America.

If the question be not mere rhetoric and the editor of Musical America really care to know, I should say that Musical America is high among the reasons, so far as the public performers in the United States are concerned. The money which is spent each season on false-alarm publicity by musicians would pension all of the necessitous among them. Actors long since learned that lesson: that is why they now have their flourishing Fund. They supported four or five trade-weeklies at one time, buying space to tell each other—for the circulation was exclusively "professional"—how good they were. The one "organ" which matters to them today is Variety; and it is realistic and on the level for all of their requirements. In time, doubtless, the musicians will copy the actors, and stop spending money in the effort to kid themselves. Their field is completely covered by two good weeklies—the Musical Leader, published in Chicago, and the Musical Courier, in New York.

The Metropolitan is in expectation of high results from a new coloratura, named Scotney; and the expectations are based largely, it seems, on the fact that she is studying with Galli-Curci's brother-in-law, who, on opportunity, urges that he be given identity as the teacher of the great Amelita. The truth is that he played the piano for Galli-Curci in her hours of private practice. To make way for the new singer, the Metropolitan has turned loose Ada Navarette, another coloratura, and, those who have heard her say, a good one. She was provided with some tentative publicity on the plea that she was a native of Yucatan, where the chicle comes from.

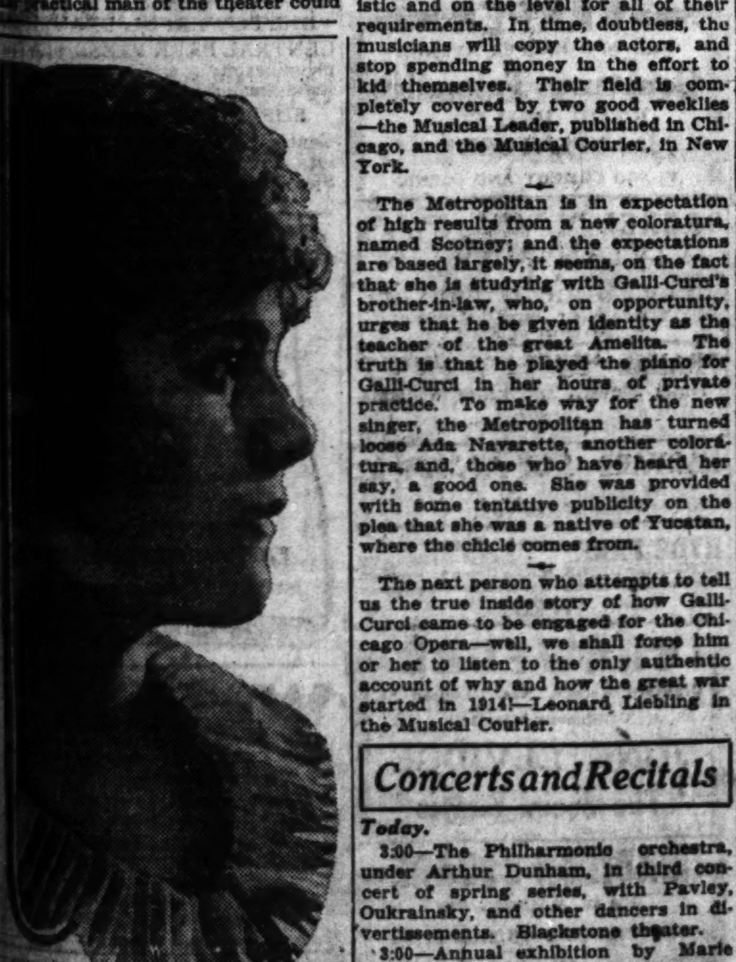
The next person who attempts to tell us the true inside story of how Galli-Curci came to be engaged for the Chicago Opera—well, we shall force him or her to listen to the only authentic account of why and how the great war started in 1914!—Leonard Liebling in the Musical Courier.



Miss Flora Sheffield IN "MOONLIGHT and HONEYSUCKLE" POWERS

Miss Sheffield, who is unaffectedly ingenuous in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" at Powers', played here not long ago in "The Man Who Stayed at Home" and in Maeterlinck's "Betrothal" in New York.

FLIES IN THE OINTMENT

By Guy F. Lee.

I should love to be a hero in a uniform, and wear
A Distinguished Service medal hung beside a Croix de Guerre;
I wouldn't even mind a limp, provided it was slight;
But I am told to get these things a fellow has to fight.

I'd be charmed to win a novelist's renown, and be the rage
In triple leaded leaders on the literary page;
But I understand it takes two years of work, and all that rot
To whittle out a volume—after one thinks up a plot.

It seems a social favorite finds living pretty fine,
With dances, parties, op'ry, nifty girls, and fizzy wine;
I'd like to "do" society, and of such splendors vaunt;
But my plebe pronunciation couldn't master "cawnt" and "shawnt."

My fondest hope has ever been a poet's name to earn,
And at my shrine have worshipers all kinds of incense burn;
But verses of this order are about my usual clip,
For woe is me, alas, alack, my muse has got the pip!

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK—[Special correspondence.]—The news that Robert Hilliard is really peeved over the treatment he is alleged to have received at the hands of George Cohan in the matter of "A Prince There Was," and has sued Mr. Cohan to recover $50,000 damages, has quite upset dear old Broadway. Both these boys, you must know, are prominent members of this club, and anything that effects them effects us.

We are so accustomed, for instance, to seeing them both in action hereabouts, and friendly, that to think of them as opponents at law is not easy. We see Mr. Hilliard at all our important gatherings, immaculate as to dress, immobile as to expression, proceeding down the aisle to his place in the first or second row, a glass of fashion and a mold of form. He is accompanied always by his own wife, which adds a touch of novelty, and she is equally smart as to costume and not as given to the loud salute and the waved greeting as are so many of her professional and semi-professional sisters.

They, turning abruptly in their seats, are quite certain to call back to their friends some rows to the rear that as soon as Billy gets the car out they are coming over, unless it happens that the part Madge is considering holds her in town. Or they rise in their places, balancing their vivid personalities against the seat edge while they wave a delsartian fin at Grace and Harry on the other side of the house, inquiring in expressive, but more or less muffled whispers how they felt the morning after the party.

The Hilliards, however, though among the most constant and widely known of our first nighters, do little acting off stage. As they pass modestly down the aisle we are informed by those who know that she was a brewer's daughter and brought Robert a nice little dowry, and that you never would believe, to look at him, that he is 60 years old if he is a day.

The Cohans are even more conspicuously inconspicuous whenever they appear in public, which is pretty regularly when George is not acting. He, of course, is still a popular idol, drawing the gaze of many admirers of every conceivable class. This impels him to pull his soft hat far down over his gray hair and to walk with his eyes held steadily to the front, seeing neither friends to the right nor panhandlers to the left, yet missing nary a thing of interest.

In the theater George Cohan is even more consciously eager to escape notice than Mr. Hilliard. Usually he goes directly to his seat, avoiding the lobby chatterers, and sinks as far into it as comfort will permit. When the firm of Cohan & Harris honors a first night en group, though married to sisters, they sit in different parts of the house, the George Cohans usually closer to the stage than the Sam Harrises. George, of course, is always pointed out by the Broadway guides to their visiting friends, and most noisily acclaimed by those given to that form of greeting. But never if he happens to see them first.

Most of the boys and girls are confident that Mr. Cohan is right in the Cohan-Hilliard matter. Not because they know anything about it, but just because. There are many, however, who hold that Mr. Hilliard may have been badly treated. It was good of G. M., of course, to rewrite "A Prince There Was," but even with an interest in the show that he purposed to conserve, did he have any moral right to write Mr. Hilliard out of it? It is not likely, however, that any such question will arise in court. The Cohan lawyers will probably insist that Mr. Cohan rewrote the comedy at the request of its owners, including Mr. Hilliard; that after it was rewritten Mr. Hilliard could not play the leading part satisfactorily to any one interested, again including Mr. Hilliard; that his withdrawal from the cast was quite voluntary and that Mr. Cohan, in "saving the show" by playing the lead himself, did both himself and Mr. Hilliard a real favor.

From the impromptu remarks of Comedian Will Morrissey the night "Toot Sweet" opened at the Princess—"Toot Sweet" being the overseas revue in which Mr. Morrissey and Elizabeth Brice have been playing for some weeks in Chicago—from Morrissey's side remarks we gather the enterprise was fairly close to a financial smashup when it was brought east. There were jokes about the failure of the pay wagon to arrive and witty references to the probable appearance of Mr. Cain's storehouse wagons the following day.

Wait and See

A dash of "mad"ness, and a little bit o' sadness, followed by a hint of future gladness. You get all three in "Wait and See," when Sam Ash sings this melodee. He does it divinely; in fact so finely, there's no denying—it's worth your buying.

On a little Farm in Normandie

In Normandie lived "sweet Marie"—the song tells how she said "oui, oui," when Brother Bill, from the U. S. A., came to chase the boche away. He liked Marie—and she liked Bill. You see, 'twas sort of a "double kill."

Anything is Nice if it Comes from Dixieland

Billy Murray knows a place where everything is nice. Darkies live there—cotton grows there—give a guess! Billy Murray knows a place where life is one sweet song. The sun shines bright—they're so polite—can't you guess? Dixieland!

"THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME."

Produced by Paramount. Directed by Hugh Ford. Presented at Orchestra hall.

THE CAST.

Mary McNeill	Katherine McDonald
Lord Raa	Jack Holt
Daniel McNeill	Theodore Roberts
Martin Conrad	Milton Sills
Alma Lier	Fritzi Brunette
Aunt Bridget	Katherine Griffith

By Mae Tinée.

"THIS makes me think of a story I wrote once upon a time," would undoubtedly be the comment made by Mr. Hall Caine were he to witness the picture adapted from his book.

You see they've merely lifted the skeleton of his story. From that they have deleted the backbone, more or less conducive of ecclesiastical argument, substituting for the same a gelatinous substance which maintains the structure without causing anybody's bristles to rise.

A woman's love for the right man and her marriage to the wrong man constitute the basis for the story. Repudiating her marriage to the wrong man—made in ignorance of what marriage really is—she proudly bears a child to the right man. And then the argument starts.

In the book the woman dies—conveniently. I don't believe the author knew what else to do with her. The picture people, however—a merry and happy-go-lucky lot—iron out wrinkles to suit themselves and marry her finally to her Martin Conrad. A more comfortable, if perhaps less logical, ending.

The picture, as a picture, is worth while. It has a delightful heroine in Miss Katherine McDonald. Do you remember her, I wonder? Her first work was done opposite Douglas Fairbanks. She was attractive then. Now, however, she has combined experience with charm and is a young woman to be reckoned with.

Mr. Sills needs no introduction. He has made love by picture route to our best known stars and never fails to get a hand from the feminine members of an audience. As Martin Conrad, the virile young explorer and lover of the gentle Mary, he is wholly satisfactory.

Then there is Jack Holt—Jack Holt, who can be hero and villain with equal facility; Theodore Roberts, always a strong character; and Fritzi Brunette. Fritzi can play the pretty and brainless and heartless better than anybody I know of.

Costuming and settings are well looked after and the photography is excellent.

So, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" makes a picture worth the seeing. But it doesn't follow the book—take my word for that!

They say that Priscilla Dean is getting better. She's been ill with pneumonia, you know.

Ruth Roland and George Larkin are fussing away on the romantic island of Santa Cruz making "sea stuff." This is for the final episodes of "The Tiger's Trail," the Pathé serial in which Miss Roland is being starred.

Elliott Dexter at last is to be starred. No more a leading man. Star! Famous Players—Lasky has signed a contract with him covering a period of some years, and William C. De Mille will direct him. At the present time Cecil De Mille is directing him in the picturization of the James M. Barrie play, "The Admirable Crichton."

Speaking of successful marriages, Lou Tellegen is to appear again with his wife, Geraldine Farrar, in Goldwyn pictures. Well, Geraldine's all right.

And we're to see Eugene O'Brien in the Selznick production "The Perfect Lover!" Dear heart——!

Harry Garson, formerly just "Clara Kimball Young's manager," but now quite a producer, has bought the Selig studio in Edendale, Cal., and will use it in his coming productions.

They say that young John Bowers, leading man for Madge Kennedy, spends all his extra time swinging a lariat. A real wild man of the west he'd be, he'd be.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

CONSTANT READER: Marguerite Clark was born Feb. 22, 1882.

J. G. F.: That's easy! Constance Talmadge was the mountain girl in D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance." You're entirely welcome.

WALTER C.: Just because Doris Blake answers questions on love you needn't think she knows all about Bessie Love. She referred your letter to me to answer. Montague Love is not the brother of Bessie Love.

THE GREATEST FURNITURE SALE OF ALL!

When we announce the "Greatest Furniture Sale of All" you know it must be EXTRAORDINARY, for our furniture sales are talked about from coast to coast. We scooped all competition by planning this tremendous furniture sale for 100,000 new customers during the month of May—the time when furniture stores are always busy and furniture is usually sold at regular prices.

Right in the midst of this activity when furniture sells fast because people need it comes "The Greatest Sale of All," and all men and women who read this will be unjust to themselves if they do not come and supply their furniture needs for a long time ahead.

Sixth Floor.

We must make it clear that these goods are to be delivered inside of thirty days. We cannot take any orders for delivery beyond that time except in case of special order goods which may require even a longer time to produce.

It must be understood, too, that these goods are not subject to cancellation, and when tagged and put away the sale must be final. This is the greatest sale of all.

Great preparations have been made to wait on customers quickly. All of the "extra" furniture men we could procure have been engaged for this sale. Come early, and take advantage of our monthly payment plan.

ART, by Eleanor Jewett

Rotary and Other Exhibitions Now at the Institute

There is a garden where by day
Long shadows linger on the grass,
And the piercing sweet of the morning lark
Fused to fragrance becomes a mass.

There is a garden where by night
The stars reflected from the sky
Fall to the pool by blossoms hedged
And in its quivering coolness lie.

The sun by day, and the moon by night—
Flowers like flames of silken sheen—
There is this garden, but who knows where?
It lies in the land of Might Have Been.

BUT, of course, on the other hand, this might have been garden might really be, just as the country which gave it birth might really exist, not as a fragmentary evidence of a painter's creative faculty, but as a perfectly solid piece of terra firma where persons might wander at will without first going to the exceedingly uncomfortable trouble of transforming their material selves into the stuff of dreams.

But though we assume, for the sake of argument, that the garden may really be a garden, yet so delicate and so lovely is it in its pictured form that lest we should discover a weed or even, perhaps, a rake and other symbols of mere matter, we greatly prefer to limit the boundaries of its beauty to a less tangible confine. So "A Sunken Garden," by Albert A. Munro, in the Rotary exhibition at the Art institute, will be atlased by us as making part of the kingdom of fancy.

There are in this Rotary exhibition several charming paintings. It is rather a pity that the exhibit should be hung as distantly as it is from the point of easiest approach by those who are interested in seeing the work of this society at its annual coming to the institute. One must wander the length of gallery 54 and pass through two large rooms before really gaining the objective. But having reached it a sense of satisfaction is felt. All the more sincere is the satisfaction because of the contrasting lack of it that met one in the preceding room, devoted to the water colors of Beal, Dougherty, Hassam, Lever, Weir, and Young.

The paintings by Gifford Beal, Childe Hassam, and J. Alden Weir that have been shown frequently during the last year or so in Chicago have acquainted us more or less with the charm and spirit that in general mark their work. Naturally the same charm and spirit are expected in the water colors. But this expectation was doomed to die a none too gentle death.

At first glance the walls given up to the water colors struck one as a blaze of uncontrolled spasms of genius gone a bit awry on the principles dominating the natural relationships existing between the various shades. At second glance this effect was a little removed, but still the suspicion lurked that for paintings of beauty there was something more to be demanded than is given in these pictures.

They have vigor, and one in particular—"Evening, New York," by Gifford Beal—is charming; but as a group, until I am more familiar with them through repetition, I cannot, catholic though my taste is for the most part in matters of art, say honestly that I care greatly for them.

To return to the Rotary exhibition, there are in that numerous interesting and attractive paintings. Look, for example, at the two striking bird pictures by H. Hintermeister Jr., "American Osprey" and "Red Shouldered Hawk"; or at "The Old Fishing Boat," by Alexander M. Hudnut; at "The Pringle House, Charleston," by Colin Campbell Cooper, and Mr. Cooper's other painting, "Edge of the Wood." "Old Houses, Vitre," by E. Lambert Cooper, is a delicate picture of color and age by the side of a sun kissed canal. Do you like "The Fight," by Walter Douglas? Personally I do, very much. The two sporting birds are so exceedingly in earnest and so really beautiful in their ruffled mood that, though I hope the fight does not come off, yet I delight in the spirit that prompts it.

"Century Club, Fifth Avenue, Red Cross Week," by Gifford Beal, is an animated scene of waving flags and warm colors. Then there are "Tall Pines," by Charles H. Richert; "Geese," by Albert Felix Schmidt; "Muskrat," by Lief Meandross; "A Trio of Dogs," by W. H. Drake; "The Water Baby," by Frances B. Comstock—a delightful imagery—and "Winter Evening," by John F. Carlson.

Because there are so many new exhibitions now open in the institute to remain on view until the middle of June, I am going to satisfy my sense of thrift by saving some of them to write of at a later date. But, not to be too careful, I think it just as well to tell in brief what the exhibitions now to be seen are, and to satisfy another feeling I have I shall devote the space I thus save to the telling of a grievance against those who plan press views of the pictures.

The exhibitions are besides the ones already mentioned, the annual exhibition of American water colors, pastels, and miniatures—this comprises some interestnig work in illuminated letters by Gerald A. Frank; pastels by Robert Henri, which are practically all landscapes with the use of autumnal coloring to the fore; water colors by Inness, the same group that was shown recently at the Arts club, but it bears a second seeing; paintings and sculpture by four artists of Taos; annual exhibitions of the Art Students' league of Chicago—an exhibition which is small and has so far not impressed me favorably; drawings in black and white by James Cady Ewell, a room of really delightful sketches; and photographs by members of the Chicago Gamera club.

So, having done my duty by this announcement, I shall proceed to gratify the slow consuming anger which press view after press view of various exhibits have kindled in my soul. Possibly those who arrange these views credit people of the press with strange faculties of perception in regard to titles of pictures and names of artists, for rarely does one at a press view receive a catalogue. Of course one can invent a title for a picture, but one can scarcely do as much for the painter, for if his name is Jones and you put him down Smith, though Smith and Jones are closely related, yet will Jones be raging-if you write him Smith, and Smith be wilder if you write him Jones.

Not always does the inventing of titles please, either. I tried it this week in looking at the drawings by Mr. Ewell. There is one lovely, graceful thing of a girl balancing on tiptoe on the broad back of a gentle mannered horse. "Polly of the Circus" suited it admirably. But as I murmured the words there came a voice behind me, "I think 'Thistledown' is a good name for that, don't you?" It was the artist himself. So of course his suggestion vetoed mine. And a catalogue would have saved me the strain of relating the rider to the circus in the first place, and in the second it would have saved Mr. Ewell the necessity of forcing verbally his conception of suitability of nomenclature upon a stranger. Not that I minded. I was glad he mentioned his preference.

In the case of the four artists of Taos there was again a lack of supplied information. Not even were the names of the painters revealed. Victor Higgins was present himself, but one scarcely liked to show more ignorance than was necessary and demand of him boldly who his confrères were. So one went to the office, a weary way, and asked there, and received this: The artists are Victor Higgins, Walter Ufer, Ernest L. Blumenschein, and A. Phimister Proctor. Which is all very well, but as the names of the paintings are still wrapped in mystery so shall my feeling for them be until a catalogue lightens the dark.

The Arts club will open an interesting exhibit of stage settings this week. It will be partly in charge of Hermann Rosse of the Art institute.

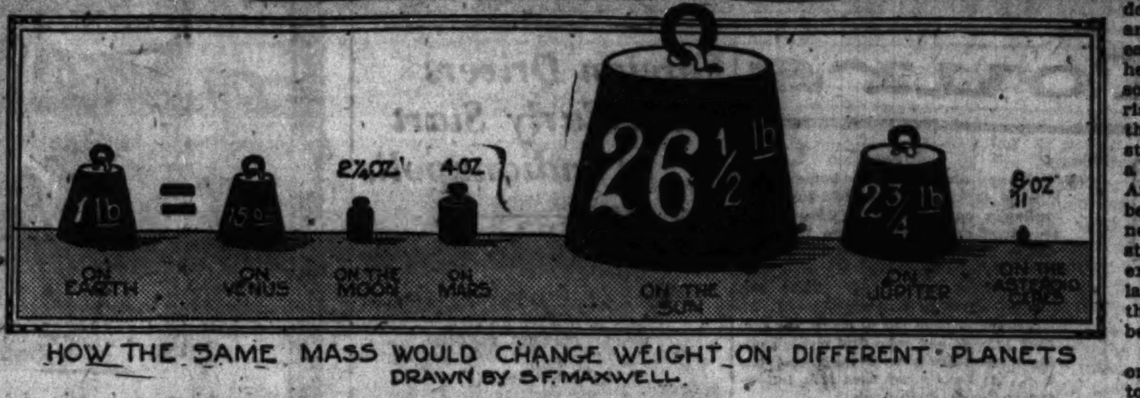
ASTRONOMY



HOW THE SAME MASS WOULD CHANGE WEIGHT ON DIFFERENT PLANETS
DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL.

GRAVITY ON THE PLANETS.

DURING the Klondike rush an express company engaged in carrying packages of gold from Alaska to Seattle experienced an unusual lawsuit. Shipments of nuggets were found to be mysteriously losing weight in transit. They were in good order when accepted and in equally good order when they arrived in the United States, even to the minutest particulars, but in some peculiar manner a small portion of the gold seemed to have vanished from each of the packages.

The owners sued the company to recover the difference and seemed in a fair way to win when the defense called in a mathematician who explained that it was not the company at all but the earth's gravity which was to blame.

Alaska, he pointed out, lies nearer the center of the globe than does Seattle because the earth is bulged toward the equator, and every object carried from Alaska to Seattle is really going uphill, farther from the center of the earth, into a zone where gravity is less and where things appear lighter. Ordinarily the difference is so slight, only about one part in 400, that it is never noticed, but gold is so valuable that it is weighed carefully, and the loss is thus detected.

This case leads to some interesting features of gravity. The higher one ascends on a mountain the less the gravity becomes, and also the deeper he descends into a mine the less the earth affects him. Gravity is at a maximum at sea level and any movement up or down decreases it.

If we could reach the center of the earth, which is, of course, out of the question, we would find that there was apparently no gravity there at all. The layers of rock all around each have their own pull of gravity and would all draw objects equally hard from all sides, and the result would be that the forces would all neutralize each other. If the earth had a considerable hollow space at its center or was an empty shell, like a tennis ball, objects on the inside would have no weight and would "stay put" anywhere, neither moving nor falling.

We are able to clearly see the effects of gravity on our nearest celestial neighbor, the moon. There are enormous volcanic craters there, some so vast than a man standing in the center could not see the edge in any direction. The radii of explosions on the moon are so large because gravity there is much less than it is here, and it is therefore harder to stop the flying fragments. An object which weighs ten pounds on the earth only weighs one and two-thirds pounds on the moon. A person who can jump from the floor to a table could, with the same expenditure of effort on the moon, jump over a house. This is because our satellite has only one-sixth gravity of the earth.

We know that all the planets possess gravity, some greater and some less than the earth. We can tell this by watching them pull their satellites about and occasionally perturb some passing comet. Gravity on Venus is almost as much as on earth, but on Mars it is much less. That planet has only one-ninth the mass of the earth, and the gravity there is only 38 per cent of what it is here.

A golfer on Mars would have other difficulties to encounter than roughs and sand traps, for a strong drive would send the ball out of sight over the horizon. On Jupiter he would find that he was almost too heavy to rise under his own weight, and on the sun, if that globe were as cool and habitable as a planet, he might drive the ball a few feet were it not for the fact that the club would be as heavy as a section of water pipe, and he himself would weigh some 4,000 pounds.

A man transported to the neighborhood of the sun could no more move than the victims of a mine disaster pinned down under tons of rock.

Gravity is responsible for a great deal of the structures that plants and animals are forced to assume here on earth. A worm can fall from any height without injury, but if a horse so much as slips on the pavement he risks breaking a leg. Mosses need only the most delicate cell structures to stand erect, but an oak tree must have a great trunk of wood to support it. Ants and spiders need no skeletons because their skins suffice for all their needs, but large creatures must have a strong, bony framework in order to exist. This is because gravity pulls large objects relatively much harder than it does small ones, and they must be made stronger to endure it.

If there ever are to be living things on the large planets they will be forced to be small in size, but in spite of this they will weigh as much and be no stronger than larger beings here.

PACKARD TRUCKS VALUED ON 100,000 MILE BASIS

Truck economy cannot be gauged by the first cost of the truck, nor by the figures of the first year's operation alone. The one conclusive test is—"What economy will the truck show in 100,000 miles of operation?"

PROBABLY the best customers for Packard trucks are the many solid, well established mercantile and manufacturing houses of America.

They have been in business for years and they expect to stay in business for years longer.

When they buy trucks—they are buying transportation. And they know that the capacity of the Packard to maintain economy in 100,000 miles of service, makes a Packard worth as much as three ordinary trucks each at half the price.

* * *

The greatest mercantile house in Chicago wrote off the value of some of its Packard trucks four years ago. These trucks are still running in first class condition.

Fifteen thousand miles a year for nine years is the average of several trucks in the service of another great department store.

What a small factor in transportation expense is the first cost of any of these trucks!

These long distance transportation records show another important thing.

They demonstrate that long life and low upkeep expense go together.

Because the same quality of engineering design and careful scientific building which makes possible upwards of 100,000 miles with a Packard truck, also keeps it on the road with the minimum of attention and grooming.

* * *

You may have occasionally heard a man say that when you buy a Packard truck you are paying for a name.

That is quite true—and a very small price it is for the insurance that the name gives you.

When Packard sells you freight transportation or passenger transportation, or even transportation by air—it is delivering to you the results of the most complete transportation engineering organization ever brought together and it furnishes the cheapest transportation per mile you can buy.

For figures see the Freight Transportation Department of your Packard Branch or Packard Distributor.

Illinois to Spend $29,000,000 on Roads in 2 Years

Builders Start Work by Changing Route of Lincoln Way

WITH the tidy sum of $29,000,000 in prospect for roadbuilding work in Illinois during the next two years, the work of constructing a state-wide highway system is getting under way at last in earnest.

From Frank I. Bennett, state director of public works, comes the definite assurance that 654 miles of "trunk line" roads comprised in the group to be built with federal aid will be under contract before July 1. Already more than 100 miles of construction work on the Lincoln and Dixie highways is in the hands of contractors. The routes from Springfield to Peoria and from Peoria to Henry, involving more than 670,000 square yards of pavement, are advertised for letting May 21, and bids on the other sections will be asked for as rapidly as the specifications can be prepared.

So motorists hereabouts who have been made pessimists by Illinois' famous mud may take heart and cheer up a bit. Interesting doings are under way—things that do not always appear on the surface, but are worth watching.

Good roads politics, for instance. The law which established the Illinois road system specified terminal points of routes, but did not lay out the exact roads to be followed. As a result, folks all over the state are besieging the highway department with pleas that the new pavements be laid on roads of their choice.

Already the best known marked trail in the country has been moved bodily out of its course through a part of Illinois. The Lincoln highway now runs north to Geneva and thence west, with a feeder route running from Chicago to Geneva. But when the state road designated as the Lincoln highway is completed it will extend west, not from Geneva, but from St. Charles, two miles north. The specifications were drawn and the contracts let that way.

Just why the change was made is not officially explained, but that the Lincoln Highway association must accept it seems to be a foregone conclusion. And if the Lincoln highway route is changed undoubtedly the same thing will happen to other established trails in the state.

In a detailed statement to members of the general assembly, explaining requests for appropriations from the road fund, the department of public works summarizes the funds now available and requested for construction work during the next two years as follows:

Federal aid roads from state and federal government	$23,856,751.37
Federal aid roads from counties	3,009,580.00
State aid roads from state....	1,009,425.50
State aid roads from counties..	1,009,425.50
Total	$28,885,182.37

"The appropriation for state aid construction available in 1917 and unexpended because of war conditions will be used on the state aid work during the present year," says the statement.

"To meet the largely increased federal appropriations if they are accepted by the state and their equivalent appropriated from the road fund it will require the greater part of the motor fees collected during the biennium.

"With these two funds we will be able to carry on construction during the next two years in all parts of the state, including every senatorial district."

With receipts on hand and not yet appropriated, the department estimates that by April 1, 1921, the automobile fees will have provided a fund of more than $14,000,000.

100.9	THE LOOP.

HERE is one of the finest short tours in the Chicago motorist's calendar—the old "century run" of bicycle days, to Elgin, Aurora and back, measuring almost exactly 100 miles. The roads out of Chicago are good, as roads hereabouts go, and the drive down the west bank of the Fox river, from Elgin to Aurora, over pavement most of the way, is one of the most beautiful in the middle west.

Starting early in the afternoon, one can easily loaf along through the country to Elgin, stop there for a soda or other appropriate refreshment, have dinner in Aurora, and drive home, with the sun at one's back, in the early evening.

The least attractive stage of the trip is the first. For a while longer we must accept the old Bloomingdale road (marked as part of the Grant highway) as the best route to Elgin, though it is somewhat the worse for wear. It is a stone road, however; easily negotiable in any kind of weather. Some time soon the new Higgins road pavement will provide a fine drive to Dundee, just north of Elgin, but this is not yet finished.

Coming back the best way lies through Naperville and Hinsdale. From Aurora this gives twenty-five miles of good gravel road and seventeen miles of pavement.

Those who wish to reduce the triangle may use the St. Charles road to St. Charles or the Lincoln highway feeder route to Geneva. Neither is in particularly good condition, but they are by no means impassable.

The Experts Say - - -

MANY motorists seem to believe that tire chains induce wear. Not if they are properly used. Without tire chains the drive wheels tend to spin around more or less on slippery surfaces. Sharp pieces of stone, cinders, and other similar material in the road cut the rubber and scrape it deeply, a condition that does not arise when the chains are in place.

The fact that ball bearings have become worn does not necessarily mean that they are a complete loss. Instead of installing a complete new set of balls, have the races trued up and put in a new set of oversize balls of the size needed.

After driving in wet weather if the car owner is careful to sponge off the tires when he returns to the garage and then wipe them dry, especially along the beads, he will do much to prevent the formation of rust. This advice is particularly applicable during the spring months of frequent and copious rains.

It frequently comes in handy to know that a little bottle of kerosene and glycerine mixed in equal parts will clear the glass of the windshield of rain drops and give clear vision ahead. This compound operates to spread the rain drops in a thin even sheet all over the surface instead of letting it stand in globules.

Foreign Drivers Get Early Start at Indianapolis

Invading Teams Already Tuning Up Cars for 500 Mile Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 17.—Unusually early preparations and practice seem to be the rule at the Indianapolis speedway this year. That the Europeans are determined to capture the 500 mile race on May 31 is evidenced by the fact that all three of the invading teams—Sunbeam of England and Peugeot and Ballot of France—already have established headquarters at the course.

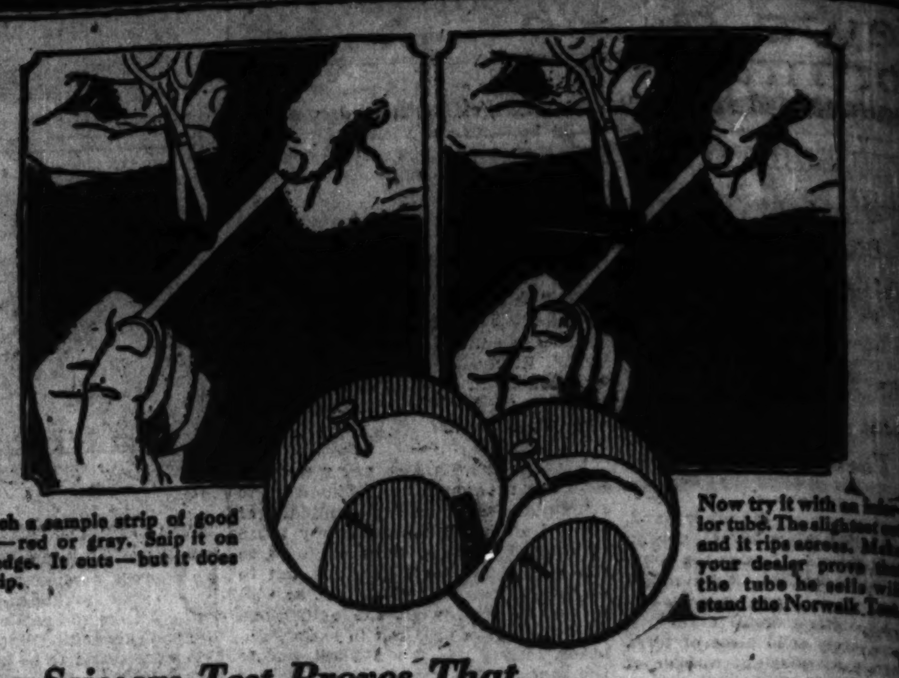
Jules Goux, winner of the 1913 classic, is busy rebuilding his Peugeot. His thoroughness is well exemplified by the manner in which he is doing this work. Not only does he use a microscope in looking for the tiniest flaws, but he also suspends each part from a piece of string, hits it with a hammer, and discards it instantly if the metal does not ring absolutely true.

Rene Thomas and Albert Guyot are assembling the new eight cylinder Ballots, the four French cars which represent an investment of $120,000. Paul Bablot and Louis Wagner, who will be teammates of Thomas and Guyot, are scheduled to arrive this week, as they sailed from Havre on May 3.

Jean Chassagne and Dario Resta are getting the Sunbeams ready for preliminary practice. They are working at high speed, realizing that a lot of warming up will be required to take the stiffness out of the motors and get the English cars tuned up to a $50,000 concert pitch.

American drivers are not loafing on the job. "Howdy" Wilcox, who seems to be the last of that tribe of Mohicans that made Indianapolis their home and once were prominent in the realm of gasoline scented competition, is out on the track daily, hopping up the Premiers. Although Howdy has not signed up as yet, it is probable that he will select the best of several cars that are now driverless.

Roscoe Sarles also has checked in from Los Angeles with the Oldfield special, which no longer resembles a huge golden egg. This freak of the last two seasons now has a narrow open body with a streamline tail of accepted design.



Stretch a sample strip of good tube—red or gray. Snip it on the edge. It cuts—but it does not rip.

Now try it with an inferior tube. The slightest cut and it rips across. Make your dealer prove that the tube he sells will stand the Norwalk Test.

The Scissors Test Proves That Norwalk Tubes Do Not Rip

NORWALK CORD

The Scissors Test

Take test strip ¼ in. by 3 in. Stretch to 9 in. or three times its original length. Cut on the edge with the scissors. The cut should not be more than ⅛ in across the sample. If the strip tears apart the rubber is inferior.

1. Neither blow-out nor puncture can destroy a tube which will not rip.
2. Cuts remain little, clean-edged holes, which can be easily repaired.
3. Norwalk Tubes are guaranteed not to rip as other tubes.

Norwalk Tubes, both red and gray, set a new standard—floating stock*.

File away a dated sample of Norwalk Tube and others and compare them at the end of a year. Norwalk Non-Skid fabric and cord Casings are just as good as Norwalk Tubes.

Things to Know When You Drive Difficult Roads

Tricks That Rob Hills, Sand and Mud of Their Terrors

BY HIGH SPEED.

THOUSANDS of motorists this year will drive from their accustomed and familiar territory to strange places where the topographical conditions are unfamiliar to them and where they may encounter roads and road conditions never before met. Some advice on driving under various conditions will be helpful.

Though it is generally known by the experienced motorist that if a hill is too steep for even first gear the reverse may be used, the first time owner may give up in despair and try another road without a steep grade. The reverse of every car is geared lower than first, hence if the car cannot pull on low because of the steepness of the hill or lack of power, the driver can back up the hill. It must be done slowly, of course, and a very watchful eye kept for oncoming cars.

In ascending grades always keep to the extreme right. This should be done always, of course, but on grades cars coming down usually travel at speed and the driver takes a little more road room than usual. It will be found safer also if there is a turn on the grade.

In descending a grade various resistances may be used to keep the car in check and save brake lining. In some cases the grades are so steep that if the driver were to use the brakes alone to retard the car's movement the lining would be burned when the bottom of the grade is reached.

The driver should remember that shifting to a lower gear always throws in engine resistance. Hence on low gear there is the greatest resistance obtainable. If the ignition is switched off, then the rear wheels turn over the engine and further resistance is thrown in. Opening the throttle introduces a little more.

The brakes should be used only if the resistances mentioned are insufficient to prevent the car from attaining a dangerous speed.

Sandy roads baffle the owner who is accustomed to driving in sections where no such roads exist. The light car takes the sand easier than the heavy car, but both may find difficulty if the sand is very loose. If the sandy stretch is quite long and looks dangerous the tires may be wrapped with burlap and if this is not at hand rope will do. Deflating the tires is often all that is necessary.

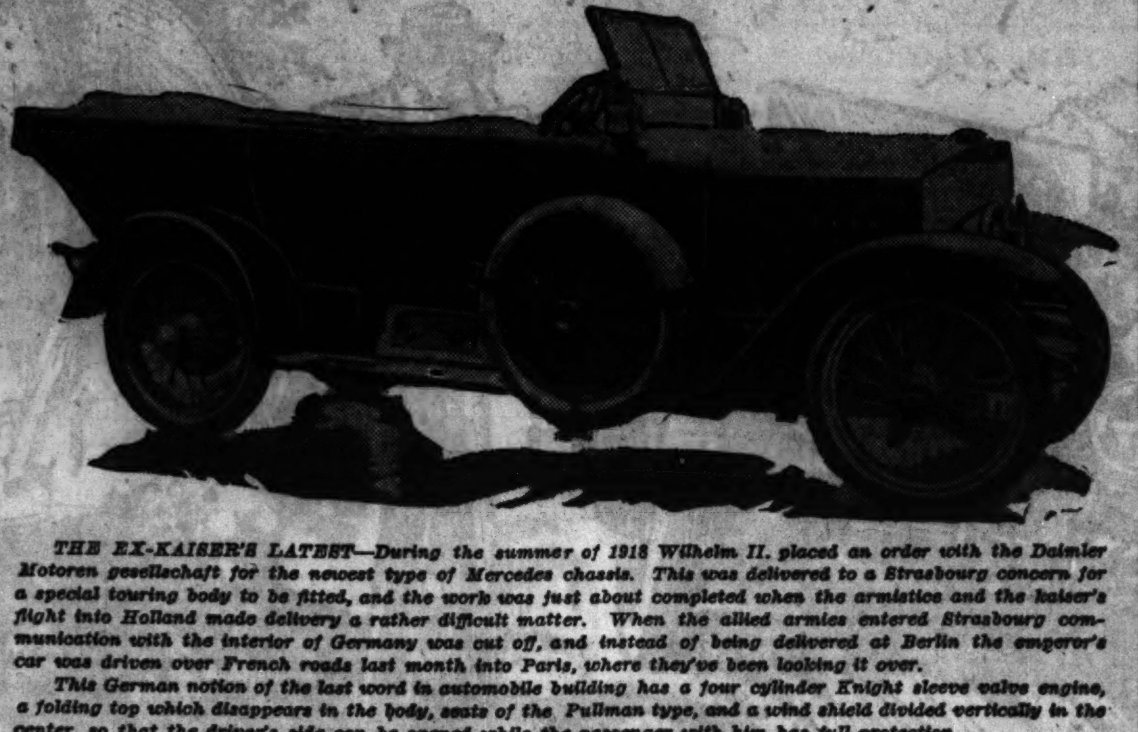
Once a car is stuck in sand it is useless to try to get it out by spinning the rear wheels. This only causes them to dig deeper into the sand. If no progress is made on the first trial, shift to neutral and get busy at the rear wheels. Boards, if they are obtainable, are excellent in allowing the rear wheels to grip. The boards should be placed at the rear of the tires and the car reversed out of the difficulty.

In approaching a sandy spot it is best to speed up a little, holding the steering wheel firmly so as to be prepared for an emergency. In sand the steering wheels are a little hard to control.

Muddy roads are negotiated in the same way as sandy ones, though usually tire chains will pull a car through mud that is not too deep. The mud road as usually found is not soft for many inches down so that if the car sinks the chains will probably take hold on the firmer ground underneath the mud. The market now affords a number of devices which may be attached to the rear wheels to enable the car to travel over almost any kind of road. In one instance the device allows the car to sink just enough to clear the axles.

One of the very handy devices for the tourist who expects to meet some bad roads and get into difficulty, is an extractor of some sort. This is the last resort device which may be handled by one man to pull the car out of deep mud or sand. Block and tackle is the common device, but there are many special ones on the market made for the automobile tourist.

In addition to observing the simple rules mentioned the motorist will do well to make an investigation of the road conditions in the section of the country in which he expects to drive. The road books are of course helpful, but they cannot be expected to indicate road conditions months after they have been published.



THE EX-KAISER'S LATEST—During the summer of 1918 Wilhelm II. placed an order with the Daimler Motoren gesellschaft for the newest type of Mercedes chassis. This was delivered to a Strasbourg concern for a special touring body to be fitted, and the work was just about completed when the armistice and the kaiser's flight into Holland made delivery a rather difficult matter. When the allied armies entered Strasbourg communication with the interior of Germany was cut off, and instead of being delivered at Berlin the emperor's car was driven over French roads last month into Paris, where they've been looking it over.

This German notion of the last word in automobile building has a four cylinder Knight sleeve valve engine, a folding top which disappears in the body, seats of the Pullman type, and a wind shield divided vertically in the center, so that the driver's side can be opened while the passenger with him has full protection.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS - - By High Speed

Please advise through your column the shortest and best route from Delavan, Wis., to Minneapolis. I want to make the trip about the middle of June.

J. E. KOEHSEL, Delavan, Wis.

The shortest route [through Madison and La Crosse] is not the best. You will find better roads if you drive north through Oconomowoc, Waupun, Berlin, and Waupaca to Birnamwood, then go west through Wausau to Abbottsford and follow the Yellowstone trail from Abbottsford through Eau Claire, Menomonie, and St. Paul to Minneapolis.

Please tell me the best route, possible condition of roads, and distance between Cedar Rapids, Ia., Yellowstone, Park, Butte, Mont., and Los Angeles, Cal., starting about July 15.

W. W. Y., Palo, Ia.

There are several ways of making such a trip. If you wish to follow the roads that are most traveled, drive west on the Lincoln highway through Marshalltown, Boone, Denison, Omaha, Neb., Grand Island, North Platte, Cheyenne, Wyo., and Laramie to Medicine Bow. Then go north to Casper and northwest through Thermopolis and Cody to Yellowstone park. After driving through the park you can leave it by the northern exit at Gardiner, Mont., and go through Bozeman to Butte. Then turn back south from Butte and go through St. Anthony, Idaho; Pocatello and Ogden, Utah, to Salt Lake City. Here you will pick up the markers of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which indicate the route all the way through Ely, Nev.; Tonopah, Bigpine, Cal., and Mojave to Los Angeles. As to roads, the trip will take you over virtually every kind to be found in the country, from the best to the worst, through mountains, deserts, sand and mud. The distance from Cedar Rapids to Butte by this route is 1,562 miles; from Butte to Los Angeles 1,470 miles.

Please tell me through your columns the shortest practicable route from Beloit, Wis., to Kansas City; also from Rockford, Ill., to Wichita, Kas., by way of Omaha, Neb.

MRS. JAMES WAY, Beloit, Wis.

For Kansas City, go through Rockford, Dixon, Sterling, Moline, Davenport, Ia.; Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Centerville, Allerton, Princeton, Mo.; Chillicothe, and Excelsior Springs to Kansas City. For Wichita, go to Dixon and follow the Lincoln highway through Sterling, Clinton, Ia.; Cedar Rapids, Marshalltown, Boone, and Denison to Omaha; then turn south through Lincoln, Neb.; Manhattan, Kas.; Salina, and Newton to Wichita.

Can you tell me where I may get road maps of Berrien, Cass, and Van Buren counties, in Michigan?

W. F. S., Chicago.

Write to the county highway superintendents at St. Joseph, Cassopolis, and Paw Paw.

Please advise me as to the best motor route to Leipsic, O.

FRANK B. MCKEEN, Chicago.

Go through East Chicago, Gary, Michigan City, South Bend, and Elkhart to Goshen. Then follow the direct road east from Goshen through the towns of La Grange and Angola to Montpelier, O. From Montpelier drive southeast through Bryan and Defiance to Leipsic.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

A price reduction of $225 has been made in the seven passenger Hudson, with other body types reduced on a corresponding scale. Several mechanical refinements in matters of detail have been made in the new models, which have just appeared.

Walter E. Flanders' expected resignation as president of the Maxwell Motor company was announced last week.

A new corporation, to be known as the Wisconsin Parts company, has been formed in Oshkosh, Wis., to develop the manufacture of Wisconsin axles. It is headed by W. F. Rockwell, formerly vice president in charge of engineering and production of the Torbenson Axle company.

Seven passenger Fords are beginning to appear from the shops of the McIntyre Motor Product company of Chicago. The concern has worked out a method of adding eighteen inches to the body length and wheelbase of an ordinary Ford by inserting an extension, without affecting the machine mechanically. The advantages of better riding qualities and improved appearance are claimed in addition to the obvious one of increased passenger carrying capacity.

JOTTINGS

REPORTS concerning a possible combination of the Nash Motors company with several other large concerns were denied last week by C. W. Nash, president of the company. "There is no possibility of the Nash Motors company becoming a subsidiary of any other company in the motor car industry," said Mr. Nash. "I have no criticism of the prevalent tendency toward mergers, but nothing could induce the Nash company to enter one. If we should go into the field for other plants the resulting expansion would be under the control of the Nash Motors company."

The Elgin Motor Car Sales company, headed by Frank Shaw as president, has been organized to take over the distribution of the Elgin in the Chicago territory, succeeding the factory branch hitherto maintained here. H. A. Wehmeier, formerly identified with the sale of the Paige, Buick, and Maxwell, will be in active charge of the concern's affairs as general manager.

Another change on "motor row" involves the appointment of the Iron City Motors company as distributors of the King in portions of Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, and Wisconsin. The concern has been for several months Chicago representative for the Stewart motor truck.

The Trailer Manufacturers' association of America has opened headquarters at 110 West Fortieth street, New York.

Built for service
-Backed by service

Among other reasons why you should choose SERVICE Motor Trucks is that they are backed by unusual service. "Here before 9 P. M., away by 8 A. M."—that's real service. Every service man is within telephone call, day or night, ready to meet any emergency.

The only truck that earns money is the truck that keeps "on the go." Our repair men never let a SERVICE truck stay in the "shop" an hour longer than necessary—and the work is always done right no matter how big or how little the job.

We'll loan you an engine, carburetor, magneto, wheel or any part of the truck, so that your truck need never be idle a day. "Here before 9 P. M.—away by 8 A. M." is a reality with SERVICE drivers.

Ask any Service owner or driver what he thinks of Service service

—then make comparisons. Choose your truck according to the verdict. The truck to buy is the truck that carries with its sale the greatest assurance of prompt and efficient maintenance service.

SERVICE Motor Trucks are built in sizes to meet every hauling requirement. All models have the incomparable worm drive—the drive that never wears out.

The Most Welcome Tire
That Ever Came to Market

Men Who Appreciate Superlative Values Prefer The Brunswick

In every great tire factory, the chief question is: "How much can we give for the money?" And the product depends on the policy adopted.

Every man who has become acquainted with Brunswick Tires knows that Brunswick standards are again evident. This famous concern—noted as a leader in every line it entered since 1845—has once more proved that its policy is right.

A perfect tire is simply a matter of knowledge and standards and skill. No secrets nor patents prevent making an ideal tire.

But standards come first. For in tire making there is vast room for skimping, for subtle economies, for hidden shortcomings. Makers without the highest standards don't build high-grade tires.

The Brunswick organization of tire makers includes a brilliant staff of technical experts. Not a man among them has spent less than 20 years in handling rubber.

Each is a master of his craft. And the new ideas they bring to the attention of Brunswick directors receive sincere consideration.

Every proved betterment is adopted unanimously.

The result is a super-tire, the like of which you have never known before. The kind of a tire you will gladly join in welcoming.

Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires.

Try ONE Brunswick. We promise a surprise. And we feel certain that you will want ALL Brunswicks.

Then good tires will have a new meaning to you.

No More Punctures or Blowouts

If there is one motorist who can least afford to suffer tire failures, it is the doctor.

Human life and a reputation which probably took years of hard work to build are risked every day by a puncture or blowout. It's the one thing that has made hundreds of doctors and others hesitate about buying a car.

Tire Troubles No Longer Necessary

Punctures and blowouts no longer have any excuse for existence—doctors and others to whom time is precious are adopting ESSENKAY, the BETTER-THAN-AIR TIRE FILLER.

Over 75,000 Users

ESSENKAY is the final solution to the tire problem. No air is used, therefore no inner tubes. It is a flexible, highly resilent material that looks like rubber, possesses practically all the desirable characteristics of rubber, yet actually contains no rubber in any form, therefore none of its imperfections. Over 20,000 new users have replaced air with ESSENKAY in their tires during the past few months.

First Cost—Last Cost

ESSENKAY is an investment, not an expense. When ESSENKAY filled tires are worn down to the last layer of fabric, the old tire may be discarded and the same ESSENKAY transferred to a new casing. ESSENKAY is now in use on thousands of pleasure cars, trucks, converted trucks and tractors. Many municipalities, departments of Government, newspapers, etc., have increased truck and delivery efficiency to 100% and proved that first cost is last cost.

ESSENKAY WEEK

All over America "ESSENKAY Week," May 28th to June 3d, will be observed as a national event, centering the interest of millions of motorists on ESSENKAY, the Better-Than-Air Tire Filler. Over 75,000 users of ESSENKAY and hundreds of ESSENKAY Dealers and Distributors will take an enthusiastic part in "ESSENKAY Week." Ask your nearest dealer, or write us direct for particulars of this big national event.

FREE TRIAL Offer

ESSENKAY is installed by us on FREE TRIAL. We ask you to test it in your tires under your own loading and road conditions. If your passenger car carries five people, crowd in eight. If your truck carries a ton, put on two tons. Ride over smooth roads, then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sandy country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor to prove that ESSENKAY does not flatten. Then—if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air—that it will end your tire trouble—that you will no longer be bothered with punctures, blowouts or slow leaks—that ESSENKAY will not flatten, crumble or deteriorate—return it—THE TEST WILL COST YOU NOTHING.
